Speaking Of Non-Marital Marriages

By Ron Ehemann

Not too very long ago, the man I lived with was hospitalized. While visiting him one day, I tried to find his doctor but was unable to locate him. I asked the nursing supervisor to page the doctor and she asked if I was the "immediate family."

"I'm his lover," I replied.

Though she paged him, I suspect it was more from the shock of my answer than because she considered me "immediate family."

What status should lovers have? It's an interesting question to be sure. Presently, no state in the Union recognizes any legal relationship between lovers. Various lawsuits have attempted to define non-marital marriages, but few have been successful.

California's Marvin vs. Marvin established that states recognition of alternative marriages by awarding Lee Marvin's lover the equivalent of alimony. But the notion of palimony hasn't gotten very far. Mr. Marvin is appealing and to date, no other state has followed suit. A subsequent case in Illinois (Hewitt vs. Hewitt) with similar facts was flatly rejected.

So if lovers aren't married, what are they? Maybe nothing.

The city of San Francisco has a gay rights ordinance which prohibits discrimination based on sexual orientation. California has a law forbidding discrimination based on marital status. Given those laws, if you employer provides funeral leave benefits after the death of an immediate family member, does the death of your lover qualify?

Southern Pacific, a huge California-based corporation, says no. Lawrence Brinkin, a Southern Pacific employee, says yes. Brinkin's lover of 11 years died, and Brinkin lost eight days of work while in mourning. Though I wouldn't want to gamble on how the courts will decide this one, it does strike me as biased that a company will pay a husband (though only married one day), yet refuse a lover (though "married" eleven years).

Brinkin's attorney says Southern Pacific violated his client's rights by discriminating on the basis of sexual orientation and marital status as well as violating his right to privacy. That attorney who drafted San Francisco's gay rights ordinance, also plans on challenging a county rule which grants access to public housing via marital status as well as a ruling which denies unemployment compensation to people who leave the state when their lover's employment is transferred.

Though I basically agree with the suit against Southern Pacific, it is arguable that the corporation isn't discriminating, but rather the state of California is. After all, it is the state which has the authority to sanction the lover relationship, and it is the state which refuses to do so.

Presently, there are several things lovers can do to imitate the legalities of marriage. Wills and creative property ownership can guarantee your lover's status after you're gone. A power of attorney will vest lover's rights to such diverse things as determining your medical treatment and handling your business transactions. Cohabitation contracts may be substituted for marital property rights. But nothing will grant a lover legal status equivalent to marriage, except a change in state laws.

How realistic is that? Who knows? Few of our current political leaders are apt to sponsor amendments to the marriage act, and courts have refused to find any inherent right to marry.

Many people will argue that we shouldn't look for changes to allow gay marriages. They feel marriage might bring as many bad things as good. There may be some marital benefits to gain such as funeral pay, social security and travel discounts, but with marriage also come costs. Married people seldom fare as well as singles on income tax (though this will change when the Economic Recovery Act takes effect.) Married people tend to suffer much more difficult divorces (though some argue that that knowledge tends to make the commitment of marriage stronger.)

My personal opinion is that legal marriages ought to be available to those who desire them. Nothing would require marriage, but for those who opt to take the step, it would be available. That availability would resolve all Southern Pacific cases. If you opted to marry your lover, you'd be entitled to benefits.

Despite official U.S. Census figures indicating that less than one-half of the

Think Pieces

By Jon-Henri Damski

Jamie, 19, was a quiet guy with soft features. But a month ago he did a very hard, noisy thing to himself. At his folk's home in Barrington Hills, while listening to the "Eye of the Tiger" on his headphones, Jamie walked into his father's game room, pulled a gun from the shelf, loaded it, put it in his mouth, and blew himself away. He was not a survivor.

He wrote a note telling his folks it was not their fault. The pain was too much. He also told them to give his things to Leon to pass out to the other kids.

Who is Leon? Leon is a 41-year-old man who works, "manages" a video game emporium. His relationship to Jamie? None. He just knew Jamie as that quiet kid who sometimes scored 84,000 on Asteroids. The kid he had talked to about "Tron." The kid no one could reach. Jamie's mother, a manager of a suburban bank, knew Jamie was going through a difficult passage, but he would come out of it. He did stay in his room a lot and he was always hooked into his music. But kids grow out of that. Sure, the other kids teased him a lot in school. He had all of their equipment, but was no sport: he played in none of their games. He gave his skis and mitts and balls away to strangers.

They used to tease him on the bus coming home. He would just come in slam all the doors in the house and go to his room. He never talked about it, to his sister or anyone. He was a gentle soul. He never fought back.

Jamie's father, who works for the county, hated grounding him. But he had been told: either keep your grades up, get your own money or you can't go out every night playing games.

Jamie was their first born son, they did everything for him. He seemed not to care for their material things. He gave everything away, to anyone who would ask. He never got into the spirit of being materialistic.

Kids at school were perplexed by Jamie's generosity. He was such a soft touch: if you liked his hiking boots he would give them to you. He gave away his calculator to a kid in his math class. They teased him, but they never meant him any harm. They just wanted him to watch out for himself.

Was Jamie "gay"? Some openly gay kids in his class thought so. But openly gay people are often too quick to impose their way on everyone else. Jamie was shy, inward, a pastel spirit, more soft than effeminate, but you could not say he was gay because of his fay disposition. Jamie never "came out" anything, he never materialized.

He liked his games and his tapes. He would buy all the latest cassettes, record what he liked, and then give the new cassettes to anyone who happened to be around. His mother let me play his last tape and it was Side "A" had "Eye of the Tiger", Frank and Moon Zappa's "Valley Girl", selections from the Kinks tour, Simple Mind's "This Earth That You Walk Upon", Tom Verlaine's "Word's From the Front", "Coming Apart", "Days on the Mountain", and Peter Baumann's "Realtimes" and Repeat, Repeat". Side "B": Donna Summer, "Love Is In Control", Diana Ross' "Work That Body", Stevie Wonder's "Pushin' Too Hard"; the only unusual sequence, "Eye of the Tiger" repeated three times, and ends with the Police's "Spirits In the Material World".

His mother says that Jamie wore his headphones everywhere, even to bed. Once on a trip to Lake Geneva his batteries went dead and he threw a fit; his mother said: "You would have thought he had lost his air supply".

No one ever recalls having a sex or drug experience with Jamie. He did, however, have one dangerous habit. When he was younger his parents did not want him to drink. So he went to their liquor cabinet and took less than a shot out of each bottle that was there so they would never notice any liquor missing. He called the mixture his "Suicide Drink".

Jamie's only other passion outside his tapes were video games. He would spend six to ten hours a night playing Asteroids and Space Shuttle at Leon's emporium. For Jamie, the noisy ghosts in those machines used to come alive.

Leon says he has never seen a kid get so intimate with a machine. Jamie and his machine would vibrate together like they were dance partners. "Jamie gave his body to that fucking machine —if that machine had been another person, they could have arrested him on a morals charge."

Leon is gay. But he never laid a hand on Jamie or any other kid that comes to his emporium. Hiss boss knows he is gay and thinks that's good because he won't bother the girls. And if he as much as "talks funny" to a boy, it's his job. Leon takes a lie detector test twice a year.

As Leon told me: "A guy like me working with kids has to watch himself. It's made me cold and impersonal. When I heard about Jamie I was not surprised. I felt a hopeless chill. He was such a gentle spirit. He didn't belong in this world.

"Sure, I used to watch him at his machine. I wanted to go over and hug him and ask him home. I wanted to Daddy him and love him and help him through. But they would of had my job. They would of called me a "child molester". I know the score, I keep my distance from these kids. If they don't get love at home, that's not my fault—I can't give them love here either.

"Did you read Newsweek this week? They want every guy who works with kids to take a special test, and if he shows up "homo" don't let him even work around kids. They think everyone is a child molester just because they can't love their kids. I mean, you don't want to love your kids, so send them out of the house, send them to see "E.T."—that bug-eyed Buddah from outer space. The kids in "E.T." can say "penis breath" and pinch Eliot's mother on the ass, but in real life if I tell a kid I want to hug him or that I love him, wam bam, I'm locked up for dirty talk as a child molester. So our young Jamie's have to be satisfied by movie fantasies, with celluloid pedophiles like E.T."

Leon has a point. Jamie left earth unloved, but not unwanted. He was a spirit who could not materialize himself in this material world. ©Jon-Henri Damski starting gradually on Fire Island, one of the last remaining bastions of the conventional disco sounds of the 1970's.

"Where anything other than disco was a dirty word, DJ's are now showing the courage to incorporate elements of r&b, jazz and even rock into their dance music catalogs," he says.

Martino sees the trend as one born out of a will to survive. "The diehards are realizing that the time has come to change to a new musical groove, or to miss the dance music boat entirely."

Martino sees an irony in the fact that Fire Island, long regarded as a leader in entertainment trends, is placed in the role of follower for a change. However, he is philosophical. "We created the (disco) monster," he says, "and now we must lay it to rest. Heavy duty disco is passing into history, and we must adapt to the changing (musical) environment or lose our audiences."

Martino discloses that fearful of losing their loyal followers, disco DJ's on Fire Island began introducing the "new" music on an experimental basis with great trepidation. "They were encouraged when their audiences responded with standing ovations," says Martino.

"By their responses the audiences made it clear that they did not want to continue to go out dancing and feel as though they

My column this week is a reprint of an article in the July 24th issue of Billboard Magazine. It's topic is one confronting many club DJ's & their patrons. The move from conventional "disco" to "dance music" (in all it's forms) is one I strongly support, and this article says it the best.

NEW YORK—Diehard disco DJ's who have clung defiantly to the disco music format in spite of the general trend toward more progressive dance music sounds, are finally conceding that change is indeed essential to the long range survival of the dance music industry.

So says Tony Martino, independent music director of such clubs as the Red Parrot in New York City, and the Fire Island Pavillion on the resort island of the same name.

According to Martino, onetime owner of 12 West, one of the most popular discotheques in New York City, the trend is

Speaking of Stars

by Tycho

For the week of August 26

ARIES (March 21-April 20)-Don't get lost in your own thoughts and desires. Need can turn to greed if you don't pay attention. What if the noise of your ambition kept you from hearing that beautiful knock on the door of your heart?

TAURUS (April 21-May 20)-Thinking about starting over, trying again, reconciliations? It's a good time for it. You know what you want this time, and you're willing to make some important changes in order to get it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)-Your self-improvement project is going great. Congratulations! Just keep on examining feelings of guilt and inferiority. Share your deepest secrets with those helping you. Get it all out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)-Someone from your past wants to press your present buttons this week. Just let that person know where you are, and go charging ahead. You should find some new thrills and excitement.

LEO (July 23-August 22)-That lovelight shining in your eyes could be reflected right back by someone younger. Stay open to possibilities, but don't make any promises. This is a week of strong, but transient feelings.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22)- You're coming on strong. This is your time and season, and there's no stopping you now. You're like a magnet, attracting all kinds of people, so don't let the bizarre put you off.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22)-Get out of town before it's too late, my love. You're getting dull, even to yourself. If only for a day or two, you need a change of scene to get back on track. Relax. Recharge.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21)-Creative construction is the key this week. Whether you're fashioning a gourmet dinner this week or a new love affair, you'll be able to make something special of it. Love makes simple ingredients go a long way.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21)-Heart and mind are out of synch. You'll find yourself saying things you don't really feel, and feelings you can't put into words. Watch your friends' reactions, and apologize for the hurts you cause.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19)-Much fun with the main hunk in your life goes a long way in relieving tensions that build up in your work. Pleasure for the sake of escape takes on new meanings. Hot nights . . .

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18)-First you want one thing, then another. First a friend, then a lover. You can't quite make up your mind. Perhaps you're too analytical in an area where analysis has little value.

PISCES (February 19-March 20)-Give serious thought to any sudden moves. The urge to change homes, lovers, jobs, is strong. Have a party instead. An unusual assortment of friends or a strange combination of people may help find some answers.

donated to help send the winner to the Gay Softball World Series in San Francisco. All players and fans of the SSBL are encouraged to join in on the fun and celebration. Another benefit to help support Milwaukee's team will be an auction held on Sunday, Aug. 22 at the Wreck Room at 10:00. Anyone having anything to donate to this benefit can drop it off at the Wreck Room. Come out that evening and pick up some great bargains. SUPPORT MILWAUKEE AND THE SSBL.

Over 60 people participated in a scotch doubles tournament on Sat., Aug. 7 at Landmark Lanes. The tournament, held as a promotion for HIT, attracted bowlers from Chicago, Louisville, Minneapolis, and Milwaukee. Jim Flora and David Fre took first place in the tournament, while Bob Whalley teamed with Mike Jones of Louisville to take 2nd place. Paul Rojas and Mel Krist of Chicago finished 3rd.

The regular season of the SSBL ended on Aug. 7 with no great surprises. The 4 teams heading for the play-offs all won their games. The WR Spurs and Chaps, Factory, and C'est La Vie all won doubleheaders, while Finale and YP won single games. The play-offs will be held on Saturday and Sunday, August 14 and 15, starting at 1:00 both days. In the first round, Division 1 champion WR Chaps will take on Division 2 runner-up Finale, while Division 2 champion YP will square off against the Factory. The 2 losers will meet at 2:30, while the 2 winners will play at 4:00. Action will resume on Sunday with the semi-final game at 1:00, and the finals at 2:30. Games will be at Mitchell Park, so come on out and cheer on your favorite team. After the final game on Sunday, August 15, at about 4:00, a post game party and benefit will be held at the Factory. Proceeds from the bar are being

Speaking of Stars

by Tycho

For the week of August 19

ARIES (March 21-April 20)-The ram's hooves are planted firm on the ground, but his head ranges high above the clouds to a world of fantasy and dreams. What was exotic and mystifying last week is more easily understood now.

TAURUS (April 21-May 20)-Your words have that magic touch, so be careful who you're talking to when you whisper of love and lust. You could tell anyone anything and they'd believe it. Say those sexy things you love to say, but be sure you mean them!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)-Self improvement week. You can clear out the cobwebs of the past and figure out what's bugging your present if you sit down and talk it all out. September can be a super month if you take care of business now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)-All that support you got which made you feel like Number One last week has grown into the confidence you need to go after what you want. Share your future plans with the one you want to share the future with.

LEO (July 23-August 22)-Trying to impress the impressionable can give the wrong impression. As good as you feel about yourself, don't brag; it's confusing to the braggees. Be clear. Be specific. Be quietly authoritative.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22)- Coordinate. Combine. Get it all together. Whether it's a family reunion or an orgy you're thinking of, your talent this week is thinking about who or what goes together and seeing that it's done.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22)-You feel like the master of your fate; no matter what the ill winds blow your way, you know where you are and what you're doing. Don't take anything for granted, though. Share your surety with your mate.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21)-Don't let your mind work overtime at the expense of your body. Take care of it. Be good to it. You do have a lot to think about, but don't forget to think about you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21)-Picky, picky! Everything has to be just right. That's OK, but don't be so obsessed by every little thing that you miss out on the big picture. By the way, a part of that picture should be a little romance.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19)-What a windup! You Capricorns can be so silly! You've taken all that you discovered last week and made jokes of it. Trickster, teaser, practical joker, your friends will enjoy this lighter side you show.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18)-Most of the signs are working overtime this week, but none more than yours. The advantage is in your ability to seek out others for help. Knowing whom you can trust and rely on make all the difference.

PISCES (February 19-March 20)-Are all the old wives' tales true? Can sex make you blind? It just be that way for you this week if you don't get you're head out of the clouds and down to earth. Realism, Pisces, realism.
