12th World AIDS Conference Sharon Dixon

AIDS Researchers Begin and End on Somber Notes

by Keith Clark of the In Step Staff

т тпе тп этер этапт

Geneva — The 12th World AIDS Conference opened and closed in Geneva on somber notes as participants recognized that a cure for the disease is further away than had been previous believed and that even some recent promising progress in battling the global epidemic isn't as impressive as scientists had first hoped in combating the disease.

The 13,000 or so people attending the conference in Geneva were faced with the grim reality that the epidemic is spreading rapidly to new areas of the world and that prospects for eradicating the disease in the near future are slim at best. Since the last global AIDS conference in Vancouver two years ago, U.N. statistics indicate that the number of people infected with HIV has increased by about 10 million, and in two more years an estimated 40 million people globally will be infected.

Dr. Peter Piot, head of UN-AIDS, calls this a "collective failure of the world" and says infection rates do not have to go up, pointing to examples of many industrialized nations and a few developing nations where the spread of HIV has leveled off.

"If a country like Uganda, if northern Tanzania, if Senegal, if Thailand can bring new infections down," Piot said, "why can't other countries do the same thing? And that's a matter of a combination of political will, of putting HIV on the societal and development agenda, and also freeing up resources."

There were, to be sure, some reports of progress and promise at the conference. The U.N. says it will soon launch an 11-country project aimed at providing shortterm treatment of some 30,000 HIV-positive pregnant women to help reduce the number of infected newborns.

Researchers also reported on new, highly simplified medication combinations that can reduce the number and complexity — of medicines patients have to take from the sometimes 20 or so to only two or three pills daily, improving the chances that patients will be able to stick to their medical regimens — and thereby improve their chances of fighting off the infection.

One report on a new combination of drugs indicated that a regimen combining DuPont's Sustiva (expected to be approved in the U.S. later this year) with a twice-daily pill known as Combivir, which is manufactured by Glaxo Wellcome, and two standard anti-HIV drugs, AZT and 3TC, was as effective in fighting HIV as the highly publicized protease inhibitors. each other," Goudsmit said. "Viruses go for fast spread, so these recombinants might occur because of more efficient spread. It has to do with the fact that the virus has an enormous capacity as we can see to change its coat, to change all elements of its genes."

Goudsmit said the new HIV strains are showing up in people who are probably infected by two different strains within a short period of time. The different strains exchange genetic material and the variations are then transmitted to others. He said individuals who share dirty injection drug needles or who regularly have multiple sexual partners are the most likely to be targets where the new strains could develop because they are more likely to be exposed to several strains in a brief period of time.

In another report, researchers said they had also identified the first two cases of HIV strains that are resistant to reverse transcriptase inhibitors and to protease inhibitors, the main medical weapons to fight off the virus.

And while delegates at the conference endorsed a push for increasing the number of needle-exchanges around the world in an effort to curb the spread of HIV among IV drug users, the call sounded slightly hollow to many who noted that even the Clinton Administration lacked the political will to act on the recommendations of AIDS researchers for such programs in the U.S.

Long-Term Benefits Protease Inhibitors Questioned

Two years ago in Vancouver researchers hoped that the then new protease inhibitors would amount of a virtual "homerun" in knocking out the virus eventually. Early reports indicated the drugs had reduced the viral load to undetectable levels, and many researchers hoped that this would in fact mean the virus was being eliminated entirely from the patients' systems.

But after two full years of widespread use in the U.S. and other industrialized countries, it's clear that HIV is a tenacious virus and continues to persist in the body despite this onslaught of potent new medicines.

Reports this year showed that minute amounts of the virus remain, disabling immune cells that are supposed to fight infections. So researchers are now faced with the question of whether patients can be kept on the complex and costly drug therapies for prolonged periods of time in the hope of completely eradicating the virus from their systems or not. The big unknown in this, of course, is what happens when the drug treatment is stopped. Because the new protease inhibitors have only been widely used for about two years in the U.S., no one knows for certain — and physicians are reluctant to stop their patients' treatment with the medicines because another unknown question is once the therapy is stopped, can it be effectively started again.

By the close of the conference, it was clear that the optimism that permeated the conference in Vancouver where researchers spoke of the possibility of flushing the infection out of patients in two or three years of treatment had been replaced by the sober realities of a persistent and very crafty virus.

Less than a fourth of the delegates in Geneva said in a

Sharon Dixon Charged with Arson

by William Attewell

Milwaukee — After a nine month investigation, Milwaukee Police formally charged Sharon Dixon with arson for the blaze which severely damaged her bar Fannie's, the popular lesbian night spot located at 200 E. Washington Street in Milwaukee's Third Ward.

Dixon was also charged with Possession of an Illegal Substance and Possession of Illegal Explosives. All three charges are felonies. According to sources, morphine tablets were found by police during a search of Dixon's residence after the fire.

Dixon indicted to In Step that the explosives were fireworks housed in a public storage facility leased by a relative. In Step was unable to confirm the nature of the explosives named in the official complaint.

Dixon contends that the entire case is based circumstantial evidence, adding, "The charges are absolutely unfounded. I was sitting in a restuatant at the time it [the fire] happened with four of my friends. I had absolutely nothing to do with it."

"I never knew that possession of morphine tablets was a felony, and I did not know possession of fireworks was a felony. I didn't even know that I had the fireworks," Dixon added.

Fannies has remained closed since her arrest which occurred after a raid by police on the tavern. According to Dixon, the bar is closed — not because of the pending criminal charges — but due to alleged violations of a Special Use Permit required by the City of Milwaukee. The permits were required in the wake of the remodeling of Fannies after the fire. Dixon stated she hopes to have the bar open again soon.

Dixon's next court appearance is scheduled for late July. In Step will continue to follow this story as it develops.

Manoeuvres Owner to Relocate Business to Larger Facility

Madison — After an eighteen month search, Ed Grunewald owner of Manoeuvres and the MAD Bar ended months of speculation and unveiled plans to relocate his business to a new and much larger facility. The new bar and restaurant will be located at 5 Applegate Court-in the City of Madison, just off Fish Hatchery and the Beltline Highway. The location previously housed the Bombay Bicycle Club.

The new facility will feature a restaurant and bar called Club 5, a dance club named Planet Q, and — an as yet unnamed — men's bar. Planet Q will feature live entertainment and shows. Plans call for a DJ to be in residence seven nights a week playing dance music and videos. Planet Q will be open to all members of the Les-BiGay community. The men's bar will provide a home for members of the leather/levi community with the Unicorns of Madison holding club nights, meetings and other special events.

Some scientists said the findings were significant because of reported serious side effects of protease inhibitors for some patients, and because a significant percentage of patients simply don't respond to the protease inhibitors.

But even reports on this rather encouraging new drug treatment had a caveat tucked inside it. Just as there are side effects for some patients to the protease inhibitors, some patients reported serious side effects from the new therapy as well. Even so, researchers said, it is another weapon available in battling the disease after years of feeling out-gunned by the virus.

New Strains of HIV

Perhaps the most discouraging news came from scientists who reported new strains of HIV that are now appearing around the world.

Jaap Goudsmit of the University of Amsterdam told the conference that new strains have appeared in Africa, China and Russia and that the new strains move from person to person faster and more easily than their "parent" strains.

"They pick up maybe the most favorable genes from poll that they thought there would be a cure for AIDS within the next five years — and most said they believed it might be as long as 15 years before an actual cure is developed.

Just as sobering, delegates in Geneva repeatedly underscored that even if a cure were found quickly, such treatments would simply not be affordable in the poorer parts of the world where some 90 percent of the world's 30 million HIV infections are located.

Speakers at the closing ceremony noted an irony of the conference that, despite its theme of "Bridging the Gap," the conference itself both reflected and perpetuated it. Only a fourth of the 13,000 or so delegates were from the undeveloped nations that have been so hard hit by the epidemic, and only about a third of the conference speakers were.

Dr. Hoosen Coovadia, a University of Durban pediatrician who chairs the World AIDS Conference slated to be held in his South African homeland two years from now, hopes that conference may actually begin bridging that gap.

The restaurant will serve lunch and dinner seven days a week and will be open after bar closing on Friday and Saturday nights until 3:30 a.m. Club 5 will be nearly five times larger than Manoeuvres current location.

Construction and renovation will begin by mid-July and last approximately six to seven weeks with a grand opening slated for mid-August of 1998.

"We are very excited by this move," stated Grunewald. "The support I've received from the gay and lesbian community over the last 3-1/2 years is truly wonderful and I promise to do everything I can to make Club 5 a place for all gays and lesbians."

Grunewald indicated that buslines and cabs all have easy access to the new location which also has plenty of parking. He also stated that future plans call for We Are Family to eventually be housed in the building as well.

Lake County Pride Day Helps Bridge Isolation

Waukegan, IL (AP) — Nineteen years ago, Waukegan residents Karen Hansen and Vicky Wright became the first same-sex couple in Lake County to win a child-custody battle.

It was quite an achievement, considering that in suburbia there were no support groups, no social mechanisms and few institutions sympathetic to gays and lesbians.

Gaining custody of the children, who are Hansen's from a former marriage, was a triumph, but it wasn't without cost. Hansen and Wright, both committed Christians, were unceremoniously drummed out of their church for their sexual orientation.

"We're trying to do everything we can to de-isolate ourselves."

"It was like a witch hunt," Hansen recalled.

These days, Hansen and Wright have a place to worship. The Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches, represented in Lake County by the Joy of Life Metropolitan Community Church in Waukegan, has given hundreds of gay and lesbian residents in Lake County a church to call their own.

It's a sign of the changing attitudes towards gay and lesbian residents in suburbia. And those changes were on display over the weekend when nearly 100 people turned out for the 2nd annual Lesbigay Transgendered Pride Day, cosponsored by the Lake County Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Leadership Alliance. The all-day celebration, which included a picnic and worship service before moving to the Emerald City nightclub in Antioch, provided the Lake County gay community with a central gathering point, if only for a day.

"There's a lot more isolation in the suburbs than there is in the city," said Chad Parsons, 22, of Salem, Wis., just over the state line in Kenosha County. "We're trying to do everything we can to de-isolate ourselves."

Parsons is co-president of Spectrum, an organization for gay students at the College of Lake County. Through his group and others like it, suburban gay groups try to bridge the sprawl, creating a community of common concerns where a geographical community would be impossible.

And there are plenty of organizations. At Saturday's pride celebration, held at St. John's United Church of Christ, which provides space for the Joy of Life Church, the Lake County Lesbian Network and Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays also were represented. So were several area businesses that support the gay community.

"Sometimes, when same-sex couples go looking for a house, they have to say things like 'This is my decorator' to explain their partner to the Realtor, and they shouldn't have to do that," said Mark Nash, an Evanston Realtor who provides special help to the suburban gay community.

"The gay community is an important part of the marketplace," Nash said. "There's a huge transgendered community in Gurnee, for instance, that I don't think very many people know about."

As insurance against housing discrimination against same-sex couples, Nash can provide gay mortgage brokers, house inspectors and attorneys to help clients at every step in the home-buying transaction, he said.

Perhaps because of the care he takes with his clients, or perhaps because decades of sustained effort on the part of the wider gay community have made discrimination against homosexuals passe in many communities, Nash hasn't seen any examples of blatant discrimination in about five years, he said.

That's a welcome sign for Peter Trabaris, pastor of Joy of Life Church. As society comes to terms with homosexuality, more and more homosexuals come to terms with society, bringing them back into the fold of a healthy, multifaceted community, he said.

"Often, gays and lesbians don't want to go back to religion because that may be where they had some of their first bad experiences after coming out," Trabaris said.

"But spirituality is an integral part of any community, and a community without it is in many ways a community apart. What's important is that we maintain our contact with the transcendent and divine."

Lesbian Loses Commission Race by Four Votes

Albuquerque, N.M. — Former state Sen. Liz Stefanics, an open lesbian well known in the state's gay and lesbian community, lost by an unbelievable 4-vote margin her bid for a seat on the District 3 Public Regulation Commission.

Out of a total of more than 50,000 votes cast, state officials said the final count was 16,634 for Stefanics, and 16,638 for her opponent, Jerome Block.

Stefanics had been narrowly ahead of Block during most of the vote counting and appeared to be headed for a narrow victory when officials discovered a handful of uncounted votes in a Santa Fe precinct. When they were counted, Stefanics had instead lost by just 4 votes.

Stefanics said she will ask for a recount of the votes because of the narrowness of the count.

The Public Regulation Commission is a new agency combining the work of two state commissions. Starting in 1999, the commission will oversee the regulation of electric, gas and water utilities, telecommunications and insurance as well as trucking, bus and other transportation companies.

Atlanta Neighborhood in Uproar Over Gentrification

ATLANTA — Amos Moore denied he's a "hate monger" as his opponents charge, but the Baptist minister said he would continued handing out fliers denouncing the "takeover of our community" by white homosexuals that have stirred up a storm in the Kirkwood neighborhood of Atlanta for the past month.

City officials have asked Moore to stop passing the fliers out and have arranged for two community meetings where residents of the neighborhood can talk about the divisions they're faced with. But Moore says he will continue distributing the fliers and they his "stance on the fliers is a biblical one."

The Kirkwood neighborhood, which became a mainly black enclave 30 years ago when many whites moved to the suburbs, is now undergoing a gentrification led by gay and lesbian couples drawn to the community's low real estate prices.

Many of the community's black residents denounced Moore's attacks as "misguided" and "irresponsible" and that the real problems of the neighborhood are crime, drugs and poverty.

But Moore's supporters say they feel economically disenfranchised and fear that their community is being "bought out" from under them by economically better off white gays and lesbians moving into the neighborhood.

First Volunteer Begins Full-Scale HIV Vaccine Trial

PHILADELPHIA — The first full-scale human trials of an anti-AIDS vaccine officially began in Philadelphia on Tuesday, June 23.

Mark Watkins, a 38-year-old physician who specializes in AIDS, was the first volunteer to receive VaxGen's AIDSvax vaccine.

The three-year trial will include up to 5,000 participants in 30 to 50 cities in North America, including New York, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Baltimore, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Dallas and Washington, D.C.

The experimental vaccine uses gp120, an HIV protein, to stimulate the human immune system to recognize and fight the virus itself.

The vaccine is being tested on volunteers in high-risk groups, mainly among gay men and people with HIV-positive sexual partners. The volunteers will get seven inoculations during a 30-month period. A portion of the total volunteer will be given placebo injections as a control to assure the meaningfulness of the final results.

Some researchers have expressed reservations about the VaxGen vaccine's potential effectiveness. But many scientists say that because the vaccine has clearly been shown to be safe, it should be tested in this full-scale trial.

Court Rules Guard's Anti-Gay Policy Unconstitutional

SACRAMENTO — The California National Guard says it will appeal a San Francisco Superior Court ruling invalidating the Pentagon's "don't ask, don't tell" policy.

Superior Court Judge David Garcia declare the Defense Department policy violates California's state constitution and therefore cannot be applied by the state National Guard in discharging 1st Lt. Andrew Holmes. Holmes told his commanding officer in 1994 that he is gay, and the National Guard discharged him on the basis of that statement. National Guard units are under the control of their respective state governors normally, but they can be federalized and put directly under the control of the president. As a result, National Guard units say they must adhere to all federal laws and regulations governing military service in the U.S. armed forces. But Anne-Marie Eileraas, one of the attorneys representing Holmes, says that isn't the case. "There are purely state jobs that are posted every year that are available to people who have been discharged from the federal National Guard," she said. She and the other lawyers who argued Holmes' case, insist that it's possible to serve in the state components of a National Guard unit without serving in the federal component. Judge Garcia agreed and sided with Holmes in his ruling. But the state attorney general's office, which is representing the state National Guard in the case, said it will appeal the ruling.

Discrimination 'No,' Decency 'Yes'

Mixed Supreme Court Ruling in Two Significant Cases

by Keith Clark

of the In Step Staff

Washington, D.C. — The U.S. Supreme Court handed down a set of rulings on June 25 that grabbed headlines because of their far-reaching implications.

Two of those decisions — an HIV disabilities decision and a ruling on what the federal government can say about funding for art considered "indecent" were being closely watched by rights advocates not only for the importance of the rulings themselves, but also for further clues into how several newer justices weigh in on complex and controversial questions.

"HIV infection satisfied the statutory and regulatory definition of a physical impairment during every stage of the disease."

The court ruled 5-4 that people infected with HIV are included under federal antidiscrimination legislation that bars bias against the disabled even if they suffer no apparent symptoms of the infection.

AIDS activists hailed the court decision as a major victory. "It is a victory for many people with AIDS," said Hector Arroyo of the People with AIDS Coalition. "We have been isolated and alienated enough and I think that this should tell the medical establishment and society as a whole that we are just human beings like other persons."

The ruling stemmed from a case involving Maine dentist Randon Bragdon who had refused to treat Sidney Abbott in his office because she was infected with HIV. Dr. Bragdon had appealed a lower court ruling in Ms. Abbott's favor, arguing that the 1990 Americans With Disabilities Act does not apply to asymptomatic individuals infected with HIV because it does not in itself constitute a disability.

A narrow majority of the justices disagreed, and Justice Anthony Kennedy, writing for the majority said, "HIV infection satisfied the statutory and regulatory definition of a physical impairment during every stage of the disease."

At the same time, however, the court set aside the lower court ruling against Dr. Bragdon and ordered the appeals court to reconsider the case under its current decision. The high court acknowledged that the appeals court "may reach the same conclusion it did earlier," but said that "courts should assess the objective reasonableness of the views of health care professionals without deferring to their individual judgments."

In addition to Justice Kennedy, the other justices joining the majority ruling were John Paul Stevens, David Souter, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, and Stephen Breyer.

Dissenting were Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia, Clarence Thomas and Sandra Day O'Connor.

On another issue, however, the court ruled 8-1 that Congress has the right to refuse federal grants to artists if their work is not considered decent. The court said that the embattled National Endowment for the Arts does not violate the free speech rights of artists who are turned down for funding on the basis of either decency or artistic merit.

The ruling brought howls of protest from artists.

Joshua Kaufman, an attorney who represents a number of American artists, said, "It will just have a chilling effect from the top down throughout all support for the arts. If it is on the edge, if it is not 'comfortable,' if it is not 'pretty,' if it is provocative, it is not going to get funded."

Writing for the court majority, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor said the 1990 law "neither inherently interferes with First Amendment rights nor violates constitutional vagueness principles."

Opponents of the legislation had argued that the law violated the free speech rights of artists and was unconstitutionally vague.

But O'Connor said in the ruling that the legislation only amounted to "advisory language" that "admonishes the NEA merely to take 'decency and respect' into consideration" in evaluating its grants.

consideration" in evaluating its grants. Conservatives in Congress enacted the "decency standard" measure in 1990 following a uproar over NEA funding of photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe, whose sado-masochistic and homoerotic images enraged several members of Congress. A photography of a crucifix immersed in urine by photographer Andres Serrano also angered many conservatives who have continued to argue for the complete dismantling of the NEA because of such grants.

Joining Justice O'Connor in the majority were Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justices Breyer, Ginsburg, Kennedy, Scalia, Stevens, and Thomas.

The lone dissenting voice on the court was Justice David Souter, who agreed with foes that the law was "substantially overbroad and carries with it a significant power to chill artistic production and display."

IN STEP health news AIDS Vaccine Suffers Big Setback

Geneva (AP) — A weakened virus that many consider the best hope for an AIDS vaccine suffered a serious setback Thursday when tests in adult monkeys showed it may actually cause the disease it was meant to prevent.

The approach — what scientists call a live, attenuated vaccine — initially protects monkeys from getting infected with the simian version of HIV.

However, the new work shows that over time, the weakened virus can mutate into a lethal form that causes the disease it was meant to prevent.

To me, this fortifies that we are not ready to go into humans with a live attenuated vaccine," said Dr. Anthony Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Dr. Robert Gallo of the University of Maryland said that if the live attenuated approach fails, it means AIDS vaccine development is no further ahead than it was in 1984, when little was known about the epidemic's cause.

We have no guarantee that we will ever have a vaccine," he said.

Creating an AIDS vaccine is a top priority of researchers but also an extraordinarily difficult task because the AIDS virus attacks parts of the immune system that are ordinarily called into action by effective vaccines.

One idea is to give people a weakened version of HIV - one that would set up a harmless low-grade infection but keep immune defenses on high alert against the real thing. People who carry genetically crippled HIV that arose through random mutations do not seem to get sick.

Because of the obvious hazards of testing even a weakened AIDS virus on people, scientists at the New England Regional Primate Center in Southboro, Mass., created a mirror version using the closely related simian immune deficiency virus, SIV.

When first tested on macaque monkeys, they found that the vaccine seemed to completely protect them from what should have been lethal doses of the full-strength virus.

However, in 1995, Dr. Ruth Ruprecht of Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston found that the weakened virus eventually triggered the simian version of AIDS when given to baby monkeys.

At the 12th World AIDS Conference, Ruprecht reported her new research shows that in time, the vaccine also causes AIDS in adult monkeys.

What we saw in infants is a fast-forward version of what could happen in adults with an attenuated vaccine," she said.

The version of the vaccine she tested was weakened by deleting parts of three genes that were thought necessary for it to cause illness.

Los Angeles AIDS specialist Charles Farthing, who wants to test a live attenuated HIV vaccine in people, called Ruprecht's latest discovery "more concerning" than her earlier work in infants. Still, he said, monkey AIDS is an even more virulent disease than human AIDS, and the human vaccine would be weakened even more than the monkey version she tested.

"Looking at SIV in monkeys gives you a misleading impression of what would happen in human beings," he said. "This is not safety data for humans."

Ruprecht vaccinated 15 adult monkeys over the past three to five years. One has died of AIDS. Three others have high levels of the HIV virus in their blood.

Among nine infant monkeys vaccinated, six have developed AIDS and five of them are dead. The other three have pre-AIDS abnormalities.

She said the weakened virus mutates so rapidly that strains eventually emerge that are able to thrive.

There is a mini-Darwinian experiment going on in every single vaccinated animal," she said. "In the end, we have disease.'

What Dr. Waldo and his colleagues found — and reported at the 12th Annual International Conference on AIDS - was that among the young gay men whose attitudes were most positive about being gay about 30 percent had engaged in some high-risk sexual behavior, such as not using condoms during anal sex. But among the young men whose attitudes about their sexual orientation were the most negative, that figure jumped to Geneva — A researcher says 46 percent who engaged in higha recent study indicates that risk sex.

N.C. AIDS Group Under Investigation

Smithfield, N.C. - State auditors have asked for a criminal investigation of the North Carolina Minority Persons Living with HIV/AIDS Coalition because of suspicions of misuse of public funds.

The auditors said state health officials gave the two men with the coalition $12,500 to help hold a conference, but later received complaints that hotel conference bills had not been paid. The auditors said one of the men later admitted he had used part of the state money for personal expenses. When the state auditors began investigating, they were unable to locate either of the two men and have now asked for a criminal investigation. The community-based coalition was located in the offices of Drugs and AIDS Prevention among African-Americans, an AIDS-prevention agency that is itself also under investigation for possibly misusing public money.

Colorado City Considering Banning Transgender Bias

BOULDER - Prompted by three local transgendered residents - Melissa Chapman, Wendi Madsen and Kathryn Haley - Boulder officials are considering whether to add anti-discrimination language to the city's anti-bias ordinance that would prohibit discrimination based on gender status.

The liberal college community, home of the University of Colorado, already bars bias based on gender and sexual orientation, but officials with the city's human rights commission that the existing ordinance would not authorize them to investigate complaints based on gender status.

City officials said that the state of Minnesota, as well as the cities of San Francisco, Seattle, Pittsburgh and Iowa City, Iowa, bar discrimination against transgendered individuals and that such anti-bias protections rarely seem to generate much political opposition.

NYC Council OKs Sweeping Partners Measure

NEW YORK — The New York city council has approved a measure that would give domestic partners the same rights and obligations under city law as legally married couples.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani has already said he will sign the measure into law.

The new legislation codifies a whole set of regulations and proposed changes, including such diverse things as burial rights in city cemeteries, food vending license inheritance rights, and the right to ride in an ambulance with a loved one.

The measure also adds certain requirements, however, including full financial disclose and conflict-of-interest disclosure when a domestic partner applies for a city job or formally appears before certain city commissions.

Various city agencies have been working for months, at the order of Mayor Giuliani, to draw up a list of required regulation changes in their own departments that would make domestic partners equal to married couples as far as the city is concerned.

The city's approximately 9,000 registered domestic partners - both same-sex and opposite-sex - already have been granted most of the rights as married couples as far as city law applies, including child care and bereavement leave, hospital and jail visitation rights, the right to inherit city-controlled housing, and medical benefits for partners of city employees.

Rep. Barney Frank, Companion, Splitting Up

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Representative Barney Frank, a Massachusetts Democrat has ended his relationship with Wisconsin native Herb Moses, his longtime companion.

Frank, who has been candid about his personal life and often referred to Moses as his "spouse," confirmed reports of the breakup in a recent interview.

"We'll be separating. ... We'll be selling our house in the near future," Frank said.

Frank disclosed that he is gay in 1987, saying, "I have nothing to hide, nothing to advertise." He and Moses often appeared together at congressional functions and White House social events. They told journalists that they thought of themselves as married.

Frank has worked hard to dispel stereotypes about gays. He spoke in public about his 10 1//2-year relationship with Moses, and defied criticism from Senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina and other conservative foes.

The separation is amicable, Frank said.

'Frugal Gourmet' Settles Sex Assault Lawsuits

SEATTLE - Jeff Smith, best known as PBS-TV's "Frugal Gourmet," has reached an out-of-court settlement to pay seven men who claimed that the television cookingshow host molested them as teenagers years ago.

Smith's attorney, Ed Winskill, confirmed settlement of the lawsuits, but would not disclose the terms. As part of the settlement, the plaintiffs are not supposed to discuss the terms either.

The plaintiffs included six young men who as teenagers had worked at Tacoma businesses that were owned by Smith.

The plaintiffs alleged that Smith used coercion and alcohol in grooming them for sex while they were employed by Smith in the late 1970s and early 1980s. The lawsuit maintained Smith also picked up a 15-year-old hitchhiker in Tacoma, drove to a side street, and sexually assaulted him. He was never charged with crimes connected with the alleged incidents and has insisted he is innocent.

PrideFest Honors Ben Johnson; Volleyball Tournament Moves to Festival Grounds

Milwaukee — Milwaukee paid tribute to community leader and activist Benjamin Johnson at a memorial service on Tuesday, June 9 at St. Benedict the Moor Church. People from all walks of life filled every pew and shared in the many memories of Ben who passed away on May 30 after a courageous battle with cancer. To honor the man who touched so many lives, PrideFest will rename its Harvey Milk Stage the "Ben Johnson Stage"" at this year's festival.

"Ben was my mentor," said PrideFest Vice President Michael Lisowski. "The contributions he made to the community go well beyond that of most people, and it is only fitting that we remember him at our community's celebration."

Johnson was a volunteer at the BESTD Clinic and the Milwaukee AIDS Project before he became a full-time employee at MAP. He took his message of HIV/AIDS prevention to the people who needed to hear it most, and in a manner they could understand. This created a bit of a stir for some people, especially Catholics, since Johnson spent 24 years of his life as a Capuchin Franciscan Friar. During the memorial service, several people recalled how they met Ben through MAP, and how they became involved as volunteers because of him.

His many awards included the Black Health Care Professional Award in 1990, the Professional Service Recognition Award from the Wisconsin Chapter -National Black Alcoholism Council, and the President's Award from the Human Rights League in 1996.

The Ben Johnson Stage will be located in the Harley-Davidson Area of the Henry W. Maier Festival Park.

Volleyball Moves

All volleyball players are welcome to form teams and join in the fun at this year's Miller Light-PrideFest Volleyball Tournament.. There is room for sixteen teams who will begin the tournament with roundrobin play Saturday morning, August 29 at PrideFest. Tournament elimination play will begin at 1 p.m. and should end around 5 p.m. Prizes, including trophies and game balls, will be awarded at a ceremony to be held at 5:30 at the Milwaukee Journal/Sentinel Children's Stage.

On Sunday, August 30, the courts will be open from noon to 6 p.m. for pick-up games. All players are welcome regardless of ability.

For the first time since PrideFest's move to the Henry W. Maier Festival Park, the courts are located on the festival grounds. Three grass courts will be located just inside the Main Gate, right in the heart of the festival. Also new are the bleachers for spectators, allowing festivalgo'ers a chance to soak up the sun and watch some of the best volleyball action the Midwest has to offer.

The tournament fee is $70 per team and includes shirts and admission to the festival. Miller Lite is sponsoring the games, and GAMMA, a Milwaukee social-athletic volunteer organization, is running them.

For a Volleyball Tournament registration packet, call the PrideFest office at (414) 272-3378 or e-mail pridemilw@aol.com. For more PrideFest information, visit the website www.pridefest.com.

Milwaukee — The Cream City Foundation has received a $1,000 endowment from In Step to establish The Ron Geiman Journalism Scholarship for Wisconsin's LGBT community. Ron Geiman founded In Step in 1984. The newspaper was later sold by Geiman to Jorge Cabal and William Attewell in 1996. The scholarship was established to acknowledge the legacy that Ron Geiman has provided the LGBT community through his many years of work with In Step, and and the desire recognize that fact in a manner that would continue to advance Wisconsin's LGBT community.

Ron Geiman

Scott Gunkel, the Grants Chair for the Foundation stated, "The Cream City Foundation could not have thought of a better way to honor Ron Geiman and all the work he has done for the LGBT community."

The Cream City Foundation will administer this scholarship through its grant committee; anyone wishing to contribute to this scholarship is encouraged to do so by making their contribution directly to the Cream City Foundation and dedicating it to this scholarship. "The Cream City Foundation would like to see this scholarship grow, so that it will continue to aid students for many years to come," stated Mr. Gunkel.

Those interested in applying for the Ron Geiman Journalism Scholarship, should send a letter requesting an application to the Cream City Foundation, P.O. Box 204, Milwaukee, WI. An application with all further instructions will be mailed back for completion. This is not a difficult scholarship to qualify for, but there are specific things that the Board of the Foundation looks for in making the grant. The Foundation hopes that many students will take advantage of this opportunity to further their education.

Outpost Growing and Going West

Milwaukee - Outpost Natural Foods has announced the planned opening of a new store in Wauwatosa. The concept of expanding Outpost Natural Foods by adding another location evolved through the strong support of the 4,000 memberowners as the interest in quality natural food products continues to grow. Market research indicates that the western boundaries of Milwaukee County represent a growing segment of shoppers and cooperative ownership base. Combined with the favorable demographics of the surrounding western metro-Milwaukee neighborhoods, a Wawatosa location was identified by our research as most favorable with a highly populated area of shoppers who best fit the profile of the natural foods customer.

Our vision is to duplicate the success of our Milwaukee store by opening a second location that mirrors the products and services we now offer. The property at the intersection of 70th and State Street in wauwatosa will provide an excellent opportunity for creating a community -owned neighborhood market that would draw pimary shoppers from a three-mile radius.

The Wawatosa East State Street corridor (60th and 70th Streets) is a combination of former and current industrial sites and newer business development, blocks away from the Historic Wawatosa Village. The State Street Redevelopment Plan was presented to the city's Common Council on Tuesday, June 3, 1997 by the Madison constructing firm of Johnson, Johnson & Roy. The plan provides the city with the opportunity to accentuate and develop a gateway to the city by improvements to this corridor.

Outpost's intended purchase of the property at 7006-7008 W. State Street, 1257-1263 N. 70th Street, will officially kick off Wauwatosa's redevelopment plans. Outpost's original offer to purchase these properties was made in October of 1997. Outpost ordered a Phase I and II environmental study of these properties in the fall of 1997 through Key Environmental Services, Inc. Based on the soil samples and analytical results of Key's findings, Outpost turned over the reports to the property owners who then approached the City of Wauwatosa and the Wawatosa Economic Development Corporation (WEDC) with their concerns.

Outpost's new building will be approximately 13,000 sq. ft. (8,900 sq. ft. of retail) with 66 parking spaces. We envision design elements of the building fitting well with the city's development plans by incorporating numerous historical architechtural features. Other environ-mentally-friendly building features are also being considered. Outpost's development team includes MSI General Corporation, Retailworks, Inc. and Bloomin Prairie Natural Foods (Outpost's co-op distribution). Staffing for the new store will create approximately 100 new fulland part-time jobs as well as promotional opportunities for the current store staff.

Since opening in 197, Outpost Natural Foods Cooperative has continued to offer consumer ownership of a community resource for food, products, services, and information which promotes healthful living. The store, located at 100 East Capitol Drive in Milwaukee is open every day from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Local Extras For HIV Prevention Video Sought

Milwaukee — If you stop at La Cage, 801 S. 2nd Street, on Monday, July 13, you may be surprised to find the bar looking like a Hollywood movie set.

Video cameras, actors, and a full technical crew will be present to film a national HIV prevention training video for the Center for AIDS Intervention Research (CAIR) at the Medical College of Wisconsin.

Volunteer extras are needed to make the bar look busy as the production crew films crowd scenes and various vignettes. Members of the community are invited to participate in the filming from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. and are encouraged to dress as if they were going out for a night of dancing.

"We're hoping to capture the energy and excitement of a busy night at the bar," says Maripat Wilkinson, director of the video and creative director at The Mind's Eye, the Milwaukee company responsible for the video's creative design. Technical expertise for the video is being provided by Digital TeleVision Productions, an award-winning production company.

The completed video will be part of an HIV prevention training package designed by CAIR for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The package, which is based on a successful HIV prevention program developed by CAIR, is expected to be distributed nationally to AIDS service organizations to assist them in conducting the intervention in their own communities.

LEGALLY SPEAKING

by Christopher Krimmer

Sex in the Parks

ewd and Lascivious. Two words you never want to hear if you're a gay man in a park after dark. This is the criminal offense that many gay men are fighting in court since the recent police stings of the local parks. Whether you blame it on George Michael or a conservative right-winger for a district attorney, one thing is certain, the Milwaukee police department is fervently arresting gay men who frequent the parks.

According to the Wisconsin criminal codes, a person will be charged with lewd and lascivious behavior if he "commits an indecent act of sexual gratification with another with knowledge that they are in the presence of others, or publicly and indecently exposes his genitals or public area."

One of two things will happen to a person caught violating this criminal code. If the person is lucky, he may only receive a municipal violation amounting to nothing more than a fine for approximately $300.00. But that is if the person is "lucky." The alternative is that the person will be hauled downtown in a paddy wagon, booked, fingerprinted and charged with a Class A misdemeanor. The penalty for a class A misdemeanor is a fine of not to exceed $10,000.00 or imprisonment not to exceed nine months, or both. Regardless of your views of men soliciting men in the park, can one honestly say that this penalty fits the crime?

Certainly not. A person who makes this mistake should not be branded as a criminal and a sex offender. Instead of possibly ruining that person's career or even marriage, the district attorney's office would provide much better service to not only the gay community but the community at large by directing these individuals to organizations and resources which will assist the person in identifying the reasons why he feels compelled to such behavior.

This is a classic example of one of those "victimless crimes," where the Wisconsin legislature can't find a true victim so they throw the offense under "Crimes against Sexual Morality." (See Chapter 944 of the Wisconsin Criminal Statutes) 944 of the Wisconsin Criminal Statutes) Apparently "sexual morality" is defined by the district attorney's office and your police departments. For instance, on the same page as the lewd and lascivious offense is the criminal mits adultery by either having sex with a married person or being married and having sex with someone other than your spouse is guilty of a class E felony.

The penalty for a Class E felony is not to exceed $10,000 or a prison term not to exceed two years, or both. Yet, how often does one hear about a person being arrested and criminally convicted of adultery in Wisconsin? Never. If the offense of adultery was truly enforced, more than forty percent of divorcing spouses would be hauled off to jail!

Instead, the police and the district attorney's office have selectively chosen to seek out, arrest, prosecute and brand men in the parks as criminals. What these men need are resources that will assist them in discovering the real underlining motives of their behavior.

An example of an appropriate resource would be the organization, Sexual Compulsives Anonymous (SCA), a nationwide organization with a chapter in Milwaukee. (See their listing in the back of the In Step under Milwaukee Organizations). Individuals who find themselves frequently seeking out public sex or participating in emotionally debilitating sexual practices are encouraged to attend SCA meetings.

The group offers a nonjudgmental atmosphere for participants to discuss aspects of their sexual behavior that they feel are destructive to them and to listen to others facing similar challenges. The structure of the group is similar to many other successful 12 step programs, but unlike the others, each individual decides his own personal objectives and goals.

The ultimate objective for the organization is to have participants control their sexual behavior in a fashion that is the most healthy and exhilarating to them and not have their sexual drive literally drive them into unsafe and emotionally unfulfilling sex.

Whether individuals are having sex in the parks because of low self-esteem, compulsiveness, sex addiction or sexual identity issues, one thing is certain, $10,000 and a nine months jail sentence isn't going to solve the problem.

Pridefest Revives Shuttle Buses

Milwaukee — Don't want to deal with the traffic when going to PrideFest? Take advantage of the free bus shuttle that will carry people to and from the festival grounds from 11 a.m. to midnight Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Sunday. Local businesses have once again sponsored this very popular feature of PrideFest, offering festival go'ers the luxury of free pick-up and delivery to the PrideFest front gates.

"Last year was a first try" for the shuttle, says Mike Hall, the festival's Operations Coordinator. This year there will be more attention to scheduling. Hall is working with the bus company to establish schedules and the times will be posted at the front gate so people who take the bus know when they can expect a return ride.

"Many of our out-of-town guests used the shuttle service last year as a pub crawl," added Hall. "They didn't have to worry about getting lost, or finding their way back to the festival. The shuttles took away all the hassels."

The 1998 Business Owners for Pride Sponsors include Dish, Fluid. M&M Club, Mama Roux, South Water Street Docks, The Park East Hotel and This Is It. The shuttle service will make the runs Saturday and Sunday. Bus stops will be marked. Business owners who still want to participate in this very special service should contact Michael Hall at 272-3378 so that additional stops can be promoted.

Annual ROW Pride Picnic Set for July 11

Green Bay — Rainbow Over Wisconsin, a not for profit fundraising organization serving Northeastern Wisconsin will be having their yearly Pride Picnic again this year at the Al Kampke farm in Hilbert Wisconsin on Saturday, July 11, 1998 from noon until 7 pm.

The date has been changed from the traditional Labor Day weekend in order to avoid a conflict with Wisconsin Pridefest. After a careful review of all possible dates, July 11 seemed to be the only one that would not conflict with other events in Wisconsin or Chicago area.

Several new improvements are being made to the farm site which is also used by the Argonauts of Wisconsin for certain events. The Argonauts have once again generously agreed to assist with the food preparation and are also the people who are making the improvements to the farm facility. Rainbow Over Wisconsin agreed to pay up to $500.00 in materials costs to construct a performing stage outdoors in an area that used to house a silo.

The farm will continue to be improved and may be used in the future for even more organizations looking for a site for an event. It has in the past been used for a weekend camp-over party advertised throughout the state and is used by the Argonauts for a yearly run. Rainbow Over Wisconsin chose this site largely because it's location is between Appleton and Green Bay; therefore not favoring one city over another, is easy to reach from everywhere on highway 57, and because we are freed from several restrictions parks in Green Bay and Appleton impose such as how and where alcohol may be served, and use of a dunk tank among other things. This site is also a little more private than a public park would be.

One exciting change is to allow underage persons to attend the event this year for the first time.

"ROW is taking special precautions to prevent any underage drinking." said Mark Mariucci ROW's secretary and publicist. "Finally the entire Les-bi-gay community may attend our event."

Live entertainment will be featured again this year including local female impersonators, live singers and musicians. David Shore, who is arranging the sound and lighting, will add an area for dancing this year, which should be a hit especially with the younger set. Live entertainment will begin after 2 p.m. and run at the same time as dancing is featured elsewhere on the grounds.

Food and beverages will include chicken sandwiches, hamburgers, chips, soda, beer and bottled water. A valid Wisconsin ID is required to consume alcohol. No carryin's will be allowed. There is no cover charge.

Vendors including Designing Men and Afterwords Bookstore will be selling items, and joined by social organizations such as P-Flag-Fox Valley, GLEEDA, Positive Voice and Angels of Hope MCC Church.

An Awards Ceremony will present awards to various groups or individuals who have made a significant contribution to Northeastern Wisconsin1s Les-Bi-Gay community. A raffle drawing is also planned.

Rainbow Over Wisconsin was originally conceived by Mark Mariucci and organized by progressive minded area gay business owners as a way to turn a customer appreciation picnic into a community fundraiser for cities including, Appleton, Green Bay, and Sheboygan. Wausau was also included until the Madhatter closed and the owners moved.

Today, ROW members meet all year long and sponsor many fundraisers throughout the year. Money raised is then distributed to organizations who request the funds. The grants are decided on an individual basis, and great care is taken to spend the money where it will do the most good.

In the past ROW has made donations to a gay student group at St. Norbet College to pay for Wilson Cruise, the gay actor from My So Called Life; to GLEEDA and P-Flag -Fox Valley to use in a billboard campaign; to Positive Voice & Angel Of Hope MCC to obtain photocopying equipment and other items of need; to the Argonauts Charities of Wisconsin to be used for emergency funds for needy persons, many afflicted with AIDS and ROW has contributed to what is now ARCW, Green Bay and the Fox Valley, and continues to give them more money, now used to distribute free condoms in all the are gay bars to help prevent the spread of HIV.

Persons or businesses wishing to become a part of Rainbow Over Wisconsin are encouraged to write for more information to Rainbow Over Wisconsin, 702 E. Wisconsin Ave. Appleton, WI 54911.

Disney, Orlando Gay Pride Blamed for Florida Fires

Orlando, FL — Anti-gay opponents have blamed homosexuality for a lot of things - including the fall of the Roman Empire, the deterioration of Great Britain as a leading world power, the demise of the family farm in America.

Now Operation Rescue and televangelist Pat Robertson are blaming Disney World's "Gay Day" and Orlando allowing gays and lesbians to hoist Rainbow Flags (a popular symbol of the gay rights movement) on poles along downtown street for fires that ravaged central Florida in late June.

Robertson raised the prospect of "divine retribution" against Disney and Orlando earlier in June, predicting hurricanes, tornadoes, earthquakes and perhaps terrorist bombings.

After the fires charred much of the central state, Robertson said on a CBN-TV report, "You know, as I've been reading and praying, we had quite a flap the other day when we were talking about that Gay Pride Day in Orlando and everybody laughed. What happens: these fires in Florida could be a prelude to some things that are going on all around the world."

Citing a passage in the "Book of Revelation" from the Bible warning of fires from the heavens, Robertson said, "that's exactly what is happening." Flip Benham of Operation Rescue National took up

Flip Benham of Operation Rescue National took up the theme later in a press release which said, in part: "A city that protects child killers, those who peddle child pornography, and those who promote the homosexual lifestyle should not be surprised that the judgment of God would fall."

The National Weather Service has a simpler explanation. NWS officials say a high-pressure system over the Gulf of Mexico has kept rainfall levels below normal, and coupled with dry, soaring temperatures in June, Florida became a perfect place for wildfires.

t's been a while since I've written, busy with Summer activities and going through some life changes. I'm at one of those infamous crossroads of life and I'm still not sure which way I should turn.

I feel as though I need a whole new perspective on things to make this potentially life altering turn so I'm leaving this week for five days in Iowa with Kim for his reunion and visit with his family. My whole life is gay, gay, gay, and I figure small town Iowa is just what I need to put things in a clearer light. That, plus my roommate's family are all great people and his Mom, Dad, Sister and Brother-in-Law (and kids) have stayed with us and totally accept and understand our relationship. (That two 40+ gay men can live together in a platonic friendship and still argue and sound just like a married couple!) After our trip to Iowa, Kim's youngest (and cutest) brother Shawn and his wife, Kim (boy, can that get confusing) will stay with us prior to their flight out of O'Hare. Shawn's are another subject in my life right now. My 19 year old nephew is named Shaun. My pregnant nieces' fiancee's name is Sean. A hunky 20 year old college swimmer brother of a friend of mine (they are both straight but very gay friendly) who spends a lot of time visiting , is also named Shawn. Shawn and all its variations must have been the big name in that era. I guess it's a lot like all the Tiffany's that are running around. Can you imagine when they are in their 70's... Grandpa Shawn won't sound too bad, but Granny Tiffany just doesn't cut it.

Congratulations to Traci and Susie, two lesbian friends who are getting committed July 18 (committed as in a "ceremony celebrating our lives together" i.e. married). The women, with full support of their parents, are having their reception after their church ceremony at a popular German eatery. The classy ladies are registered at Marshall Fields (so no diesel repair kits, please). Here's my best for a long, happy life!

Who's the gayest person in Wiscon-sin? Think about it, who do you know, or have seen around, that is just too gay for you to handle? Too gay for their own good. I'm talking extreme stereotypical. I can think of a whole bevy of beauts, several in each city in this state, that I've met over the years. I'd love to hear your opinion on this, and perhaps we can make up a contest if you show enough of an interest. You can e-mail me with your suggestions at trbltlk@aol.com, or snail mail it into the InStep office.

What got me thinking of this was a review of Mr. Charles, Currently of Palm Beach, a one act 'sketch' written by the prolific Paul Rudnick (the playwright of Jeffrey and screenwriter of In &Out) and performed during the Ensemble Studio Theater's annual one act marathon.

scream, and still got across a gibe at those of us who try and pooh-pooh the poofs we all know, yet occasionally secretly admire. After all, we're all entitled to a 'Nellie Break' every now and then!

Don't you just love how what (Ir)Reverend Pat Robertson said literally 'fired' back at him? He's the perennial homophobe from the 700 Club and owner of cables Family Channel who prognosticated the destruction of Orlando, Florida by every type of weather and geographical phenomenon because they flew rainbow flags downtown during Disney's gay day last month. Don't you think it is kind of sat-isfying and telling that God didn't vent his wrath at Robertson's target, but instead, every other part of Florida, except Orlando, has been ravaged by fires and dry-spells?

Someone commented about a joke they heard: Robertson was seen along the decimated by fire east coast of Florida, on his knees praying, "Go Back, Go Back!" (West, I presume, to the only county in that part of Florida that didn't get burned!) The areas being crisped just happen to be the least gay friendly parts of Florida (I've seen lots of "Sinner" signs along those back roads heading east to Daytona/Cape Canaveral from Orlando.)

Some classy entertainment and a contest heading to the still-being-remodeled Two One Nine. The club hosts Wisconsin's Miss Continental Pageant on Tuesday, July 21 with a special guest emcee. Last year's Miss Continental Wisconsin, Tasha Long, went on to win the title of Miss Continental last Labor Day in Chicago. She's a hell of a great entertainer and impressionist, so if you have never seen her before, this is a good chance to catch her act. Tables of four are available in advance, as are single tickets... see the bar. Hmmmm, that special guest emcee couldn't be confirmed as of press time, but could it be that buxom blonde who originally was a 219 girl and made it big in Chi-town and won the Continental title several years ago?

Chuckie, you are beginning to sound like George ... Chuck says he has 6 month, 12 month, and 18 month goals in mind for work on the bar now that it's his.

By the way, my HIV viral load dropped from 168,000 to 17,000 after six weeks on my "salvage therapy" which added the cancer drug Hydroxyurea and ddI (which I stopped years ago because of neuropathy), to my old regimen of d4T and nevirapine. For the last six weeks, I've been on no protease inhibitor (all four of them failed me even after my diligent dosing), so I was hesitant about the results because PI's at least had results for a period of time before my virus mutated.

Don Shewey's cheering review commented Mr. Charles is "Like a creature fashioned from the DNA of Paul Lynde in some fabulous laboratory [he] embodies a gay archetype that Carl Jung overlooked: the Stereotype That Gives Us All a Bad Name".

"Mr. Charles apparently became so notorious for taking 'nellie breaks' at politically incorrect times that he was asked to leave New York. As revenge, he has repaired to southern Florida and taken to the airwayes with his late-night cable show, Too Ga.

My viral load drop cheered me, but then I found out that my CD4 count (the higher the better) had dropped from 113 to 78. However, the CD4's can be affected by stress, and that 'life crossroads' I mentioned at the top of the article, came with lots of stress. I'm anxious to see what the next test brings, and am hoping both numbers move in the right direction. I'm thankful that for the first time since I started PI's back in Feb. '96 I don't have constant diarrhea!

Mid-July of '95 was the time when I had to quit working, so this month marks my third anniversary of a forced retirement. I may not be one of those miraculous "Lazarus" PWA's but I'm doing okay, and it's nice to be alive.

I can't make it out to Madison for their Pride Weekend, July 17-19, (weddings and relatives) but hope lots of you can get there and enjoy Mad-Town's infamous hospitality!

Politics Rules Over Good Judgment

by Dave Runyon

The Federal Supreme Court recently decided that the decisions of grants awarded by the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) have to cater to local morals and values. Here is an example of Equal Justice Under Law, (the legend carved on the front of the Supreme Court building) failing to give weight to the tax money and opinions of those who might know a thing or two about art. The Court has allowed the tail to wag the dog. The decision came down the day after the National PBS broadcast of Michelangelo Revisited, about the recent restoration of Michelangelo's frescos in the Sistine Chapel at the Vatican in Rome.

Michelangelo's work totally outraged the church conservatives of his day to the point that a few years later (shades of the Roman Catholic Counter Reformation) painters were hired to cover over the offending parts of bodies and the Church Council made a ruling against nudity in public church art. These artists were dubbed the britches painters, but the recent restoration has removed those rags. The TV show did not hide that fact that Michelangelo was homosexual. Likewise, there have been no reports of any one going uncontrollably wild in the streets now that the restorers have unveiled the private parts of those pictured in the frescos. Like, who even noticed?

The recent court decision echoes 16th century Church morality (is Sandra Day O'Connor Catholic?). The decision throws a block in the way for government support of some types of serious art; indeed, for the purpose of art, which is to break boundaries, provincial limits and perspectives, i.e. to broaden people's limited views. O'Connor, who wrote the opinion, and her peers in this decision, don't get it. She has reduced the granting of awards to the lowest common denominator. These jurists are appeasers and ball-less in mind as well as in courage.

This determination encourages only trite agencies like the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, to get government support for providing stale and sentimental entertainment in their new auditorium; stuff that rots the mind in the heart of academia. But then, what can one expect from a Chancellor who marginalizes the arts curriculum for general studies? And they wonder why bureaucrats, even with Ph.D.'s, lack credibility.

Small local venues like Madison's Broom Street Theater and Brave Hearts have more integrity and claim to our serious attention over the likes of reactionary policies sent down by the Supreme Court. It is the Court which has made itself obscene and, in doing so, has trivialized our respect for the institution. Can you imagine the judges of ancient Greek plays to have behaved in such a shabby way?

How are awards made? The selection process is made by a "jury of peers", i.e. fellow artists. This is the normal and professional way art prizes and awards are made all over the USA. (I ought to know; I was the Director of the Crossman Gallery at University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, so I have first hand knowledge of the process.) No one in their right mind will defend the proposition that this is a perfect system; however, you certainly don't want people with no certifiable training and education in art to be making the decisions. As I said, it is not a perfect system, but the alternatives look a lot worse.

The result of the Supreme Courts' decision is that tax paying artists and serious art supporters on the cutting edge of their profession have been neutralized, since money, funding and grants play a big role in the arts world. The Canadians have a much better system, just as they do with their single-payer national health care system: for people, not for profit. This Supreme Court decision is yet another item to be added to the list of government meddling in areas that are none of its business, not unlike the decisions that are made between a woman and her doctor.

Coming Soon... to a Billboard Near You

Dear Editor:

Robert Braun, the homophobic anti-abortion activist currently serving a sentence in the House of Correction, was recently a guest on "Pastor" Ralph Ovadal's radio program.

Apparently part of Braun's troubles stem from a demonstration at one of the Gay Pride festivals on the Summerfest grounds in Milwaukee. Something was men-tioned about being threatened with jail for 6 or 7 months for handing out a "single" Bible at the festival. Braun next told Ovadal that he'd like to get a billboard up in the area of the Summerfest grounds in time for the upcoming Gay Pride festival, proclaiming the message that homosexuality is sinful, and similar to billboards Ovadal now has in the Madison area.

Letters

Ovadal's reply to Braun's billboard wish was that there is already something "in the works." Apparently this means that Ovadal is trying to make arrangements to put homophobic billboards in the Milwaukee area, specifically near the Summerfest grounds. One has to wonder why outdoor advertising companies are so quick to lease space for homophobic messages.

A March to Nowhere

by Paul Varnell

few months ago, the Human Rights Campaign, Metropolitan Community Churches, Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays, and the Latino organization LLEGO announced a national gay march in Washington for the year 2000.

This millennium march was intended to draw particular attention to gay "people of faith" and gay "family issues"gay and lesbian partnerships, gay parenting, gay children, and so forth.

These are not issues which affect me personally, but they do reflect the lives and concerns of most gays and lesbians I know. They are also issues that are likely to resonate with most decent A m e r i c a n s who are, in large part, the audience for such marches.

And we should certainly support equal rights for gay families whether we desire marriage for ourselves or not.

The march announcement was quickly followed by enthusiasm and approval? Oh, no! Rather, complaints and denunciations of those proposing the idea. It was the wrong date. It would divert resources. It was exclusionary in its planning. It was exclusionary in its emphases. An asteroid might strike. It might rain.

So a large meeting was convened of some 40 heads of national and local gay organizations ("a broad and diverse coalition" said the cliche-ridden press release) on June 9-10 to "collectively design" an inclusive and diverse structure to ensure ... diversity and inclusiveness.

If it was hard to get much information about the millennium march in the past two months, and it was, it is now even harder. At this point, the march is no longer about gay "people of faith," or gay family issues, or, in fact, anything at all. No one wants to commit to anything except buzzwords: "diverse," "collective," "inclusive," etc. And so we wonder whether it is worthwhile having a march.

There can be good reasons to have a march, and they have been adduced for all the previous marches-in 1979, 1987, 1993. They can demonstrate gay numbers and commitment to politicians and opinion leaders. They can create bursts of excitement and enthusiasm among some of those attending. They can draw people together during the planning process. They can expand gay mailing lists. These are not the stated goals of the march, but these are the terms the march is being defended in.

Are they reasons to attend such a march? For many of us, probably not. If you like it, go. If you are not impressed, don't go. It is up to the march organizers to convince you that you are supporting something worthwhile. march, but will anyone else benefit?

In addition, many marchers may well feel that they have fulfilled their obligation to the gay movement by going to the march and be less inclined to contribute anything more.

Third, the enthusiasm created by national marches can be brief indeed. Promise Keepers slid downhill after its national march. The Million Man March seems to have had little lingering impact. The warm fuzzy glow of the first gay march in 1979 seemed to last several months, but each subsequent gay march seems to have had a shorter impact; enthusiasm from the 1993 march lasted about two weeks.

> Fourth, each march we hold means less and less and less s because it is just one of a series. Marches have been routinized. Unless a march is significantly larger or has a different angle (for instance, faith and family issues?), the media get bored, politicians get bored, gays get bored. Marches? Been there, done that. Put differently, each march reduces the impact of the next march, so you better save your marches for really important messages and purposes. This march does not seem to have either.

Fifth, plans for the national march will inescapably draw some time, energy and money away from the marches planned for each state capital. All talk of coordination, synergy and so forth between the plans makes no sense. There is only so much time and money around, and states are where most important gay issues are decided-from sodomy laws, to gay marriage, to nondiscrimination proposals, to school programs for gay youth, to hate-crime data collection. It seems provincial of national gay organizations to draw attention to Washington when our attention should be focused on our state capitals.

And, alas, from what little one can learn about the new collective, diverse organizers, they seem bent on repeating all the problems that plagued the 1993 march. That march was poorly organized: It never got everyone on the Mall at one, the events on stage were slow-paced and dull, there was no resultant political gain, and there were so many demands (53) that the march entirely lacked a focus and ended up being just a party and music festival. Did we ever get a financial accounting?

Once again, there is the obsessive and time-consuming concern with process instead of results. Even with 40 organizational heads involved, an "Ad Hoc Committee for Open Process" including many of those who fumbled the 1993 march, said the process was not open enough. Demands for "open process" usually translate to mean, "I think I am important. Why wasn't I consulted?" And "process" is usually a stalking horse for agenda issues. Watch what happens.

There are, however, fairly substantial arguments against a national march.

First, they take a great deal of time and expense to plan and carry out. People who spend time, energy and money organizing a march might better devote that same time, energy, and money to the wide array of other important, substantive gay concerns. It is hardly useful to divert people's attention from other projects.

Second, a national march siphons off a great deal of money from the people who attend, money that never does a thing for the gay movement. People will spend hundreds of dollars and maybe more per person on transportation to and from Washington, for hotel or motel accommodations, for meals, for souvenirs (T-shirts reading "I survived the Millennium March"). Washington merchants will profit greatly from the Once again, as in 1993, planning groups are to be 50 percent minority and 50 percent women even though minorities constitute 26 percent of the U. S. population, and most studies have found that gay men outnumber lesbians by at least 2-1. It is interesting that no one brought this up.

It seems likely that so relentlessly inclusive a group will be unable to reject virtually any "concern" or demand from any constituent group. Indeed it is hard to think of any reason they could offer for doing so since organizers have now stated their aim of maximal inclusiveness.

Forget the national march. Do something useful instead.

Madison Rep to Open 30th Anniversary Season with "Little Shop of Horrors"

Madison - Keep your weed killer handy! Madison Repertory Theater begins its 30th anniversary season with the hit musical Little Shop of Horrors, written by the team of Howard Ashman and Alan Menken. The musical opens July 24 at 8 p.m. in the Isthmus Playhouse of the Madison Civic Center and runs through Saturday, August 29.

It's a simple love story with a bloodthirsty twist. Set in Mr. Mushnik's desolate Skid Row flower shop, the musical opens as a despondent Mushnik is preparing to close his failing business for good. The doors stay open though, at the insistence of Mushnik's shy assistant Seymore, who presents the boss with "Audrey II," an exotic new plant guaranteed to attract more customers. The plant is named after the sweet and sexy co-worker, Audrey, who has captured Seymore's heart.

As Audrey II grows by leaps and bounds, so does Seymore's success. But fame and fortune come at a price, as Seymore discovers Audrey II's insatiable appetite for human blood! At first Seymore can satisfy the plant with drops of his own blood, but as its demands of "feed me" become increasingly insistent, Seymore must serve up unsuspecting victims.

Complete with a Greek chorus of 1960s "doo-wop" girls, Little Shop of Horrors became the highest-grossing and third longest running musical Off-Broadway history, playing over 2,000 performances. Madison Rep's presentation is directed by Pam Kriger with musical direction by Randy Swiggum. The cast includes Jeff Dumas as Seymore, Michelle Smith as Audrey, Bill Theisen as Mr. Mushnik and Bob Boles in multiple roles as Orin Scrivello, DDS; a derelict; Bernstein; Snip and Luce.

Marilyn Ako, Malkia Stampley and Tonya Watson are the trio of "doo-wop" girls. Rounding out the cast is Kevin Warren as the voice of Audrey II and Jacob Mullis as the plant manipulator. Costume design is by Sharon Sobel, set design by Frank Schneeberger, and lighting design by Michael Klaers.

Opening night patrons are invited to a post-show reception at Deb & Lola's restaurant following the performance. Post-performance discussions are open to the public and will be held on Sunday, July 26 and Wednesday, August 5. Ticket prices are $20 for Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday performances and $25 for Friday and Saturday performances and are available at the Civic Center Box Office or by calling (608) 266-9055, TTD (608) 267-2674. Group rates are available. For more information call the Rep at (608) 256-0029.

Off The Wall Mounts Production of Oscar Wilde's "Salome"

Milwaukee - Oscar Wilde's Salome is presented by Dale Gutzman's new theater company "Off The Wall Productions," dedicated to producing experimental plays often too controversial for his mainstream theater company.

Salome is a hallucinatory exploration of the artist's obsession with sensation and the dangers of passion unbridled by reason. It plays freely with gender and sexual transformation. It outrages with its sensuous corruption of a Bible story, and it takes the audience on a journey into man's darkest secrets. Wilde, who became a champion of Gay Rights, did everything possible to disguise his radical messages beneath the surface language of the play.

Dale Gutzman's production of Salome strips the artifice away and explores the raw nerves of the play in a very adult, very funny, very naughty production - the kind of entertainment Wilde and his "green carnation clique" indulged in when they read his works aloud in the brothels and saloons of London.

Playing Salome, the princess who danced the dance of the seven veils and demanded the head of John the Baptist, will be Sarah Sokolovic. Gutzman, himself, plays King Herod, the monarch whose sexual obsession leads to his destruction. Karl Miller plays the young Syrian Captain whose feelings for the page, played by Trung Teiu, are shattered by Salome's seduction.

Monica Degnan Hobler plays Herodias, wife to Herod and former wife to Herod's brother. Braden Moran will play John the Baptist, whose strange beauty drives Salome mad. Also in the cast are Vincent Lombardo, Lawrence Lukasavage, David Cauldwell, Dennis Johnson, Ellen Klawuhn, Eric Nelson and members of the audience.

This production uses 1920's recordings of gender-bending love songs, including a rare version of Bing Crosby singing a song called "Gay Love." The show will involve characters lip-syncing to these songs in the manner of drag cabaret shows. The play will be presented at the Circlestage Theater, 783 N. Jefferson St. on July 23, 24, 25, 30, 31, and August 1. Circlestage Theater is Milwaukee's only theater in the round. Tickets are $12. For more information, times of the productions and ticket reservations, please call (414) 466-4049.

Urban Voice Series at Woodland Pattern

Milwaukee - Woodland Pattern Book Center is pleased to announce Urban Voice, a reading series featuring local and emerging writers and an open mic. This series, made possible by a generous grant from the Bradley Foundation, will be held the third Friday of each month, beginning September 1998, at Woodland Pattern, 720 E. Locust Street.

Urban Voice is a place for talented local and emerging writers to be heard. They may be writers of poetry or fiction who work as professors or truck drivers, or perhaps they are students or retirees. The plan is to mix and match the diverse writers in our community to broaden audiences and expand boundaries and tastes.

The open mic will provide a venue for new voices, and will give local writers a chance to try out new material. Some of the voices that will be heard this fall include: Anna Fritz, Jen Benka, and Kathy Lester. A complete fall schedule will be announced this summer.

The evening will include facilitated Q&A sessions with the featured writers, interactive poetry, games and more. Open mic opportunities will be on a first-come-first-serve basis for a reduced admission fee of $2. General admission is $3. Refreshments will be for sale from Riverwest's Sage Cafe. For more information call (414) 263-5001.

At the heart of the project is a series of free dance events in unconventional venues throughout Bay View.

Events range from site-specific improvisations in South Shore Park to tap interludes in local cafes; from a ten-week multi-arts residency at Trowbridge Elementary School to special programming for children and seniors at the Bay View Community Center.

The festival will run for one week from July 10 through July 16. Thirty-one classic Warner Bros. films will be shown in Grande Oriental fashion in the main house ON THE big screen.

Rebel Without a Cause #59, The Wild Bunch #80, The Jazz Singer #90, Goodfellows #94, The Searchers #96, and The Unforgiven #98.

Special festival passes are on sale for $60. They are good for one person and good for all films in the festival. There are also day passes for $15, good for the day you purchase them. If you do not have a pass, regular prices of $6.75 general admission and $4.50 for children and senior citizens will apply .

Many local businesses have helped to make this film event very special by donating prizes to be given out during the festival. The Oriental Theater hopes this once-in-a-lifetime festival will be a nice addition for Milwaukee, The City of Festivals. Please see the Film section of the Calendar in this issue for dates and times.

In Step

Although the Danceworks studio has been located in the former St. Mary's Academy in Bay View since 1995, the eight-year old dance organization did not launch its own company, DPC (Danceworks Performance Company), until last year. Dance Bay View will introduce DPC to the Bay View Community in an intimate, interactive way. "This micro-cultivation of our local community," said Artistic Director Sarah Wilbur, "helps us promote the studio as a neighborhood resource, a creative arts center right in Bay View. ..." Ballet Wisconsin to Bring "Peter and the Wolf" to Milwaukee Pride

Milwaukee — Join Ballet Wisconsin for the story of Peter, a clever and brave little boy who was not afraid of the Wolf, at 12:30 and 4:30 p.m. Saturday, August 29, on the Children's Stage at this year's festival. This is Ballet Wisconsin's first appearance at PrideFest.

Prokofiev's lively and famous score to "Peter and the Wolf" assigns a different instrument to each character for a wonderful tool to teach children about different musical instruments. The production follows Peter to a meadow to meet his friends — a lively little bird, an accident-prone duck, and a sneaky cat — as they try to capture the ferocious Wolf.

Expect inventive costumes by Sam Pergande and a life-size tree.

Ballet Wisconsin was founded by its artistic director, Yves de Bouteiller, in 1991, and originally named "Et toi, tu danses?" It was renamed early this year.

As a chamber ballet company, Ballet Wisconsin was established to keep off-season dancers dancing and give young choreographers an opportunity to build experience with professional dancers. In addition, it performs classical repertory, presents new works, and educates through teaching, touring, and community outreach.

At its facility, The Dance Center, Ballet Wisconsin teaches creative movement, pre-ballet, ballet, pointe, variations, and jazz, including a school-to-work program in collaboration with the Milwaukee High School of the Arts. The Friday, July 31, 1998 All Hell Breaks Loose.

Each of this year's award winners have shared their talent and have been dedicated to The United's mission through direct service and community advocacy and education.

Woman of the Year

Colleen Kellogg's Award as Woman of the Year is undoubtedly deserved as she has, for seven years as a teacher of English and Drama at Malcolm Shabazz City High School, initiated projects of outreach and advocacy to help establish a safe place for LGBT youth. She has also provided an outlet for students to express themselves and educate others through published articles in The Wisconsin Light and Feminist Voices.

She has been one of the organizers for staff and student training sessions in "unlearning homophobia" and has presented to classes at MATC, SAPAR , and UW-Madison. Through Colleen's drama classes she has involved students in education and outreach to other high schools about contemporary social issues such as AIDS. Colleen is someone people admire and inspires others by being an outstanding teacher, mentor and role-model.

Organization of the Year

The Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network of Wisconsin (GLESN Wisconsin) is the recipient of the Organization of the Year award. GLESN Wisconsin is part of a national association of over 65 GLESN chapters GLESN Wisconsin was formed in June, 1996 by a group of concerned people, who saw that today's students can have positive and productive experiences in school.

Accomplishments for this year include a public conversation with the Department of Public Instruction State Superintendent; contined support and advocacy of the formation of Gay-Straight Alliances in area schools; the GLESN-Expanding the Knowledge Conference, which was attended by over 270 state educators, parents, students and community members; and the GLESN Youth Scholarship Fund, which recognizes the high school seniors who have contributed to the LGBT society through their actions throughout their high school years.

Volunteer of the Year

Todd Hensley, has been a loyal volunteer at The United for several years and is know to be a bedrock of reliability and responsibility for the agency. His work with clients through the phone-line is said to be compassionate and practical. Todd's talents also include working with the Special Events Committee where he has been recognized as the primary event decorations coordinator for the Olbrich Gardens, Pink Party and Awards Dinner fund-raising for several years. His leadership is considered vital to the success of these events.

Ally of the Year

Thelma Johnson will be receiving the Ally of the Year award for her dedicated work and support for the LGBT community. The Johnson's son, Keith, came out to them Thanksgiving 1989 and at the same time told them he had AIDS. He died in April of 1992. Thelma has faithfully attended at PFLAG meetings since she learned about having a gay son, and exemplifies their motto: "When you no longer need PFLAG, PFLAG needs you."

At meetings she is the first to reach out to new attendees and has brought new people to PFLAG meetings. She went to Wausau to testify against AB-104, writes he congressmen, speaks at churches and schools and at Briarpatch. She feels one of her greatest accomplishments was speaking to the Monona Grove High School where Keith and most of her grandchildren attended. It is her personal story and the beautiful way she tells it, from a mother's heart, that is one of her greatest joys.

Man of the Year

MAGIC Picnic

Saturday, July 18th, from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., in Brittingham Park

The 25th Annual MAGIC Picnic will be held Saturday, July 19th from 1:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m. at Brittingham Park, on the beautiful shores of Monona Bay, as part of th1 1998 Madison Pride Weekend.

Long considered Madison's LGBT social event of the summer, what many people don't realize is that MAGIC Picnic is a fundraiser for many of the Madisonarea LGBT non-profit organizations. All proceeds from the picnic benefit the organizations who volunteer their time to organize and staff this event.

MAGIC Picnic is open from 1:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. with food, soda, games

As with last year, the Post-March GAYLA will include entertainment, merchandise vendors and $10 gets you a picnic meal and unlimited beer and soda.

Chad LaFlash, has been active in the Madison Gay/Lesbian Resource Center (MGLRC) for more than ten years and has provided leadership for the organization for the past three years. His work goes largely unnoticed, though the community benefits of MGLRC's projects over the past few years have been tremendous. Chad has been instrumental in establishing the monthly Pin Page in the Isthmus. He is also one of the driving forces behind the Directory, a guide to the organizations serving Madison's LGBT communities.

His initiative in designing and spearheading the 1995 and 1997 surveys of the LGBT community, its needs, its experiences, and the quality of LGBT Life in Madison, has proven to be an extraordinarily helpful document of LGBT life in the Midwest. The 1997 survey focused more on the general population's atti-tudes toward LGBT's in political and social environments. Chad LaFlash's leadership has brought MGLRC and The United together to form a new, stronger combined agency to serve Madison's LGBT community.

Tickets are available for $35 by advance purchase only. To order, call The United at (608) 255-8582. A reception begins at 6 p.m., with dinner to follow at 7 p.m.. Speaking at the dinner will be Madison Mayor, Susan Bauman. The Sheraton Hotel is located two miles south of downtown Madison across from the Dane County Coliseum.

red Schneider waxes nostalgically of his 20 years as the frontman of the B-52s, the granddaddy band of the punk-rock generation.

The Athens, Georgia band, whose "Rock Lobster" was a dance hall alternative to the disco laden euphoria of the late-70s and early-80s and "Love Shack" led the retro-flavored boom of the early-90s music scene, returns to the airwaves and records bins after a six-year absence with an 18-song greatest hits collection, "Time Capsule: Songs For A Future Generation." The group is also embarking on a summer long tour with the Pretenders.

Featuring original bandmates -

But this album is a good representation. We put on obscure ones that no one but me liked. It's a good overview," he says. We have live tapes, but I'd rather see a dance remix of our stuff come out, a party mix. Our music lends itself to that style of mixing - a new wave dance style - with more rhythms and melodies than what's going on today."

Since the band's last album in 1992, Schneider has kept busy writing for other groups. He also released his first solo album, "Just Fred," in 1996.

Despite disappointing sales and mixed reviews, Schneider says he's pleased and proud of his solo outing a dark, moody, pop-oriented recording. "With all the records being made, it's hard to get noticed," he says. "I felt I wrote some of my best lyrics ever.

Bombs Away! The B-52's Fred Schneider Speaks Out

Kate Pierson, Keith Strickland, Cindy Wilson and Schneider - the new album includes two newly recorded tracks, "Debbie," an ode to fellow '70s icon Deborah Harry, who took the band under her wings when she was fronting Blondie, and "Hallucinating Pluto."

"We always did it our way, and this album shows that.... We still do songs our way. The new songs don't sound like anything that's going on in today's scene. They have the same raw energy of our original songs," he says. "We'd rather have radio come around to us, than have us come around to them. It worked with 'Love Shack.' No one wanted to play it, then no one would stop playing it." While "Time Capsule" is a singledisc release, Schneider would have liked it to be a double disc release. "For everyone will always be something missing.

Maybe some of them were too angry, but it was a reflection of my life at the time and the things I was going through at the time. I expressed it in song all my buried resentments and frustrations. I wanted to write something more serious than what the band had been doing."

He also ventured into the retail arena too in May, opening Form and Func-tion, a medium-priced antique shop in New York's SoHo district.

Born in New Jersey, Schneider moved to Georgia as a kid and attended the University of Georgia. He wrote lots of poetry and used to hangout reading the band began playing gigs throughout New York. With their funky, psychedelic look, complete with thrift store aesthetic, beehive hairdos and surreal tunes, they became the rave of the underground post punk movement.

Their debut album, produced by music mogul Chris Blackwell, sold more than 500,000 copies and spawned several band released Bouncing Off The Satellites, which was recorded shortly before Wilson's death. But the tragedy of his loss forced the group to take some time off an rethink their future. Three-years later, they finally reemerged, and released what would become their biggest hit to date, "Cosmic Thing," which spawned the number one charting "Love Shack," and

"To me, it [being gay] is just a fact. It's sort of obvious, I'm not Mr. Macho. It's a part of my life, but not the main part."

hits, including, "Planet Claire," "52 Girls" and "Rock Lobster."

"For a lot of people, we made their high school years a lot easier. We made them realize there were other weirdoes out there. We were a good alternative to show tunes," he jokes.

"We set out to entertain friends, and we turned out to be a band on a major label," he says. "We're a really good pop rock band with a twist. We write about everything. No one sings like I do. When other do parodies of me, they stink."

The band went on to score other successes with 1980's Wild Planet, and scored with such hits as "Private Idaho" and "Party Out Of Bounds." In 1982, they released "Mesopotamia," produced by David Byrne, and in 1983, they held court with Whammy.

But the biggest turning point in the band's career, however, was not any chart topping song or album release, but the death of Ricky in 1985 from AIDS-related causes.

"It almost ended the band. Cindy and Keith didn't want to keep going. Kate and I respected their wishes," he recalls. "I couldn't have done the band without them. We all sort of went into hibernation."

Challenging for the band was the decision not to reveal Wilson's cause of death, choosing instead to attribute it to cancer, mostly at the wish of the Wilson's family. At the time, AIDS was still a relatively new disease, wrought with ignorance, discrimination and fear. And the subject was very taboo.

"I didn't know he had AIDS until he died," Schneider continues. Back then, no one talked about such things. He was the first person I knew who died of AIDS. Most people didn't know. We wanted to respect the family's wishes. When you're dealing with death, you don't need tabloid TV in your face."

The band until Wilson's sister and bandmate Cindy, felt comfortable talking about it, before they went public about it.

"Back then no one was really talking about it. We were always ignored by the media and press, we didn't see why we should seek out the attention anyway, if now all it would get was a sensational story," he adds. "But that's why we do all the AIDS benefits. We've always done those things. We just don't promote the stuff we do to get credit."

After Wilson's death, the B-52s, the other top-40 hits including "Roam" and "Deadbeat." The album went on to sell more than four million copies, the most a B-52s album ever sold.

"We were totally surprised by its success. We've long been underrated and underappreciated, and most of the big magazines like Rolling Stone and such have long dismissed us," Schneider says. "We were very pleased by the reaction. We didn't do anything different than be ourselves, but this time, people caught on."

In 1992, they returned with "Cosmic Thing," this time to less stellar results. It was the last thing they recorded until this year, aside from the theme song to mid-1990s movie, "The Flintstones."

As for being gay himself, Schneider says it took him a long time to feel comfortable enough to talk publicly about it, without fear of negative fallout on his or the band's career.

"When no one else was doing it, I wasn't. I didn't want that kind of attention," the singer says.

"Living in Athens, GA, my friends knew, but it wasn't a time to be too militant. I lived amongst the rednecks. When you're a public figure, you are wary. There are more cons. If you are in that position and you come out, you have to positive about your life and make a positive statement. I wasn't at that place at the time," he says. "To me, it's just a fact. It's sort of obvious, I'm not Mr. Macho. It's a part of my life, but not the main part."

He says things are much easier for pop musicians today than when he first came onto the scene. "Elton John has finally come out and kd lang. It's painful to deny, but it's painful to come out. Still, if you don't do it, you poison yourself," he says.

As for the idea that the B-52s disappeared or aren't musically hip any longer, Schneider dismisses the notion.

"It just goes to show that people don't pay attention," he adds. "If we're a novelty, we're a 20-year old novelty band. ... We were a novelty band when most others seem like novelties to us. If people think of us as novelties after 20 yeas, they're pretty stupid."

The B-52's and The Pretenders will play at the Marcus Amphitheater on July 14th.

IN STEP sports

Lesbians and Sports

by Esther Rothblum

ntil recently, there was little open discussion about lesbians in sports. The media focused on Billie Jean King's palimony suit, Martina Navratilova's break-up with her romantic partner, and the lesbian presence in professional golf. Of course, lesbian sports fans could give you the names of lesbian athletes, coaches, and media sports reporters--but these women were very, very closeted.

Now Pat Griffin has written the book Strong Women, Deep Closets: Lesbians and Homophobia in Sports. "I've been a lesbian athlete and coach myself so a big part of this book comes from my very own experience," she told me in a recent interview, "and over the past 15 years or so I've taken on this topic as a semi-crusade.

Pat, herself played sports in high school and college, and then went on to coach high school and college students. She lived with her lesbian lover but dated the high school wrestling coach for "cover." As she writes in her book: "I remember a teacher evaluation meeting I had with the principal of the high school where I taught and coached. He complimented me because 'I presented such a good image for physical education, not like some of the other women P.E. teachers and coaches in the country.' Though he never explicitly mentioned being a lesbian, I knew exactly what he meant and cowered further back in my closet."

women are afraid of being called lesbians and they resent lesbians and blame them for having caused this 'image problem.' I want women in sports to realize that it's to their advantage to work together against that kind of intimidation - that's how women's sports is going to grow. It's not going to grow by women being embarrassed by the lesbians and insisting that the lesbians be closeted, or being defensive about their own femininity. Whenever women put energy into that, they're taking energy away from being strong women and being the best athletes and coaches they can be."

"I wish there were more lesbians that could come out," Pat continued. "Some of it is internalized homophobia. Some of it is the nature of athletics - athletes and coaches are often not particularly political. Coaches don't want to do anything that is controversial, especially in the Division I college level where it could hurt their recruiting efforts." Pat finds that Division II or III coaches are often more open about their lesbianism. "they don't have that public scrutiny and they're less dependent on recruiting."

Even lesbian fans are invisible. A recent article in the Advocate was entitled "Phantom Fans: Nobody wants to admit they're there, but the lesbian presence at professional women's basketball games is obvious." Of the two professional women's basketball leagues, Pat Griffin has found the ABL to be more openly welcoming to lesbian fans than the WNBA. She says this reflects the fact that the WNBA is controlled by the male NBA.

Increasingly, though, lesbians in sports are coming out. In its November 1997 issue, OUT Magazine reported on Division I coach Karen Weaver, who was fired as field hockey coach from Ohio State University. Now she is suing for anti-lesbian discrimination. Lesbian filmmaker and Oscar nominee Dee Mosbacher has produced the film "Out For a Change" (WomanVision Productions) about lesbians in sports.

As Pat writes in the conclusion of her book: "In my vision, women will take pride in our athleticism without apology. Women will not be constrained by socially constructed notions of femininity or compulsory heterosexuality. There will be no need to apologize about muscularity, physical competence, or passion for and commitment to sport ... In my vision of sport, women will value our relationships with other women. We will not be self-conscious about loving teammates and competitors as friends or lovers." Strong Women, Deep Closets can be obtained from Human Kinetics, 1607 North Market St., PO Box 5067, Champaign, IL 61825-5076.

Later on, Pat began to come out, first by attending lesbian events and then by speaking openly about homophobia at women's athletic conferences. After a lifetime as an athlete and coach, she is currently professor at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst in a program on social justice education. "I see myself as an educator/activist," she told me, "and a lot of that comes from my sport and physical background. I have coaches in my classes now, and some of what I say blows their minds, particularly when I talk about heterosexism. In athletics, this topic is so silent."

Strong Women, Deep Closets focuses on the fact that homophobia doesn't just affect lesbians, but all women athletes and coaches. The lesbian label is used to intimidate women. "The main message that I'd like women to get is how lesbians are demonized in sports, and how that works to the detriment of women's athletics in general," said Pat. "There is so much divisiveness among women in sports — heterosexual

"Float" Down Wisconsin During the Pride Parade

Milwaukee — PrideFest Parade Coordinator, Rick Finger, will be hosting a meeting for all people interested in designing and building a float for this year's Pride Parade. The meeting will be held on Tuesday, July 14 at 8:00 PM at the Milwaukee Eagle, 300 West Juneau Avenue. Enter the building through the parking lot entrance.

"We were really impressed with the floats at the Minnesota Pride Parade," said Rick Finger. "With a little time and ingenuity, Milwaukee can add a little excitement and flare to our parade."

An information packet will be provided to all attendees that outlines how to build a frame onto a vehicle or trailer and apply streamers, crepe, material and sideboards. The packet will also include a parade application and the parade rules. People who are unable to attend can acquire a packet by calling the PrideFest office at (414) 272-3378.

Prizes will be awarded to the first place marching unit; first place decorated car, and first place float, with a special award for the best use of the theme, "Many Worlds, One Community". Elaborate floats are encouraged. All units will pass the judges' stand on Chicago Street in front of the Survival/Revival Resale store, 246 East Chicago.

Wisconsin's Pride Parade will step off at 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 30, and follow a route that will go through Milwaukee's Downtown Area. In the past, the parade had started at noon. Rainbow flags already line the streets and more will be added during the week of the festival.

"The new, later starting time will allow people to attend church or have brunch," says Finger, "and will allow participants with floats and costumes a couple more hours to decorate and get ready."

UNIT HIGHLIGHTS

PFLAG (Parents, Families, and Friends of Lesbians and Gays) will again serve as color guards, and members from around the state have been invited to participate. PFLAG also hopes to place several billboards around the Milwaukee area in August to celebrate pride and to share their message that "someone you know and love is gay or lesbian." This year's Grand Marshall is Milwaukee-born and nationally known comedian, John McGivern. PrideFest has been informed that McGivern is now practicing his Queen's wave.

The gay a cappella group, Men Out Loud, will also appear in the parade as well as all of the award recipients.

Marching units, decorated cars, and floats can enter for $25 by Aug. 8 or $35 after Aug. 8. Individuals may join a marching group, join in at the end of the parade for free, or line the streets to wave and cheer.

ere are two of the current crop of books on HIV/AIDS. The first is compiled from a series of interviews taken at Provincetown, Massachusetts in 1996. Included are this community's responses to friends and loved ones who have HIV/AIDS and those loved ones and neighbors who are affected by it. The second book is by a gay activist and author who offers an analysis of the politics of HIV and AIDS prevention and the political and social impact these actions are having on contemporary gay men's lives

Dry Bones Breathe Gay Men Creating Post-AIDS Identities & Cultures

by James Earl Hardy

In Dry Bones Breathe, Rofes contends that gay men no longer experience AIDS as the crisis they did during the 1980s... " He explains how other factors, such as "... new treatments for opportunistic infections, the passage of time and the diversity of gay men who inhabit communities throughout this country have set in motion the transformation of gay life."

There are three sections to this book, the first of which is titled "In the Aftermath of Decimation." In this section the chapters are "Now That It's Over," "The Protease Moment Takes Hold," "Creating Post-AIDS Lives," and "Vacating the Bomb Shelters."

The following section is called "Sex After Crisis." In Chapter 5, titled "Don't Fuck With Gay Culture," Rofes examines the writings of Larry Kramer, The Advocate 1997; Andrew Sullivan, The Rise and Fall of Gay Culture; and Michelangelo Signorile, Life Outside, and wonders why these writings "tell us that love between men is bad and sex between men is vile." He says that statements "made by contemporary gay writers sound increasingly like the statements of anti-gay crusaders ..."

Rofes gives us a test at the beginning of the chapter and wonders if the reader is able to identify which statements were made by Anita Bryant, and which were made by Larry Kramer (just to pick two of them). The answers are at the end of the book. In Chapter 6, "Scapegoating Circuit Boys," he takes apart Gabriel Rotello's book Sexual Ecology: AIDS and the Destiny of Gay Men, and states that Rotello "argues that post-Stonewall gay men have upset the balance of nature by creating cultures that support promiscuity and sexual versatility." As for the circuit boys he says, "I wonder if part of the energy behind current judgments of circuit boys emerges from the difficult transition some gay men may be making into In an Epilogue titled "Alive in My Own Life Story," Rofes tells about his own actions and feelings as an HIV negative gay male, with a lover who is HIV positive. He talks about the ongoing changes that have become apparent in his, his friends and his lover's lives. He states "HIV is no longer central in my daily life. It's there, but in a diminished capacity--present but not overwhelmingly so." We also get an extensive look at his sex life, which is kind of fun. (Harrington Park Press, ISBN: 1-56023-934-4, $24.95 softcover).

Starry, Starry Night Provincetown's Response to the AIDS Epidemic by Jeanne Braham and Pamela Peterson

The narratives that make up this "small but beautifully written book" are from "members of the community infected and affected by HIV/AIDS, those who have lost partners, family, friends to the virus, those who grapple with 'survivor guilt,' those who offer services, ... and those who witnessed the dramatic arrival of protease inhibitors...."

Here are the "first-person accounts from activists, community artists, doctors and couples who lives have been deeply affected by the virus.... This is a village where most of the 3,300 population has been affected by AIDS--a place where grief is a part of the landscape....," where one-tenth of the permanent population has been claimed by the epidemic. This book tells of the "extraordinary communal responses in a close-knit community that is primarily gay."

The authors say that the spirit of Provincetown is shaped by its landscape; "a sliver of land that reaches out into the ocean like a crooked, beckoning finger ...," a shining town that Eugene O'Neill described as "hard to get to and to get out of." They describe the light, the storms and the sand avalanches that reconfigure all boundaries and the present-day feeling that the place is alive with its literary predecessors, artists and the avant-garde who populated this "Greenwich Village of the north."

Several of those interviewed suggested that "Provincetown's isolation helps people lean closer to one another, helps them move 'into the hard work of love.'" The title comes from the authors seeing the endless amount of stars twinkling under the night sky. This important book is full of memorials and tributes to all those affected by HIV and AIDS. (Brookline Books, Lumen Editions, ISBN: 9-781571-290-8, $15.95).

The following chapter is "A Framework for Low-Risk Promiscuity," and talks about the 1997 keynote address he made at the National HIV prevention Summit sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control. In "HIV Work Behind the Protease Movement," the chapters are "Closing Down Prevention Programs" and "The Final Days of AIDS Inc."

KEEPIN' IN STEP

hings for me seem to be getting back on track lately. I'm thoroughly enjoying the Honda that's replaced the Pontiac, I've made the trip down to Wolf Camera to replace my Minolta, and although it has it's ups and downs, (fortunately the ups far outweigh the downs) the boyfriend thing is going pretty well.

The Honda: I'm wondering why it's taken me so long to buy a foreign car. Back in the early 80's when American car companies couldn't build a decent car to save their lives, should have been my first clue. I will however, give the "Big 3" a little credit, as they have been building better cars in the latter part of the 90's.

Unfortunately, Pontiac's customer service department is an oxy moron and pissed me off one too many times, so I love the new car, the only thing it didn't have that I would have preferred is a 5 speed manual transmission but I can live without that. A couple of my friends don't like the car and have given it a name, Go-cart. Yes, it is smaller than any other car I've had, (it's a Prelude) but it is so much fun to drive. You know, very close to the ground, tight suspension and it's kinda sporty. It does have a back seat but it looks pretty funny with 4 people in the car, all scrunched up with our knees pushed all the way up to our chin. Nope, this car was really built for 1 or 2 people. Will I still like it in a couple of years? Who knows, but from what I hear, Honda is a pretty reliable car so at least I have that going for me.

The Camera: Right after my Minolta got stolen, I bought a little point and shoot camera that I just couldn't get used to. It felt so strange using such a tiny camera that I couldn't take it any longer, I had to have a Minol-ta. As I said, I made the trip to Wolf Camera to replace my 450-SI. Even though they cut me the best deal they could get away with, the camera body, lens and flash cost me $650.00. Hopefully my insurance company won't dick me around 'cause it's gonna take a long time for the camera to pay for itself.

The Boyfriend: About a month ago, I was at Brad's condo after bar closing. We were sitting around drinking beer and shootin' the shit when Brad's buzzer rang. I went to open the door and there he was, this tall, very cute guy standing at the door. I knew that instant that I wanted to date this guy, not knowing anything about him but I really wanted to get to know him. Turns out, his name is Josh (you know me with names beginning with a J). He has an apartment, a job, a driver's license, and a car - and he was single. With me, I'm never really looking for a boyfriend, I could be happy being single but there he was, this tall boy with the most beautiful hazel eyes, curly brown hair and a smile that makes me melt. A few phone calls later and I had persuaded him to go out with me.

The first couple of dates went very well, we both liked each other, discovered that we have almost the same taste in music and other similar interests. The next date went to hell, the details of which are not important but we did work that problem out the next day (remember the last column, I had written that column prior to us working it out). Since then, other than a couple of expected bumps, things have been going pretty damn good. He's been meeting and getting along with my friends and I've met a couple of his friends that I just adore, namely Teresa. I met her at the club Josh works at and we instantly liked each other even joking about having beautiful kids together.

Most of my friends have been very supportive, a couple have been skeptical but are now realizing that this is the real deal for me. I have taken myself off the market, packed away my little black book and have made the commitment. Will it last forever? Who knows, I lost my crystal ball but I sure as hell am going to put forth the effort.

I look forward to doing couples things with our friends Carlos & Tim, Tony & Darin and Jeff & Dino. A bunch of us spent the 4th of July boating and it was a blast. We packed up Chris's boat with beverages, food and lots of suntan lotion and made a day of it. Things like that, are all I really need. I no longer feel the need to stay out until all hours of the night, hoping to get yet another phone number. Don't get me wrong, I am still going to enjoy hitting the clubs, but I will do it with Josh (as our schedules permit) and my motivation for going out is not going to be as it had been.

These past few months have included way too much clubbing for me so it's time to pull in the reigns anyway. It's gonna be more boating trips, late afternoon house parties and other things that don't require no-doze to function the next day. Now, if we can get Chris and Jeff husbands, we would be all set.

The club scene has been a lot of fun these past couple of weeks, starting with the SSBL Fundraiser at The Ballgame. Lots of people were there including Danny Nelson hanging all over that cute little Raffle Ticket Boy that was in the In Step last year.

The other two SSBL fundraisers were at In Between where Curt always puts on the best spread (of food, keep your pants on) that you've grown to expect from he and his staff. The other was held at Woody's where you can always expect friendly bartenders and a stack of great photographs (you'll have to ask about those yourself).

Everyone is still taking about the big "?" shown in Triangle's ads. Just under a month, and we'll know what it's all about.

If you're lookin" for a great interview with Dish's owner Julia, check out the current issue of Q•Voice. The more I learn about her, the more I like and respect her for all the hard work she and her staff has put into making Milwaukee's best, lesbian owned/run night club, open to everyone (male, female, gay or straight) that wants to have a great time. Hats off to ya Julia!

The 70's Party at Mama Roux was a real hoot. There were people dressed up in some of the most flammable and colorful outfits I've seen in a long time. I also ran into Quincy, who had brought his mother for the party, she is so cute!

Club 219 has gone through some changes, the most obvious is the new paint job on the exterior. The new colors look great. In the near future, the interior will get a face-lift as well. That should be pretty exciting, as the place has not changed much in the past 10 years.

Meanwhile, the work as La Cage continues. Every time I go in there, I peak through the glass to see what's been happening, shouldn't be long before the new additions to the club are ready to serve up a great time for all of us.

That's about it for now, the next time you will see me, will be Wednesday night, the night In Step hits the streets. I will be sporting yet another set of braces that I will have to wear for another 8 to 16 months. Don't forget Madison's Pride Weekend, July 17th, 18th & 19th and as always, slower traffic keep right.
