Gay Marriage

Washington - Gay Republicans in a rare split from the party line are openly battling GOP members of Congress and the white House over a proposed Amendment to the Constitution banning same-sex marriage.

Log Cabin Republicans announced the launch of a nation-wide lobbying campaign targeting Republican elected officials and party leaders who support the ban. Senate Republicans plan to use a hearing at the Judiciary Committee to push for the Amendment.

Sen. John Cornyn, a Texas Republican and member of the committee has scheduled a subcommittee hearing to determine if the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) to find out if it has weakened by the Supreme Court gay civil rights ruling. (story)

"I believe we must do whatever it takes to safeguard the institution of marriage and ensure that the principles defined in DOMA remain the law of the land," said Cornyn, who is chairman of the subcommittee on the Constitution, civil rights and property rights.

This hearing will remind people why traditional marriage is so important for a healthy society, and will determine the extent of the threat posed to DOMA by judicial activism in light of recent court decisions and pending cases.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court is expected to rule on the constitutionality of same-sex marriage this fall. Similar cases are working their way through the court systems in several other states.

The message from Log Cabin members and allies across the nation is clear and unequivocal; hijacking the sacred Constitution of the United States of America to score political points with the radical right is completely unnecessary and will only serve to divide the American family," said Log Cabin Republican executive director Patrick Guerriero.

'As Republicans, we agree with Vice-President Cheney, who said 'I think we ought to do everything we can to tolerate and accommodate whatever kind of relationships people want to enter into.' Even former Congressman Bob Barr (R-GA), the author of the Defense of Marriage Act, is on record opposing a constitutional amendment noting that, 'A constitutional amendment is both unnecessary and needlessly intrusive and punitive.' (story) There is nothing conservative about unnecessarily tinkering with the U.S Constitution and nothing conservative about discouraging stable relationships," added Guerriero.

Log Cabin Republicans campaign will see its members writing, emailing and meeting with members of Congress and GOP party leaders urging them not to amend the Constitution.

'As a grass-roots political organization with members and chapters across the nation we are uniquely prepared to reach out to Republican leaders and make a conservative and Republican case against igniting a cultural war as we head to the 2004 elections," added Mark Mead, Log Cabin Director of Public Affairs.

The American people are looking to our nation's leaders to win the war on terror and jump start the economy. A Congressional move to amend the Constitution, and the resulting fight in states across the nation, would result in an intense cultural war that would divide the Republican party and divide the American family," Guerriero said.

Milwaukee - After listening to community input on how to improve and ensure that PrideFest remains a viable event, the PrideFest Board of Directors concluded that it is best to change the way it does business. This change entails a restructuring of Pride-Fest's governance and the recruitment of an interim board of directors.

In a meeting held on Wednesday, August 27, the PrideFest Board of Directors asked the Cream City Foundation (CCF) for help implementing PrideFest's restructuring plan.

PrideFest 2003 was held June 6-8 at Henry W. Maier Festival Park. The event attracted over 18,000 individuals to the lakefront for a celebration of the unique cultural experiences associated with the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) community. While thousands of PrideFest attendees considered the weekend a success, the event fell short of financial expectations. In the end, PrideFest ended the festival with a debt of approximately $125,000.

"We realized that even though we throw a great party, our current board does not have the funds necessary to run an event of this magnitude," said PrideFest board member Peter Minns. "We took a long, hard look at ourselves, listened to the community, and realized that we need to turn over the governance of this organization to individuals who have the expertise to make Pridecame to Cream City Foundation they are a neutral party that cares about the festival and the community as much as we do."

"We are happy to assist," said Jenny Gryniewicz, CCF's Executive Director. "We granted PrideFest its first $500 and over the years have provided seed money to a number of the festival's most popular events. Most recently, this included a $5,000 grant to the Milwaukee LGBT History Project. As a foundation and as members of the LGBT community, we believe that PrideFest plays a vital role in Milwaukee, serving as the LGBT community's largest and most visible event."

PrideFest's restructure begins with the resignation of the current board. The new interim board will determine the best way to resolve the 2003 debt, fund the 2004 Pride-Fest event, and form the new board of directors. The current PrideFest board and council members will be reorganized into a PrideFest Festival Committee which will report to the interim board. This committee will use its prior experience and knowledge to produce the 2004 festival.

The Cream City Foundation plays two vital roles as outlined in the restructuring plan: one, working with key community agencies in recruiting the interim board of directors; and two, funding the audit for the 2003 PrideFest event.

"It is critical that [the] community collaborate during this restructuring period," stated Denise Wise, CCF's Board President. "To ensure the new board has complete financial information, the CCF board of directors 2003 PrideFest audit." The timeline is aggressive to get the interim board of directors in place and complete the financial audit. The festival has given itself 30 to 45 days to complete these tasks.

Wise concluded: "CCF is pleased and impressed by PrideFest's recognition [of the need for] change and their willingness to act on making the critical changes. Together we will do everything we can to assure the continuance of a yearly Milwaukee LGBT festival at the Henry W.

Maier Festival grounds."

The Cream City Foundation's mission is to build a strong foundation and infrastructure in the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender community by distributing funds to emerging groups and programs that enhance the quality of life for LGBT people. To achieve its mission, CCF: acts as a catalyst working to promote charitable giving within the LGBT community; grants funds for projects and programs; and offers assistance and education sessions to LGBT-serving organizations.

PrideFest's mission is to advocate, celebrate and educate both the general community and the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender community with regard to all aspects of the LGBT culture. To accomplish this, PrideFest produces an annual Pride celebration. Educational events include, but are not limited to, exhibits, lectures, art and community outreach, which fully display the diversity of LGBT culture.

Another 9-11, Another Attack by Religious Extremists

By William Attewell

eptember 11 markes the second anniversary one of the darkest days in recent memory. After plotting for years, religious extremists commandeered four commercial airliners and damaged or destroyed two national landmarks, the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. The terror might have even been worse but for the actions of a group of passengers on one of the flights who thwarted their hijackers. It was a horror so traumatizing to the American psyche that today we can only refer to it as the date that changed America

As the details of the terror attacks emerged so did the stories of gay heroes and victims caught in the maelstrom. We learned of Flight 93 passenger Mark Bingham, Flight 77 pilot David Charlebois and NYFD chaplain Fr. Mychal Judge. We also learned that nearly fifty of the gay victims left behind life partners in relationships that ranged from 11 to 23 years.

Americans opened their hearts and their wallets to the victims and their families. Our country came together in a way no one might have imagined. The single discordant note came from one of America's own religious extremists, Jerry Falwell. who blamed gay people as one of the groups responsible for

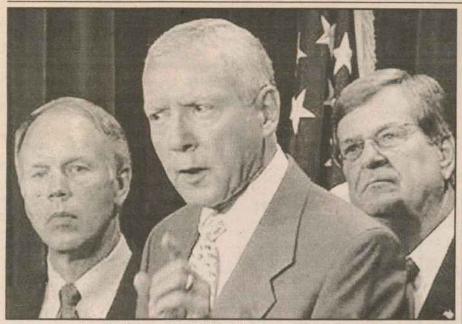

How ironic that on this second anniversary of 9-11 Wisconsin legislators will permit yet another attack by religious extremists on their fellow citizens. After plotting for years, the Family Research Institute of Wisconsin will see the Assembly Judiciary committee vote today to move the so-called "Defense of Marriage Act" (AB475 and its senatorial sister SB233) to consideration and likely passage by the

We know that 8,232 of Wisconsin's same-sex couples optionally chose to identify their relationships on the 2000 Census. We also know that in the last decade more than 10,000 divorces have been granted to heterosexual couples, including some of the bill's sponsors, who apparently don't recognize their unions and being between only "one man and

A bill that supposedly defends marriage by merely replacing one heterosexual definition with another needs to be called by what it truly is: the Perpetuation Of Ongoing Prejudice. That's right, DOMA really is POOP. It needs to be flushed from the legislative calendar.

That won't happen however. Political posturing and pandering to voter base bigotry are far more important to bills' sponsors than finding ways to truly defend, recognize and honor all of Wisconsin's everyday heroes: the millions of Wisconsin citizens of all sexual orientations who live - and in many cases raise children - in stable, loving relationships. The shame in Capitol should be palpable. How sad for Wisconsin's LGBT families, their friends and all supporters of full equality for all people.

They will remember September 11th's DOMA vote for what it truly is: Another 9-11 attack on core American values by religious extremists.

Republican Senator Orrin Hatch (Utah) has proposed compromise versions of a hate crimes law that most gay rights groups say is unacceptable.

Frist Blocks Vote on Hate Crimes Bill

Washington — A popular foreign aid authorization bill has been stalled since July and become hostage to an effort by Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist (R-Tenn.) to block a vote on a hate crimes bill that includes protections for gays.

Frist, acting on the wishes of other Senate Republican leaders, stopped the foreign aid bill from coming to the Senate floor in July after Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) announced he would move to attach the hate crimes legislation to that bill in the form of an amendment.

Capitol Hill observers say Kennedy has enough votes lined up to pass such an amendment, with a number of Republican senators expected to support it. Kennedy, the author and chief sponsor of the hate crimes bill, took steps to attach it to the foreign aid bill after Frist refused to allow Kennedy to bring the legislation to the floor as a freestanding bill.

The bill, officially known as S. 966, the Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act, would give the federal government authority to prosecute hate crimes based on a person's sexual orientation, gender or disability. The bill has 49 cosponsors and enjoys bipartisan support, with as many as 60 senators expected to vote for it in the form of an amendment or a freestanding bill.

Sen. Gordon Smith (R-Ore.) signed on as the bill's chief co-sponsor and its lead Republican backer.

Gay activists consider the hate crimes bill an important part of their legislative agenda. They note that gays continue to fall victim to hate crimes in cities and towns throughout the country.

The Senate passed similar versions of the hate crimes measure in 1999 and 2000 in the form of amendments to other bills. The legislation died in House-Senate conference committees after the Republicancontrolled House of Representatives refused to support the bill.

Syndicated newspaper columnist Robert Novak drew attention to the latest saga of the hate crimes bill last week, when he noted in a column that the Kennedy-Frist confrontation symbolizes the near stalemate in the Senate between the two parties.

In addition to the hate crimes bill, Kennedy said he planned to seek to attach a minimum wage bill to the foreign aid authorization measure. Senator Richard Lugar (R-Ind.) introduced the foreign aid bill in close consultation with the White House and Secretary of State Colin Powell.

"While opposing Kennedy's measures, the Republican leadership does not command the votes to defeat them and does not even want these issues debated," Novak wrote in an Aug. 8 column.

Novak, who is considered highly informed on Republican members of Congress, appeared to confirm the views of gay leaders that the hate crimes bill would pass if allowed to come up for a vote.

"Frist cannot find a majority against the Kennedy bill," Novak wrote. "Indeed, it is now the Kennedy-Smith bill," he wrote.

Stephanie Cutter, Kennedy's communications director, called Novak's assessment "correct." She said Kennedy would seek out another bill to attach the hate crimes measure if Frist continues to block the foreign aid bill from reaching the Senate floor.

Cutter said Kennedy also remains open to a compromise with Senator Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee and the leading GOP opponent of Kennedy's version of the hate crimes bill.

Activists Reject Hatch Proposals

Hatch has proposed several versions of his own, which gay activists and Senate Democrats have considered unacceptable. One of Hatch's versions would give states veto power over federal prosecution of hate crimes.

Gay rights attorneys say such a provision would defeat the purpose of the bill, which is to provide for federal intervention in cases where state or local officials refuse to prosecute hate crimes.

Andy Fisher, press secretary for Lugar, said the Indiana senator would not have objected to Kennedy's proposal to attach the hate crimes bill to the foreign aid authorization bill, which Lugar wrote. Lugar is chair of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Both Democrats and Republicans have praised Lugar's bill as an important measure needed to clarify and update U.S. foreign aid programs.

Protesters Jeer Students at School for Gay Teens

New York — Picketers who waved signs strewn with anti-gay epithets greeted students as they started their first day at a high school that was expanded to accommodate gay and lesbian teens.

But supporters of the 72 students and seven teachers at Harvey Milk High School on Astor Place shielded the teens from the protesters as they came to school.

Many of the protesters decried homosexuality as being against God's laws, calling the teens sodomites and other offensive names.

But others were on hand to defend the students. "For those of you who say this school is unnecessary, I would refer you to some of the signs and comments from over there," said City Council Speaker Gifford Miller as he pointed to the picketers. Education officials announced the $3.2 million expansion of the school in July. The officials said it would eventually house 170 students.

Gay Buying Power Grows To $485 Billion

Washington — The total buying power of the U.S. gay, lesbian and bisexual (GLB) adult population in 2003 has grown to $485 billion, up from $451 billion a year ago.

The power of the so-called pink buck is tracked by an ongoing joint study by Witeck-Combs Communications and MarketResearch.com. The research is used as a benchmark cited frequently by business analysts.

The new figures make the LGBT market the third largest in the US, after African-Americans at $688-billion and Hispanics at $653-billion. The fourth largest group is Asian Americans at $344-billion.

In releasing the current analysis, Bob Witeck, CEO of Witeck-Combs Communications said, "Validating buying power helps measure the economic contributions of the gay, lesbian and bisexual population. Buying power, however, does not equal affluence nor does it imply that same-sex households are wealthier than others. In fact, there is evidence suggesting gay males may earn slightly less than their heterosexual counterparts."

Based on several population samples, the analysis conservatively benchmarked 6 percent to 7 percent of the adult U.S. population as gay, lesbian or bisexual — or between 14 to 16 million individuals over the age of 18. The estimate assumes that average income patterns within the GLB population generally reflect those of the population as a whole over the age of 18, that the population may be adjusted to take into account a higher proportion of males, and based on same-sex household Census data, that gays and lesbians appear more likely to live in metropolitan areas than the population as a whole.

Given the growing visibility of the gay consumer dollar. Witeck noted that corporate America is paying attention as shown by the popularity of new television trends such as Bravo's "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy," and innovative marketing campaigns by many Fortune 500 companies to target same-sex households.

"As consultants, we work to understand buying patterns, attitudes and preferences of gay consumers," Witeck said.

"Buying power is just one part of this story. By digging deeper, we've also learned that one in five same-sex households have children under the age of 18, and usually have needs similar to other families, while single gay men tend to be early adopters and often enjoy upscale products. Smart marketers look for these distinctions and develop strategies to target this sizable market segment," he added.

Action Wisconsin Announces Sept. 30 Lobby Day

Madison — As state legislators began to recruit sponsors for yet another attempt to ban same-sex marriage recognition, Action Wisconsin announced it will host a lobby day for LGBT equality in Madison on September 30.

The goals of the lobby day will be to ask lawmakers to vote against the anti-marriage bill, support full civil marriage equality, and support domestic partner benefits for state employees.

"Too many legislators in Wisconsin either don't understand the discrimination facing same-sex couples or they think LGBT people are a disposable constituency," Action Wisconsin executive director Chris Ott said. "It is essential that large numbers of people from every corner of the state turn out to the lobby day in order to demonstrate that we will not sit by quietly while our rights are violated."

Recently, a number of state legislators have publicly lined up against equality. In the Fond du Lac Reporter, state Senator Carol Roessler (R-Oshkosh) sneered at the notion that samesex couples deserve respect under the law, "It's no different than my best girlfriend or my dearest niece," Roessler said. "I love them, but it is not a marriage." State Sen. Tom Reynolds was quoted in the Milwaukee Shepherd Express: "It seems to me that the idea of treating that sort of relationship as marriage makes a mockery of the institution."

"Unfortunately, too many of our lawmakers seem to lack basic human compassion," said Ott. "We hope that having LGBT people and our families sit down face-to-face with these lawmakers will help them have a heart. It will help them better understand our lives and the very real need for equality." Action Wisconsin will coordinate the constituent meetings with state legislative representatives and senators. The day will begin on September 30 with a citizen lobby training at 12pm, followed by the meetings from 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Interested individuals can contact Action Wisconsin at info@actionwisconsin.org for more details. The organization is looking for regional volunteers across the state to help coordinate local participation in the event.

Action Wisconsin is also asking those people who cannot attend to participate from afar by contacting legislators via phone or email on the Sept. 30.

The lobby day will build upon the momentum created by a strong and growing statewide response to the soon-to-be introduced anti-marriage bill. In just four days, over 700 messages were sent urging legislators not to join the anti-marriage bill through Action Wisconsin's new online action center. So far, individuals in at least 107 of the 132 Wisconsin voting districts have sent messages. The campaign lasts until August 18, the deadline for legislators to join as co-sponsors of the bill.

CCF's Inaugural Women's Golf Outing a Success

Milwaukee — Despite temperatures that rose above 100° and a last-minute change of venue, compliments of the Milwaukee County Park System closing down Dineen Golf Course, Cream City Foundation's (CCF) first ever Women's Only Night golf outing was a rousing success.

We had 40 women golfers attend and we raised nearly $4,000," said Jennifer Gryniewicz, CCFis executive director. "Our goal was three fold: one, we wanted to raise funds to carry out CCF's mission; two, we wanted to provide a fun and affordable social outlet for lesbian women and their straight allies; and three, we wanted to increase the awareness within the female community that they can be a driving force for social justice but they need to become involved in philanthropic giving. The first two goals we were a qualitative success; as for the third goal, we will have to wait and see.

The evening began with a picnic dinner sponsored by BOXX Magazine, followed by a fabulously fun group golf lesson with a local PGA professional. At sundown, the ladies grabbed their glow-in-the-dark necklaces and golf balls and hit the links. The wide range of scores highlighted the varying levels of golf experience, but everyone had fun. A survey passed out at the end of the night revealed that 100% of the respondents would participate again. "That's all we can ask for," said Denise Wise, CCF board president.

With the success of this first time event, CCF says they plan to make it an annual affair.

Madison NOW Focuses on Positive Body Images

Madison - In an effort to combat negative images of women in the media and fashion industry, and raise the level of awareness of positive body image for women and men, the Madison chapter of the National Organization of Women is producing a play called "Smash the Beautocracy - A Play on Fashion." The production is set for Thursday, Sept. 25th at the Bartell Theater, 113 E. Mifflin St., at 7:30 p.m. A fund-raiser for Madison NOW, all proceeds raised are to be used to help develop a peer counseling program on positive body image.

"It is important as feminists to understand the negative and destructive effects that unrealistic and negative imagery has on the minds of young people, and how the bombardment of these images has on the mental health of young girls," says Kristen Fricchione, Madison NOW president.

Fricchione says the Madison NOW chapter has worked hard to make this project a community-based project drawing on the voices and experiences of real women and men in the Madison area. Directed by Tara Ayres and written in part by Kathy Utley of Madison NOW, the show includes original monologues and ensemble performances written and performed by cast

'We hope that audience members will be entertained as well as appreciative and understanding of how damaging our mass media culture demeans the real value of women, and men too. From the beginning we saw the creative process of the scriptwriting as a collaborative process, creating monologues and ensemble performances directly from the real voices and experiences of women and men in the Madison area. Audience members will be treated to fresh and authentic performance that we hope reflects how real these issues are to our community," says Utley.

Professor Carole Vopat Wins Teaching Award

Madison - Carole G. Vopat, a 33-year veteran of the University of Wisconsin-Parkside who developed the school's women's studies program and designed its first course in gay and lesbian literature. was honored in early September with a Teaching Excellence Award from the UW Board of Regents. Vopat is a professor of English and Women's Studies.

The award recognizes outstanding career achievements by individuals and an exceptional commitment to teaching by academic departments or programs. Nominees underwent a rigorous campus selection process, which included support from students. Vopat will receive $5,000 for professional development.

Regent Charles Pruitt of Milwaukee presented the award to Prof. Vopat. Again and again, he said, students write that Vopat's teaching changed their lives: "Her students do not just take a course from her, they enter, struggle and eventually thrive and soar.

In thanking the regents for the award. Vopat said she appreciated the board's commitment to quality teaching, even in the face of budget cuts, for the benefit of all students. "I want to give them that fervor and passion I learned in college," Vopat said. "I believe education makes us better and helps us to rise.'

"I want to give my students what was given to me: a world transformed through education and literature. I try to open their minds and hearts through literature so that they can enjoy all that life has to offer; so that they may transcend the lives they were given, and realize that they don't have to play the cards they were dealt: literature - education - can deal them a whole new hand."

Professor Vopat has also played a supportive role in Milwaukee's women's community since the 1970s.

CCF to Introduce New Executive Director and Board Members

Milwaukee — The board of directors of the Cream City Foundation (CCF) invites you to come meet their new executive director and new board members on September 18 5 to 7 p.m. at 1451 Renaissance Place. The evening is an informal Donor Appreciation Reception and an opportunity for everyone to learn more about CCF and the individuals who will guide its mission.

Jennifer Gryniewicz became CCFis third executive director in its twenty-one year history in April of 2003. Jenny comes to CCF with a highly successful record of community fundraising in the Milwaukee area. As campaign director of United Way in Waukesha County, she focused on workplace giving; prior to that, Jenny was development director at the Grand Avenue Club, a direct service agency.

"Jenny's experience is sure to be a creative catalyst that will increase charitable giving in the LGBT community," said Denise Wise, president of CCF's board of directors. "Equally important is her attention to future giving, and she has already come up with a number of strategies to promote philanthropy from the younger members of our community."

New board members who have signed on for three-year terms include: Carl Bogner, Carol Roberts and Dan Simoneau.

Bogner is an instructor at the UW-Milwaukee Film Department and is executive director of the Milwaukee LGBT Film/Video Festival, a position that he has held for the last six years. The Milwaukee LGBT Film Festival is internationally known for its high quality and diverse array of films.

"I am extremely interested in supporting and expanding CCF's current scholarships for LGBT youth through the John Cowles Scholarship fund, and, in general, stimulating and supporting diverse cultural activities and energies," said Bogner. "CCF was instrumental in providing the LGBT Film Festival a consistent bedrock of support that has allowed the festival to blossom. Now I will have the opportunity to encourage similar innovative programs in our community. I am extremely honored."

"Carol is a dynamo," said former CCF president and current member-at-large, Tony Rhodes, speaking of Carol Roberts. "She started an LGBT employee group that fought for safe places and domestic partnership benefits at her workplace, eFunds. Their group accomplished that mission within three years. Her experience will certainly be a huge benefit when we are working with the struggles of emerging groups."

Dan Simoneau is a program developer, as well as the membership chair for the Transparent Watercolor Society of America. He served two-years on the Mayor's Task Force for the Arts in Lewiston, Maine. "I would like to grow the organization and also grow community awareness of CCF, not only in Milwaukee but throughout southeastern Wisconsin," said Simoneau.

"Dan's expertise in computers, financial accountability and the arts makes him an attractive candidate for any board," said CCF's vice-president Robert Starshak. "We couldn't be more pleased that he has chosen to share his talents with us."

The September 18 event is free and open to the public, however donations will be accepted. Complimentary hors d'oeuvres and beverages will be served, along with a cash bar. A short program at 6:15 p.m. will feature two numbers from Men's Voices of Milwaukee, a look back at what CCF accomplished in the past year, and a look ahead to what they hope to achieve in the future.

Equality Knocks Event a Success

Milwaukee — On September 6, volunteers for Equality Knocks, a unique grassroots action program of the LGBT Center Advocates, took to the streets for the third time this summer.

Equality Knocks targets certain legislators based on their LGBT legislative voting history, then goes directly to the targeted legislators district to lobby voters and identify and organize non-gay support for LGBT issues of equality. Equality Knocks gathers and delivers constituent letters, then arranges a face-to-face constituent meeting with the targeted legislator. The non-gay allies are recorded and used in the future for mobilizing non-gay support of upcoming LGBT issues.

In the last Equality Knocks project, canvassers took to the streets of Jeff Plale (WI Senate District 7) who has yet to confirm his commitment to voting against the anti-marriage Senate Bill 233 (SB 233) and Assembly Bill 475 (AB 475) that would explicitly ban marriage equality for same-sex couples. Equality Knocks will deliver over 100 constituent letters to Senator Plale in a face-to-face constituent meeting with gay and nongay allies and set up phone banks to have constituents call him and express their opinion against these bills.

Equality Knocks is organized by the LGBT Center Advocates, an advocacy organization affiliated with the Milwaukee LGBT Community Center that is working to win equal rights for the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender community. For more information about the Center Advocates or Equality Knocks project, please call (414) 271-2656 ext.119, or email outvote@mkelgbt.org.

COLOMBIAN PARTNER BILL KILLED

Bogota - Conservatives and other supporters of President Alvaro Uribe Vélez killed a gay civil-union bill in Colombia's Senate Aug. 26.

They blocked both a vote and further debate on the measure which would have extended spousal rights to registered samesex couples in areas such as job benefits. insurance, pensions, social security, alimony, inheritance, health-care decisions and family violence. It also would have banned discrimination based on "sexual identity, gender or orientation."

The vote to block was 55 to 32 with 15

Three ex-presidents of Colombia spoke in support of the measure. Alfonso López Michelsen, Julio César Turbay and César Gaviria Trujillo, who now is secretary general of the Organization of American States, all lobbied for its passage.

EUROPRIDE STAGED IN MANCHESTER

Manchester - Police officers marching in their uniforms and gay actor Sir Ian McKellen were big hits at the Europride parade in Manchester, England, Aug. 24.

The parade moves to a different

European city each year.

"The parade featured jugglers, fireeaters, stilt walkers, royal look-alikes, Wonder Woman and characters from the Wizard of Oz," said the Manchester Evening News.

The lead contingent was the world's largest rainbow flag. Flag creator Gilbert Baker constructed the quarter-mile-long monster to celebrate the gay symbol's 25th anniversary.

DAILY PAPER LAUNCHES GAY SUPPLEMENT

Buenos Aires — One of Buenos Aires, Argentina's major daily newspapers, Crónica, has launched a weekly, 16-page gay supplement.

couple kissing.

I suspect BA is the only city in the world where a major newspaper includes a free gay supplement each week," said local activist Tom Hanks.

Buenos Aires began offering gay civil unions on July 18. Registered couples receive spousal rights in areas such as insurance, health care, hospital visitation and bank loans.

TASMANIA TO REGISTER GAY COUPLES

The Australian state of Tasmania OK'd the nation's first partnership registry Aug. 29. It will come into effect Jan. 1.

The legislation creating the registry passed the Legislative Council by a vote of 7 to 5. It had passed the House of Assembly earlier, 22 to 3.

The law grants couples - whether the relationship is sexual or not, whether they live together or not, and whether they even choose to register or not - a broad range of matrimonial rights, and allows registered individuals to adopt a partner's biological child.

Tasmanian Attorney General Judy Jackson said "the registration model passed ... stands alone as the best scheme of registration nationally and internationally."

JANIS IAN MARRIES

Toronto — Seventies pop singer Janis Ian, best known for her Grammy-winning song "At Seventeen", married her partner, Patricia Snyder, at Toronto City Hall Aug. 27.

Court decisions this summer legalized ordinary marriage for same-sex couples in the provinces of Ontario and British Columbia. The federal government is in the process of opening up the institution nationwide.

lan, 52, and Snyder, a Nashville lawyer, have been together 14 years.

Foreign same-sex couples can travel to Ontario or British Columbia, buy a marriage license, and get married the same day.

SHARIPOV ASSOCIATE SEVERELY BEATEN

The public defender of jailed Uzbek gay journalist Ruslan Sharipov was severely beaten by four masked men Aug. 28 in Tashkent, the capital city.

Surat Ikramov of the Independent Group for Human Rights Defenders was abducted as he returned from meeting with a judge about a court date for appealing Sharipov's conviction. He had been receiving threatening telephone calls in the days leading up to the assault.

According to Human Rights Watch: "Ikramov was driving his car when a man flagged him down and asked for a lift. When he pulled over, four men in black masks and camouflage uniforms opened the doors of Ikramov's car, placed a plastic bag on his head, tied his arms and legs, and put him in their car. The men beat Ikramov in the back of the car and repeatedly restricted his air supply by tightening a belt around his neck to close the plastic bag over his head. The men drove Ikramov to the outskirts of Tashkent, where they demanded money from him, continued the beating, and then left him by the Chirchik River. Ikramov lost consciousness and only [hours later] was able to get help. [He] had two broken ribs and a concussion.

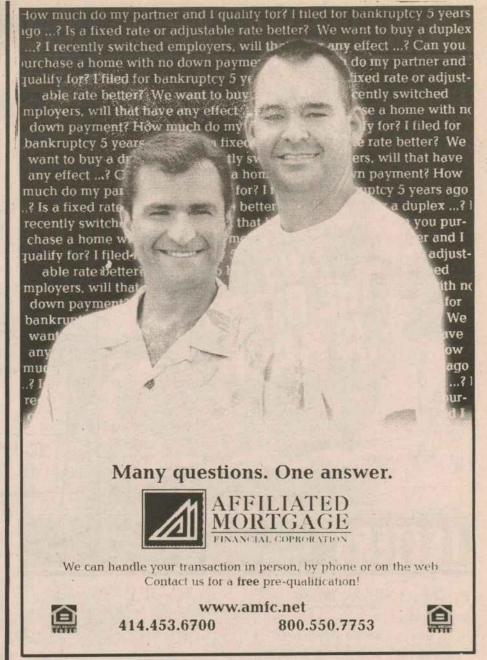

Ikramov had been organizing a protest over Sharipov's case scheduled for the following day outside Parliament.

That morning, said Human Rights Watch, "police came to the homes of several people intending to attend the protest ... and effectively put them under house arrest by preventing them from leaving their homes for the day. Others who managed to get to the area near the parliament were detained, put in buses, driven away, and later released. One activist, Elena Urlaeva, was on her way to the protest when people who later said they were from the National Security Service stopped her car and forcefully dragged her from it, kicking her. They detained her for several hours and later released her.

Sharipov, 25, pleaded guilty Aug. 13 to sodomy, sex with minors and running a brothel, and was sent to jail for five and onehalf years. He had earlier declared his innocence but fired his lawyers and admitted guilt after officials threatened to hurt his mother.

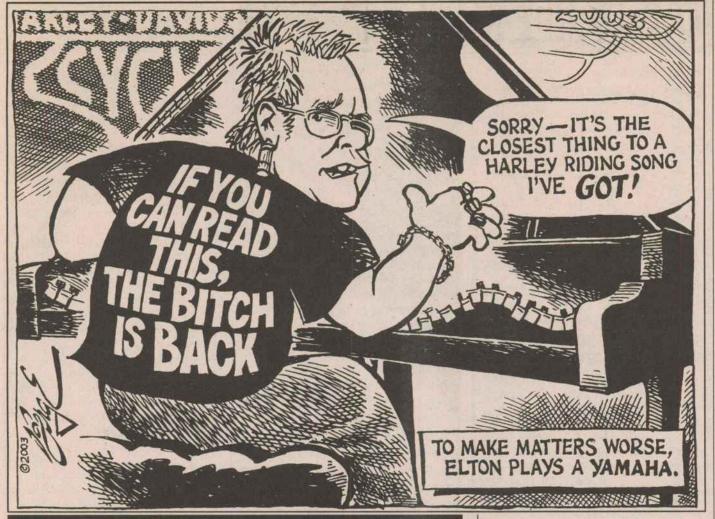

The International Gay & Lesbian Human Rights Commission and other human-rights groups believe the charges against Sharipov were concocted to silence his journalistic criticism of police corruption and human-rights abuses.

"Everything indicates that Sharipov was arrested on false and sordid pretenses designed to rid the authorities of a bothersome, dissident voice," said Reporters Without Borders in a letter to Uzbek President Islam Karimov.

PrideFest Money Woes

Dear Editor,

As an annual vendor of PrideFest, I strongly suggest the board there contact each vendor and explain the financial state of PrideFest.

The policy of no return phone calls, to talk about unpaid bills, will ultimately diminish the creditability of the entire community. It will also increase the financial pressure for the 2004 event. I for one will be asking for cash up front. I am a small vendor, so just think what approach the large ones will take.

If bills can't be paid in full, at least contact the vendors that help PrideFest go on. and make some kind of payment plan. No return phone calls after ten attempts at calling the office and leaving messages is unacceptable. No call back, means no responsiblity, and no basic understanding of business practices.

Good luck in 2004, PrideFest. You will

Many bisexuals are monogamous and Connie's sweeping statement that nonmonogamy is the "norm" for bisexuals is inaccurate and uninformed. It is true that

For more info/sign-up Call: (414) 807-6321 some bi's are non-monogamous just as some lesbians are, some gay men are, some straight people are and some trans people are.

In many polyamorous relationships (loving, committed relationships that don't limit themselves to only two people), the "protection of marriage" is actually a hindrance or an outright danger - some states still allow the state to prosecute a married person for adultery even without a complaint and polyamorous people risk losing their children, married or not, to name just two difficulties this group faces. And, as stated in number three, not all bisexuals are polyamorous.

If a male to female transgender has a female partner, then this would fall under "homosexual marriage" and by Connie's argument, then trans people should be included in the LG group. And so should any bi's who want to marry a same sex partner.

Connie says that transgender people "don't want to be who they already are." My transgender friends tell me that their struggle is actually "to openly be who they really are." Connie claims that only lesbians and gay men go through this kind of struggle.

Be careful playing up the "born that way" argument — the rabid Christian right has been throwing that in our faces by agreeing that, yes, we are born this way and that is OK - just control your behavior then. I think it is critically important for all queer people to assert that, while we are born this way, we are also choosing to live our lives in line with our heart's desires, and that we are proud to choose to be true to ourselves.

In closing, I believe that following Connie's divisive advice would greatly weaken our ability to work together to make the world a safe place for people to openly and freely love who they love. Now, more than ever, we need to work together to make the world a better place for us all. The far right would like nothing more than to see us attack each other. Let's not give them the satisfaction.

Nikki Schlaishunt, Milwaukee

I would like to thank Connie for her editorial comments in your most recent edition. Connie stated that because there are differences in the life experiences between the LG Communities compared with the BT Communities they should dissolve their political associations and each fight their own fights.

The point being that having people in your group that haven't experienced all the same things that you have, or will want all the same things that you do, will hurt your group's ability to win political objectives.

At reading this, I had an epiphany. I'm a white, non-disabled, straight male with a Christian upbringing who despite all these external factors, still managed to become a liberal. I'm sorry Connie, I didn't realize my error. Apparently, I've been wasting a lot of precious time, energy and resources for people who have had different life experiences than me. And I guess from Connie's assertions, "my kind" has been detrimental to "your" objectives. I'm so sorry, I just didn't know.

When I say I'm a liberal, I'm not referring to white, shallow Northern liberalism which consists of voting ethically when it's politically expedient. I'm talking about the working for peanuts in non-profits, building networks and bridges, down in the trenches, out on the streets, mobilizing and advocating type of liberalism. Thanks to Connie, all of that can now become a distant memory for me. Despite my leftleaning tendencies to speak up when someone (anyone) is being oppressed, I can now look the other way with a clear conscience. I understand now that none of it is my business because I was not, to steal a phrase from the sage Connie herself, "born that way." I'm not one of "them" and I'm not responsible. I'm off the hook!

Think of all the free time, the reduced stress and the extra discretionary income I'll have now that Connie has shown me the error of my logic. Apparently, I'm only socially accountable and morally compelled to advocate for the socio-economic plight of those that share my "birth accidents," which are white, straight males without a noticeable genetic disability in the United States (and as we all can see, that demographic is doing just fine). Therefore, I'm spared the inconvenience of political action. Even among other white, straight males I've found that our lives' have not held - amazingly enough identical life experiences and so actually under the "Connie Gospel," I'm not obliged to assist them either. I can just focus on raising my family and making lots of money. One of my children is a girl and I don't have to worry about any political oppression she might experience in life. That's a relief, fighting for 51% of the population was a pain in the that leaves my son and you know what, there is a certain generation gap I feel with him now that he's becoming a teenager, so I guess he's gonna have to advocate for himself as well. Especially if it turns out that God made him "born gay" and he just hasn't told me yet. This means the only person I should ever feel morally compelled to advocate for is me. Screw the rest of you! Thank you Connie, a great weight has been lifted!

Another advantage to following the "Connie Wisdom," by nature of the various accidents of my birth and my subsequent life experiences I will always enjoy an inherent advantage in the USA. How lucky am I not to have been born gay or belonging to other oppressed minorities who will never have enough political clout to topple the current paradigm, "my" paradigm? Gays by themselves, lesbians by themselves, transgendered by themselves, latinos by themselves and certainly the disabled by themselves will never have enough numbers to beat "my team" of white, straight males! Without "your" groups working together, I'm on Easy Street from now on. Especially if you sub-separate into black and white gays, tall and short women. and maybe, eventually, Abyssinian lesbians with speech impediments caused by genetic

How decent is Connie? As a lesbian, to allow "my kind" to perpetually reign! I believe she shows an extraordinary degree of sportsmanship and consideration in this all too often selfish culture of ours. Let's hear it for Connie! She ended her editorial with, "God Be with Us." To paraphrase her, "God be with me and those of my ilk!" Under the context of her statements, I don't see a difference! To become serious for a moment, the fight for civil rights and equal treatment under the law is a political movement. It's not a social gathering, a team sport or a support group. Unite or lose! Or you can leave it in the capable hands of Connie.

We Love Ruthie!

Dear Editor,

Do we really have to go over this again? It seems as though yet another reader of IN Step took the short bus to school.

This is addressed to Kenny or Kevin or Danny or whoever it was that wasn't man enough to sign his real name in his letter bashing Dear Ruthie.

I'll try to use small words so you'll understand (sorry, so "it will be clear"). Ruthie writes for entertainment (fun, to make people laugh, etc.). She has never claimed to be accredited (educated or learned — basically went to school for) in any type of psychoanalysis (evaluation of one's motives, dreams, desires, feelings).

She is not pulling a Dr. Laura and assuming a persona (pretending to be something she's not) in order to further her own ideals. If you have been reading her column for the years it has been printed, you should have determined (came to the conclusion) that most letters are not of a serious nature. When a question of a serious nature is posed (asked), she always refers the person to a professional or professional organization.

It seems odd to me that this is not the first letter sent in to bash Ruthie and that the senders always seem to say the exact same thing. Now we have you, Mr. Alias (using another identity). Could you be the same person who has written before? If so, I wouldn't be suprised if one day Ruthie walks right over and lets you know what she thinks of you. It was more difficult than I thought to write for someone of your intelligence. You make being moronic (stupid) seem so easy.

Tony Torti, Milwaukee

Dear Editor,

The LGBT community in Wisconsin faces challenging times. There are many issues of major importance. The money situation with PrideFest, the upcoming DOMA vote in the state's legislature, domestic violence, substance abuse and, of course, the writings of Dear Ruthie.

The "anonymous" letter-writer in your last issue, who took poor Ruthie to task, has hit upon the most pressing issue of our generation!

God forbid that an IN Step writer (Ruthie) should provide some well-needed humor in a clearly unhumorous era! The time has come for the LGBT community to stand together against drag queen advice columnists. Unite I say!

Forget homophobia, forget violence against LGBTs, forget discrimination ... this is an area we really need to focus our attention on! I, for one, pledge never to ask a drag queen for advice again ... unless I need some make-up tips.

QUIPS AND QUOTES

Brown Wad?

"See, in our community that's frowned upon when you have a big brown wad on your finger. You're just kind of like, can we get rid of that?"

—"Queer Eye for the Straight Guy" Carson Kressley after the cop straight guy they just made over fed his girlfriend a gooey glob of chocolate with his finger.

Weak Brain Muscle

"I do support domestic partnership. I think that gay marriage [sic] is something that should be between a man and a woman."

> Arnold Schwarzenegger on the Fox News Channel.

"Fag Business"

"Men shouldn't feel like fags just because they want to have nice-looking bodies. Another thing: Recently I posed for a gay magazine, which caused much comment. But it doesn't bother me. Gay people are fighting the same kind of stereotyping that bodybuilders are: People have certain misconceptions about them just as they do about us. Well, I have absolutely no hangups about the fag business; though it may bother some bodybuilders, it doesn't affect me at all."

—Arnold Schwarzenegger to Oui magazine, August 1977.

Howard Dean on Real Issues

"Eventually when full gay and lesbian rights are available, Americans will do what they did in Vermont. They'll realize it's not such a big deal. People are people. You know what the biggest issues in the gay and lesbian community are? Just like they are in everyone else's society: jobs and health insurance."

 Democratic presidential candidate Howard Dean to St. Louis' exp magazine, Aug. 29.

"I actually think these kinds of shows [like "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy"] that are sort of in-your-face are gonna pass eventually because as gays and lesbians gain greater and greater acceptance in America they're going to be accepted as human beings and these shows are going to lose their shock and novelty value."

-Howard Dean.

Carson was Freeze-dried

"He looks like he was freeze-dried in 1978 and brought back to life as a stereotypical 1970s queen. I can't believe that he worked at Ralph Lauren with those shirts, and the matching necklaces and bracelets. The irony of it all is that the other guys are better dressed than him."

De callangues per a a melane

 New York Times Magazine
 Fashion Director Robert Bryan on "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy"
 Carson Kressley, to The New York Times News Service.

Fab 5 Bashing

"Queer Eye for the Straight Guy" is exectable — a catalog of homosexual stereotypes, played to a throbbing, techno-disco beat, that also systematically denies its gay stars their complexity and their sexuality. From first scene to last, they trill and fuss, displaying their talents at traditionally effeminate domestic tasks. The straight guy, meanwhile, stands back, endures some innocuous flirting and emerges as the ultimate hetero stud. Talk about reaffirming heterosexual primacy: the Fab 5 are the very literal fairy godmothers who help straight dudes hook up, and who then return to their own beds alone."

 Reviewer Christopher Kelly, Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Gay TV Coup

"If you look just at the news coverage of "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy" alone, you'd be convinced that there weren't any straight people on television."

Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation Executive Director Joan
 Garry to D.C.'s MetroWeekly.

Canadians Getting It Right

"Less than equal is less than adequate. To create another institution [such as civil unions] just contributes to the fact that we would tell those members of the gay and lesbian community that they are not entirely part of our society. Why wouldn't they be part of marriage?"

Canadian Justice Minister
 Martin Cauchon as quoted by the Edmonton Sun.

"I'm a Catholic and I'm praying. But I am the prime minister of Canada and ... I'm acting as a person responsible for the nation. The problem of my religion — I deal with it in other circumstances."

-Canadian Prime Minister

Jean Chrétien on his support for full same-sex marriage as quoted by the Edmonton Sun.

"If people want to do something and it doesn't hurt other people, doesn't reduce other people's rights, we should let them do it. Why not?"

—Canadian Defense Minister

John McCallum on his support for full same-sex marriage as quoted by the Edmonton Sun, Aug. 13.

"The Amazing Race" Boys Get Their 15 Minutes

"The hardest part of this race was to open up to the other people on it. To show a lot of wonderful people that are here that we're just like them. We're Americans, we're teammates of these guys, and we just happen to be gay. ... In the end, people look at both Reichen and myself and they see love, and they realize that Reichen and I are partners — and together, we can do anything."

-Chip Arndt after he and husband Reichen Lehmkuhl won CBS TV's "The Amazing Race," Aug. 21.

"This race was about a lot of things. It was about competitiveness. It was about

Terrestate and a service and a service and a service and a service as a service as showing the world that gay people can do anything that anyone else can do. But the most important thing I learned is I'm very loved by my partner, and I know that I can feel safe and happy and protected when I'm around him, and I trust him implicitly."

— Reichen Lehmkuhl after he and husband Chip Arndt won CBS TV's "The Amazing Race."

"[We're] maybe at the other end of the spectrum, but we don't dis on anybody. Everybody has been trying to get us to say we're angry that there is all this stereotyping on "Queer Eve for the Straight Guy and that these guys are really flamboyant. But that's who they are. With us, I just look at it as, yes, finally the media is presenting another type of gay person, and we just hope that the kids who are 12 to 20 years old, who might want to go to the Air Force academy, who are on a football team right now, who are on a water polo team or captain in a sport and are gay are saying: 'Wait a second. I don't identify with Will on Will & Grace. Now what do I do? Oh, wait a second. I identify more with those guys [from 'The Amazing Race']. OK, that's cool.

- Chip Arndt who, with husband Reichen Lehmkuhl, won TV's The Amazing Race Aug. 21, to PlanetOut.com.

Crazy Catholics

"You see the Catholic Church denouncing gay marriage when they have been doing worse in their own church. And never mind how they behaved during World War II! The Holocaust didn't bother them. But gay marriage bothers them. I think they should clean their own house before telling me how to clean mine."

Milwaukee Ballet Opens Season with "Romeo & Juliet"

Milwaukee – Michael Pink's fiery retelling of Shakespeare's tragic romance "Romeo & Juliet" will ignite the Milwaukee Ballet's new season Sept. 25-28 in Uihlein Hall of the Marcus Center for the Performing Arts, 929 N. Water St.

The tale of two young lovers creates a tug-of-war between true love and family duty as Juliet and Romeo must decide between their passion for each other and their desire to remain true to their feuding families. The Milwaukee Ballet Orchestra will perform Prokofiev's beautiful score.

First performed by the Atlanta Ballet in 2000, "Romeo & Juliet" marks Pink's choreographic debut as Artistic Director of the Milwaukee Ballet. His choreography of pieces like "Dracula," "Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Swan Lake" has been acclaimed by critics worldwide. "I could think of no better way of inaugurating the 2003-04 season than by presenting this classic tale," said Pink. "Elements of surprise and excitement will contribute to one incredible experience for all who attend."

This production of "Romeo & Juliet" brings the return of costume designer Judanna Lynn, who was praised for her exquisite designs in last May's premiere of "Scheherazade." The dramatic fight scenes in the play will be directed by Lee Ernst, a resident actor with the Milwaukee Repertory Theatre.

For tickets and show times, call the Milwaukee Ballet at (414) 643-7677, or visit the company's website at: www.milwaukeeballet.org.

Outwords Rocks with "Unplugged" Sept. 20

Milwaukee - On Saturday, Sept. 20, Outwords Books will host a special appearance by Paul McComas, author of "Unplugged." But this isn't a typical author reading - it is a multi-genre presentation that will offer a performance of scenes and songs from the book, the story of bisexual rock musician Dayna Clay, who struggles against depression despite being at the top of the music world.

The event begins at 7 p.m. and is a 45minute performance featuring McComas. Teresa Schweigert, an actor/singer from the Twin Cities, and Milwaukee drummer Tim Buckingham. It takes place at Outwords, 2710 N. Murray Ave. This musical/dramatic event is presented with the cooperation of Outwords Books, Gifts & Coffee, Milwaukee P-FLAG and Project Q.

Despite being at the height of her career, Dayna is struggling to make it through the final concert of a wildly successful tour. Tormented by an ever-deepening depression, the 27-year-old rocker hands her guitar to a fan and beats a hasty retreat. First she heads for Chicago where she attempts suicide, but nature steps in to spare her. Still unsure whether her life is worth living, she forfeits her career and disappears, setting out incognito for parts unknown eventually trading the bright lights of stardom for the Badlands of South Dakota.

A gripping chronicle of depression. recovery. and self-reinvention. "Unplugged" is also the tale of how a young woman is taught and healed by nature - by the very land beneath her feet.

McComas is the founder of the teensuicide prevention program "Rock Against Depression." He started out as a screenwriter with a masters degree in film and is a fiction-writing instructor and performance artist whose short story collection, "Twenty Questions," is in its third printing.

"2 Pianos, 4 Hands" Plays at the Stackner Cabaret

Milwaukee - Two would-be famous pianists tell their story of growing up at the keyboard in the delightful musical comedy "2 Pianos, 4 Hands," playing at the Milwaukee Repertory Theatre's Stackner Cabaret, 108 E. Wells St., through Nov. 2. The show features the artistic talents of Richard Carsey and Jack Forbes Wilson.

'2 Pianos, 4 Hands" begins with young Richard - Richy - being told he's too young to play the pedal. So begins the journey of two boys - Richard and Ted - in search of concert pianist stardom. Two actors, two pianos and many, many characters grace the stage as fifteen years of learning the art of piano playing pass by. As the boys mature so does their piano playing. From "Little Birch Canoe" they move to auditioning for the conservatory and playing jazz. In addition, there lies the universal plight of all those with an ounce of training and talent: the will and the dream to be a professional musician, athlete, actor, dancer. Through two strong characters, "2 Pianos, 4 Hands" captures the humor that comes with learning to play the piano, and the sense of loss of eventually learning to let go of the dream.

Carsey (Richard) returns to The Rep after appearing in "Little by Little" and "School for Wives." He is in his seventh season as the Skylight Opera Theatre's Artistic Director where he has recently music directed "The Fantasticks, "Chicago," and "The Spitfire Grill.

Forbes Wilson (Ted), like Carsey, was born and raised in Nebraska. He attended the University of Wisconsin and after working at American Players Theatre for a few years, he moved to Milwaukee, where he has worked as a pianist, singer, and actor for fifteen years. He has appeared in ten shows at the Stackner Cabaret, and has performed with the Madison Rep. the Skylight Opera, Next Act Theatre, and other groups.

Mexican Prints on Display at Madison Art Center

Madison - The search for national identity provides the historical backdrop for "La vida en marcha: Mexican Prints from the Permanent Collection," a new exhibition showing at the Madison Art Center. 211 State St., through January 4.

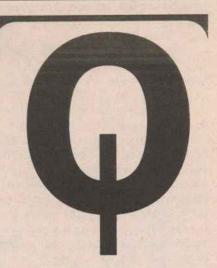

In the wake of the Mexican Revolution (1910-20), the country experienced an artistic revival that changed the face of its leading institutions. Moved by the plight of their countrymen and inspired by the European avant garde, Mexican artists embraced modernization. As they transformed public buildings with colorful murals, they increasingly turned to the graphic arts and wrote a new chapter in the history of printmaking, producing masterful woodcuts, etchings and lithographs.

"La vida en marcha" – "The March of Life" – chronicles four decades of Mexican printmaking and features 100 works by 34 artists. Among those represented are the celebrated muralists Diego Rivera, José Clemente Orozco and David Alfaro Siquieros (known collectively as "los tres grandes"), along with Jean Charlot, Carlos Mérida and Rufino Tamayo. The exhibition documents the remarkable synthesis of indigenous and European traditions these artists achieved, many of whom lived or worked abroad during their formative years.

Admission to this exhibition is free of charge. Please note that it will be closed for two weeks beginning Nov. 16 to accommodate a special event. After that, it will be on view again through Jan. 4. For more information, call (608) 257-0158.

"Little Shop of Horrors" at Skylight Opera

Milwaukee - The Skylight Opera Theatre will present "Little Shop of Horrors," a musical spoof of the 1950s sci-fi movie, Sept. 26 through Oct. 12 in the Cabot Theatre of the Broadway Theatre Center, 158 N. Broadway.

"Little Shop of Horrors" first opened in 1982 and became the highest-grossing Off Broadway show as well as the third longestrunning musical in Off Broadway history. It tells the hilarious story of Seymour and his Skid Row flower shop co-workers who become overnight sensations with a maneating plant named Audrey II. The show's book and lyrics are by Howard Ashman and Alan Menken, who later created the Disney films "The Little mermaid."

"Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin."
The cast of "Little Shop" includes Skylight favorites Benjamin Howes as Seymour, William Theisen as Mr. Mushnik, and Michelle Smith as Audrey the three shop employees. Additional cast members are Steven M. Koehler as Orin. Arsene DeLay as Chiffon, Dawn Miller as Crystal, and Malkia Stampley as Ronette. The infamous Audrey II will come to life via the voice of Bill Jackson and operator Peter Bruce. The show will be directed by Pam Kriger with musical direction by

One-named Wonders

By Gregg Shapiro

ith the electroclash movement picking up where new wave synth-propelled music left off almost twenty years ago, I've been thing a lot about some of my favorite groups from that period. A Boston duo called November Group ranks high on that list. After putting out two independently released albums in 1981 and 1983. November Group released their final album on A&M in 1985. I'm mentioning November Group because Adult, another duo, reminds me so much of them on their album Anxiety Always (Ersatz Audio). Removed, yet dramatic, vocals ride the electronic waves of songs such as Unromantically robotic, songs such as "The Cold Call," "Glue Your Eyelids Together," "Blank Eyed, Nose Bleed." "People, You Can Confuse," and "We Know How To Have Fun," electronically evoke another time.

Where Adult's songs are distant and cold, the songs on Feast Of Wire (Quarterstick) by Calexico are as warm as the Arizona sun. Beginning with the almost uplifting "Sunken Waltz" and continuing on to the dark velvet lushness of "Black Heart," the drive over the cliff that is "Not Even Stevie Nicks...," the Roswell, New Mexico soundtrack "Attack El Robot! Attack," the mariachi horns of "Across The Wire," and the southwestern jazz of "Crumble," you'd be wise to feast your ears

If you are a liner notes reader, you will probably recognize the name Joy Askew for the years that she recorded with people such as Joe Jackson, Laurie Anderson and Peter Gabriel. Seven years ago she released her long-awaited solo disc Tender City. which, if you can find, is well worth possessing. Echo, Askew's latest musical incarnation, is essentially a duo (with Takuya Nakamura), with the assistance of other musicians. The eleven songs on Echo's selftitled debut (New Line) are a striking balance of Askew and Nakamura collaborations (the best of which include "Spark,s On A Wheel" and "Surrender") alongside chill-out covers of standards by Cole Porter ("I've Got You Under My Skin," "Night And Day," "Every Time We Say Goodbye," "Love For Sale"), Arlen & Mercer ("That Old Black Magic"), Jobim ("The Girl From Ipanema") and Hillard and Mann ("In The Wee Small Hours Of The Morning").

Sunlight Makes Me Paranoid (Kemado) is the bright debut disc by NYC glam/garage quartet Elefant. The ten songs on the album are ideal for the next phase of the new wave revival - let's call it the next wave - that is almost certain to follow in the glittery footsteps of the electroclash scene. Songs such as 'Now That I Miss Her," "Bokkie," "Tonight Let's Dance" (with its echoes of early New Order), "Love," "Ester," and the title track all sound as if they are meant to be danced to, so you'd better get busy.

For a band with one name, Francine knows how to give an album a lengthy title. Said album 28 Plastic Blue Versions of Endings Without You (Q Division) is a pleasing, near lounge (take a listen to 'Inside Joke"), lightly psychedelic ("This Sunday's Revival." "Ratmobile," 'Uninstall") effort that deserves more attention than it will probably get

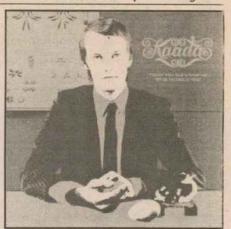

Insurgent country band Glossary understands the value of female vocals on its album How We Handle Our Midnights

(Undertow). Joey Kneiser's Tennessee tiger's growl is tamed by the presence of percussionist Kelly Smith; it's like pouring honey over gravel. Sneers are softened, but not suppressed, on songs such as "These City Lights Shine," "Remember Me Tomorrow Night," "Golden Houses," "When Easy Street Gets Hard To Find." and "The Rutherford County Line."

You might say that the pressure was on for Grandaddy to follow up its acclaimed 2000 album The Sophtware Slump with something spectacular. Sumday (V2) isn't spectacular, but it's close. Now that The Flaming Lips have moved beyond cult status, followers such as Grandaddy stand a chance to be heard by a wider audience. Songs from Sumday that deserve such an audience include "Now It's On." "The Go In The Go-For-It." "The Group Who Couldn't Say." "El Caminos In The West. "Saddest Vacant Lot In The West," and "Stray Dog and the Chocolate Shake."

Blanca Rojas sounds like a Southern California version of Bjork on Poise Is The Greater Architect (Second Nature) by the band she fronts called Ilya. Her indifferent vocals draw the listener in, especially on more rhythmic tracks such as "Isola," Rana, "Blatchford," and "Disturbed." The longer (up to eight minutes), down tempo songs don't have the same energy and may cause listener's attention to drift away like an ice floe.

I've made a few cross-country driving trips this year Kaada has been on a couple of those with me. Thank You For Giving Me Your Valuable Time (Ipecac), Kaada's debut disc is a distinctive blend of samples and beats and deeply soulful vocals. Clearly influenced by the music of the fifties and sixties. Kaada has created a fusion of bizarre sounds that make for great highway music. Especially roadworthy are "Care," "Black California," "Burden," "All Wrong, and the particularly suitable "Honk."

Like Kaada, Pram's songs are steeped in retro and vintage settings, making them sound like selections from sixties movie soundtracks. The instrumental "Track Of The Cat," which opens Dark Island (Merge), comes complete with a haunting whistle, which is eventually surrounded by horns and period guitar. The vibrato synthesizer on "Penny Arcade" hovers just above Rosie Cuckston's breathy vocals. "The Pawnbroker" sounds likes it could have been recorded in 1964, at the time that the Rod Steiger movie of the same name was playing in theaters. "Paper Hats" is the closest Pram comes to party music. even though it may be a pity party and the instrumental "Sirocco" could be the song that the hostess dances to after she's had too much to drink. The near tropical "Leeward" is the appropriate predecessor to the wavy album closer "Distant Islands."

October 11 Screening of "RADICAL Harmonies" a Fund-raiser for PrideFest

Milwaukee — This year, start National Coming Out Day with a song in your heart as the 2003 Milwaukee LGBT Film/Video Festival presents Radical Harmonies on Saturday, October 11. An infectiously lively chronicle of the extraordinary history of "women's music," the film is impressively inclusive in scope, arching from the Woodstock era to riot grrls, as it presents a cultural movement that exploded gender barriers and made room for new voices in American sound and song.

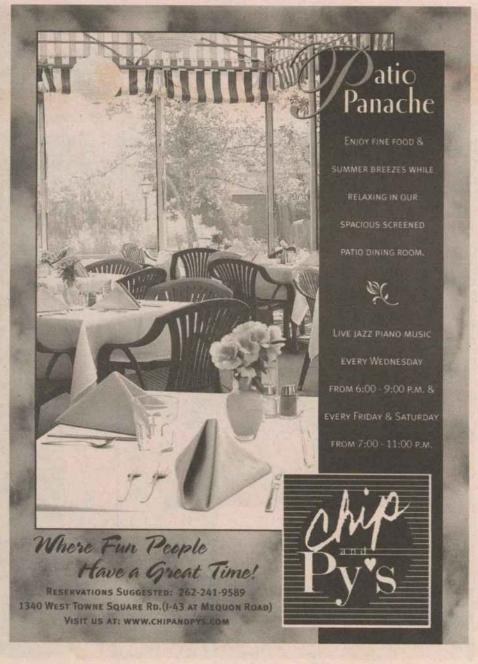

With a generously abundant amount of rare festival and concert footage, interviews, and archival material, Radical Harmonies presents, among others: Cris Williamson, Ani Di Franco, Ferron, Casselberry-Dupree, Margie Adams, Sweet Honey in the Rock, Toshi Reagon, Azucar y Crema, the Indigo Girls, The Hail Marys, Bitch and Animal, Ulali and Wild Mango.

This music has served as a something of a soundtrack for Pride for decades so it is only appropriate that this screening of Radical Harmonies will function as a fundraiser for Milwaukee's PrideFest. Admission to this one-time only screening is $8 with proceeds from the door going to the support of the future of PrideFest.

'Radical Harmonies" will be shown on October 11 at noon in the UWM Union Theatre in the Student Union at 2200 E. Kenwood Boulevard. Tickets are $8 and proceeds will be donated to PrideFest.

For more information on the screening or the Milwaukee LGBT Film/Video Festival in general contact Carl Bogner at (414) 229-4758 or crlelbog@uwm.edu.

"War Against the Animals" is Challenging and Engaging

"War Against the Animals"

BY PAUL RUSSELL

By Jim Drake

he garden is chaotic; it is like the jungle full of animals waiting to devour whatever weak prey comes their way. When that prey is a nineteen-year-old living in the garden of the Hudson Valley surrounded by animals who constantly probe him for whatever weakness he possesses, confusion and sadness can be overwhelming. Jesse Vanderhoff is a member of a close knit clan of long term resident families in this valley. Their values and traditions are old and cherished. Yet Jesse enters this summer confused by conflicting feelings concerning his own sexuality and the sense of doom he experiences as his father dies of liver cancer.

Jesse's older brother Kyle is a dark foreboding character who takes risks, the consequences of which he cannot imagine. He and his best friend Brandon bully and pummel Jesse into their games and adventures. Lurking beneath the surface of Kyle's appearance is a conflict even more severe than the one experienced by Jesse.

Cameron Barnes is one of the many gay people who have moved to this Valley from the city. He designed playgrounds before his designed gardens, has just split from his current lover, Dan and he is HIV +. As the summer begins he sees a new beginning for himself. His tests are optimistic, he has regained an interest in designing gardens again and he wants to clean up his own garden. He begins with a shed and calls upon the Vanderhof brothers to rebuild it.

What is set in motion is a search by all three characters into exploring issues in themselves they have not yet resolved. Paul Russell skillfully weaves the present and the past in such a way that each character gradually opens up to the reader. This happens without the reader being shocked into revelations. Instead the reader has been prepared by the character, by descriptions and by Russell's implied and suggestive symbolism.

Another delight of the author's fifth novel is how he treats his supporting characters. He imbues them with enough dialogue and physical detail to make them appreciable without moving away from the flow of the narrative. These individuals exist to support the development of the three main characters. Russell's interweaving their strengths and weaknesses makes them real and thus Jesse, Kyle and Cameron become real for the reader.

Underlying the development of the main characters is the conflict being enacted by the new, mostly gay, residents of this community and those represented by the Vanderhofs and other families who have held political and social power until the present. His contact with these gay people make him review past and current experiences. He seeks answers, but his fear keeps him from asking.

This novel reminds the reader that discovering one is gay is not always a happy adventure and probably many young men and women live through the same kind of conflicts and fear Jesse Vanderhof does. "War Against the Animals" is a challenging and engaging reading experience.

GOTCHA!

By Billy Masters

66 no oy Meets Boy" is over, and I, for one, am grateful. Don't get me wrong - I was as entertained by the show as anyone. But as the weeks went on, I realized that James (our "leading man") was not the only person being hoodwinked. He signed on to find a prospective mate, and presumably that's why most of us gay viewers watched (although it was unlikely that he would find true love in a process that lasted just over a single week). Once the final "twist" was revealed (that one of the three final suitors was straight), the show completely changed - it was no longer about James choosing Mr. Right or even Mr. Right Now. His new objective was to choose a gay man and win twenty-five thousand dollars. Though he came right out and said that he saw Wes more as a "girlfriend" than a romantic partner, James chose him because...well, let's face it because Wes was the most "gay" of the three. And it was a choice that paid off handsomely. But is there any doubt that Wes (who was my choice) would have been the second runner-up had the final twist not been revealed? I'm sure that James and Wes will enjoy their trip to New Zealand in the spring, but I wouldn't expect much more romance than that final kiss (which, despite slo-mo editing, was actually about ten seconds in duration). And was I the only one who got sick of all of the so-called straight guys saying how they went on the show to bridge the gap between heteros and homos and to bash stereotypes? I would have given anything for one of them to admit, "I went on the show to bag a fag and win twenty-five grand."

If you want to find romance and a few bucks, I've got a more straightforward way to do so - join the Gay Millionaires Club. Yes, believe it or not, there's an organization out there catering to wealthy gay men who cannot find romance - a problem I'd embrace. Jill Hankoff, owner of GMC, carefully screens applicants - "We know that if (members) can pay our entrance fee, odds are they are millionaires." Needless to say, it's a select group - there are only about 20 members nationwide, and most of them are guys in their 40s and 50s who'd like to meet someone a wee bit younger. But the prospective mates are not whom you'd expect. Jill says, "Our clients are not necessarily looking for some hot, sweet young boy. They're looking for relationships." See, James? There's hope for you yet!

We hear that James Lipton has been successful in wooing one of his favorite actresses. Brace yourselves – Barbra Streisand will appear on Inside the Actor's Studio. La Streisand's sit-down will take place next month, and producers hope to have it ready to air in time for November sweeps. Seems like Bravo keeps getting gayer and gayer.

The hottest ticket in NYC was actually for a performance in Newark, New Jersey. The touring company of "Hairspray" did an invitation-only dress rehearsal at the New Jersey Performing Arts Center, and it should go without saying that your own humble scribe was front row center. The cast is in exceptional shape, headed by a scrumptious Carly Jibson as Tracy and our own Bruce "Boom Boom" Vilanch—to say nothing of the obscenely talented (and hunky) music director, Jim Vukovich. Quite a number of famous folk were in the house (way too many to mention), but none as special as Bruce's mom, Henne. After the show, I escorted Mama Vilanch backstage to congratulate her famous son. Henne, who is a former show-girl herself, was impressed with Brucie's fancy footwork – especially since he wears heels in the show. In fact, her first words to Bruce were, "I've never seen you move so fast!" To illustrate how fab Bruce is, I'll post some photos for members of Filth2Go.com – and perhaps a surprise or two.

By the way, when Bruce was cast as Edna, Harvey Fierstein (who originated the role on Broadway) called Henne and made a startling confession – much of Fierstein's characterization was based on Mama Vilanch herselfl So, in a roundabout way, Bruce is actually portraying his own mother! Oh, I need a Pamprin...

While in NYC, we learned that Delta Burke will make her Broadway debut later this month in "Thoroughly Modern Millie" - and just in the nick of time. Although Leslie Uggams has more than capably filled Sheryl Lee Ralph's shoes, she hasn't provided much excitement at the box office. Producers are confident that the "Designing Woman" will bring in a wide range of people who might have otherwise skipped this wonderful show. Look for Delta to take over the role of Mrs. Meers the role that won Harriet Harris a Tony and that Beatrice Lillie played in the film. Incidentally, another Beatrice - as in Bea Arthur - played the role in the workshops of the musical, and I'm told she stopped the show. When I brought this up to Bea, she gave me one of those famous sideway glances and corrected me - "Twice. I stopped the show twice." So there.

Everyone's talking about Britney and Madonna's kiss during the MTV Awards. But no one is talking about Christina Aguilera – except Miss Aguilera herself. Tina was perplexed when everyone was discussing Britney and Madonna's steamy lip-lock at the after party. "I kissed her, too," she told anyone who'd listen although her kiss with the Material Girl was all but cut out of the telecast in order to show Justin Timberlake's reaction (or, rather, his non-reaction) to the Britney smooch. Aguilera is taking matters into her own hands, talking about how soft Madonna's lips are, how many times she's kissed her, and how Britney's open-mouth approach was not scripted - insinuating that perhaps Brit was trying to capture the lion's share of attention. Ya think?

James

Could it that one of the "Boy Meets Boy" castoffs has actually already bagged James? In yet another twist, this lanky lothario could not get his "leading man" out of his mind and pursued him the moment James returned to LA. His persistence paid off - not only have they dined à deux, but they've also consummated their romantic interests. It seems James finally met someone who topped his list - which is a good thing, since another of his rejects is telling anyone who'll listen what a big ole girl James is. Although the hard bodied boy wanted to win the game (and he missed it by thismuch), he admits that James' "whining" during the rock climbing really turned

When boys are dissing boys, then it's time to end yet another column. While I'm admitting that I would have chosen Wes on "Boy Meets Boy," I should add that Robb was tied as my favorite. You gotta love someone whose name is Robert and decides the shortened version will have two Bs! Do you have a favorite BMB of your own? Well, a little birdie told me that many of the SoCal single guys (like Wes) will be at Gay Day Disneyland's Kingdom dance party on October 4.

Wes

Britney

Perhaps you have a question burning in your loins that I have yet to answer (and I do hate unanswered loins). Then send a note to Billy@filth2go.com and I promise to get back to you before James tops....anyone!! Until next time, remember, one man's filth is another man's bible.

"2 Pianos, 4 Hands" a Genial Blend of Comedy and Pianos

By Carl M. Szatmary

There must be something about the Milwaukee Rep's Stackner Cabaret of late that seems to encourage actors to play not just a single role but many, many roles. Last season's "Fully Committed" offered Milwaukee's favorite son, John McGivern, playing literally dozens of characters to sold-out houses.

Opening the 2003-2004 season at the Stackner is "2 Pianos, 4 Hands," % a musical chronicle of two boys spending their "Wonder Years" behind a piano keyboard. This cleverly devised musical entertainment has Richard Carsey and Jack Forbes Wilson playing the two would-be famous pianists, Richard and Ted.

Created by Richard Greenblatt and Ted Dykstra, "2 Pianos" is a genial pastiche of comic scenes and of course, plenty of piano playing. As the play begins, Richard (Carsey) and Ted (Wilson) are the tender age of eight and are somewhat reluctant to spend hours at the piano while their friends are all outside playing and having fun.

What follows is a series of scenes which alternate between the two boys, showing their foibles but also their increasing interest in the piano. In one scene, we see Richard's father, himself a frustrated classical pianist, hounding his son to practice. Later, there's a delightfully comic scene with the two boys being forced to play a duet together.

Eventually each learns that they possess a spark of talent which leads them through a variety of increasing expensive and eccentric teachers, grueling competitions and heartbreaking auditions. Their dreams of fame are nurtured and continue to grow. But do they have what it takes? Can Richard and Ted become successful classi-

Although "2 Pianos, 4 Hands" is really a very slight piece of theatre, it is quite a demanding one on its cast of two. Not only does each actor play one of the boys, each must also take on a variety of other roles in the other boy's life. And if that isn't enough, both actors must play the piano, showing progress from early attempts at scales and simple pieces suitable for beginners to playing well enough to be seriously considered for demanding music schools.

Carsey and Wilson are such wonderful performers; they somehow manage to make this all look so easy, particularly in the early scenes when both actors wonderfully capture the boys' youthful enthusiasm and rebellion.

If there's one quibble with "2 Pianos," it is that playwrights Greenblatt and Dykstra seem to feel the need to half-heartedly and rather unnecessarily tack on a moral to their musical fable.

Those in the audience having endured childhood music lessons will surely be able to relate to their experiences. Yet so likable are Richard and Ted; so wonderfully universal is the quest to fulfill their dreams, that even the most musically challenged in the audience can not helped but be won

"2 Pianos, 4 Hands" continues in the Stackner Cabaret until November 2.

DEAR RUTHIE

Jackhole of the Month

Well kids it's that time of the month. No, not THAT time! It's time to announce the winner of my monthly JackHole Award. Yes, I'm going to put my gabby gift for giving advice on hold this issue to bring you this month's award winner - and to add another name (or four) to my JackHole Wall of Shame.

If you aren't familiar with my little award, it goes to those who made a name for themselves (locally or nationally) for being nothing more than a complete JackHole. (And if you can't figure out what a "JackHole" is, you may just be our next recipient.)

At last month's "award ceremony," the honors went to Randall Simon — a professional baseball player from Pittsburgh who thought it would be hilarious to whack a Brewers' sausage mascot in the head with a baseball bat. What a JackHole!

This month's award goes to a group of four Jack-Holes. And while they'll have to share the trophy, they are clearly the biggest nimrods that Milwaukee has seen in the last few weeks.

With that in mind, I announce our current JackHole(s) of the Month — An idiot "minister" and three members of the Faith Temple Church of the Apostolic Faith.

If you haven't heard the story, it goes like this: Selfproclaimed minister, dumb-ass and JackHole winner, Ray Hemphill conducted a series of bizarre ceremonies trying to rid an 8-year-old boy of "demons." In actuality, the child suffered from autism.

Hemphill, the boy's very own mother and two other nut balls supposedly performed some sort of weirdo exorcism over the boy.

The "minister" reportedly told police that he was lying across the boy's chest during the ceremony when the child stopped breathing. Paramedics were called, but by the time they arrived the boy had suffocated to death. Hemphill was later charged with physical abuse of a child, causing great bodily harm.

The innocent kid lost his life because these screw jobs were so busy banging on the Bible that they never stopped to apen it up and decipher it's meaning. Instead of learning about autism and helping the boy and his family cope with it, they literally squeezed the life out of him — all in the name of God. To top it off, these crap heads continue to defend their actions by hiding behind the Bible.

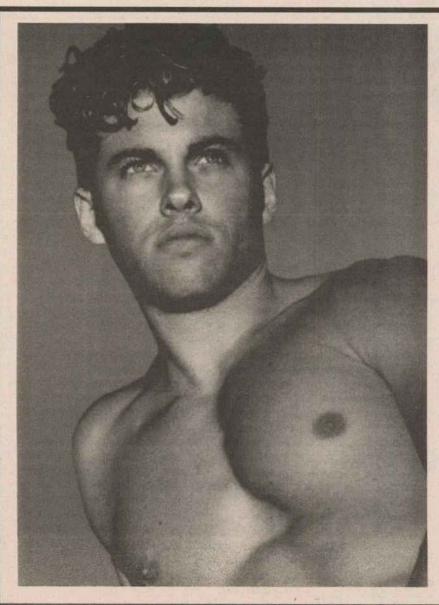

Any reasonable person — even a man or woman of the cloth - knows that the only demons in this boy's life were Hemphill, his mother and the two other peckers involved in his death. Granted these individuals say they were helping the boy, and I think that in their twisted minds they believed they were. I don't think Hemphill and his three accomplices wanted to kill anyone. I really don't.

But when wayward religious dogma, God-fearing fanaticism and pure stupidity turn dangerous, it's time to hit the breaks and reign in the culprits — and in this case, the culprits were four JackHoles of major proportions.

These folks are just as ignorant as the ass pipes who line the streets, screaming at homosexuals at Pride parades. Protesting a gay event is certainly not as serious as the death of a child, but does it help you see how easily and quickly ignorance motivates violence, pain or even death?

Maybe when folks like this stop screaming Bible verses and start understanding them, things will begin to change for the better. Until then, however, in the Book of Ruthie they will forever be labeled as JackHoles.

Do you have a nominee for a future JackHole Award? How about a question only Ruthie can answer? E-mail her at dearruthie@instepnews.com.

t didn't even dawn on me until dating this column 9/11 that it's the 2nd anniversary of one of the most horrific events in recent history. Hopefully, the past 24 months have brought on much healing and enlightenment.

On the topic of survival — HarleyFest, a Happy Anniversary. It may have been Harley's Reunion, but I had a field day! My favorite part, as always, the people! Be it my usual shift at Switch on Fridays 5-9 p.m. or working The Biggest, Best Block Party - "The Party of the Century," that took place on Saturday, August 30.

During my shift it was delightful to have local celebrities brightening the bar -Fluid's very own Bill Wardlow, Josh of the now defunct Orbit, Steven, pictureperfect in his chaps enroute to his shift at La Cage, with side-kick Barney the ageless "Eighth Wonder Of The World," sassy Sarah Jonas and Princess Debbie taking a break from their successful Café LuLu gig to come giggle with me. Dame David Howser and Ginger working swing shifts at The M&M Club sashaying in, Debi Vance and her "Big" brother, Mike Hall, Cindy O. and Keith adding to the festivities, and my very own Harley Biker/Captain in the Marines Rembrent from Texas. He stopped by to enjoy the facilities and air conditioning and stayed my entire shift! Rembrent gushed about Milwaukee, HarleyFest and all the fun he was having! What a great endorsement!

Special thanks to Renee and Jerry Skals for stocking and schlepping. Loieand Cindy set-up their version of a "Lemon Ade Stand" out front. Loie, with the determination of a dictator, had everything shipshape in no time. We were all so busy, I didn't even have the time to exchange pleasantries with Craig or Scotty. We all were going in opposite directions!

Jacob, one of Milwaukee's finest behind any bar, be it Edelweiss or Switch, took over for me into the night. Everyone was thrilled to see his return. From inside to outside, sipping with Loie and Jerry Skals, Roland, Jeff L. & Marty from Chicago, Jerry, Brian & Jim and half of BrewTown.

Our adventure began touring the Block Party onto Fluid's outside bar tent where we visited with Buffy and Jim-who were busy tending to the masses. Then northward to Boom and catching up with David & Tim. Here I had a chuckle with Bob P., president of the Castaways. Woody's favorite Woody Steve Bale was Boom-ing it up too. He reminded me that the Packer games would be back again this season in his ever-popular sports bar. There really is no other place to take in the Packers than at Woody's.

In need of more fluid, it was onto Fluid to pay a call on Fluid's First Filly, Wilma Finger-Do, the Birthday Girl herself, whose party will be Friday, Sept. 12. Dame Edna Ross, Ariel Lift, Suzie Wong, Lana St. James The Toast of the Triangle and Surprise Guests are slated as of this date. Of course, food, fluids and Cordially Yours!

I caught up with all-time legend Al Thomas - celebrating the "Reunion." I'm happy to report, life seems to be agreeing with him - of course it always did! He is as wild as ever - gurl!

Steven, aka Rosie, that rosy-cheeked bar boy of yesteryear was doing the town, looking about 5 minutes older than the last time I saw him! Such dimples! He is now busy selling real estate on the coast. Harley-ites: Jeff & Fern caught up with us here for a lively liquid as did "Princess" Ryan - even though he didn't bartend, in the unforgettable words of my favorite Gay divorcee Liza - "Maybe Next Time." Matt was doing an exceptional job on those "Holly GoLightly(s)." Rich from Fond du lac was in tow and informed me he's originally from D.C. - doesn't that make for fascinating reading? On the locale of D.C., that is where Michael Jonas & Max from The Triangle as well as Miller's Michael & C.C. escaped to, via plane as opposed to Hog.

From all the fabulous fellows of Fluidit was to be Out 'N About. Bev was having a time of it as our hostess with the mostess, Drew all smiles and baring/sharing his tattoo(s). D.J. Kelly was kind enough to acknowledge me and play something misty for me (in my case musty - I love those oldies!). D.J. Kelly is not MIA; he is resident D.J. and Musical Director Fridays & Saturdays 8 p.m.-close at Out 'N About. I connected with Tony Torti, Dr. Jeff and George here as well as the rest of raucous riffraff.

Michelle, the lady who saved our lives from the Fat Daddy fire from last column, was out, giving me the chance to thank her! After our Labor Day disco inferno O 'N A style, we wandered over to The Harbor Room. Gregg was in seventh heaven, with all the hot "WOOF" specimens in attendance. Talk about a standing ovation - it was standing room only! Bulge (Rick) and Bob F. were serving faster than you could order. By the time I got there the Cigar Smoker was taking place on the patio, but even I couldn't squeeze out there. But I did get to sample some mighty fine Scotch. Lagavillin 16 years single islay malt. Bozvenie 12 year single malt. Auchentoshan single malt -

The cigars lighting up the sky were: Macanudo, Hampton Courts, Baccarat Chuchill... I had the pleasure of connecting once again with Mr. Harbor Room 2003 Ross. He really is so hot, sweet, sincere and kind - not to ruin the image! As flattering as the day is long! He wanted the honor of being photographed with me (again). Thanks to the Harley man that let us use his Hog. I can't wait to see those pix! (I'm the one side-saddle) Andy S. & Brian B. certainly know how to coordinate a fun function and must be applauded publicly.

Besides the sights here, I mixed & mingled with: Danny Nelson, Mike, Mark Bucher, Ray Schafer, Sal. Paul Scalcini, Todd & Jay from Dallas, Bill from Kansas City who "pinned" me, Birthday boy Troy and Tim - together! Dame David Howser, Roland Hoffmann, Jerry Skals. Ben. Larry and Harbor Room -ites: Jason and newest addition Jerry aka Fortuna - we remember his considerable charms from the old days/nights of The Wreck Room and more recently Gargoyles. Drop by and say "Hi." The weekend was wonderful and long-time remembered. I only wish Elton would have listened to me...

On the topic of music, my cordial Choristers of The Cream City Chorus will be doing a Cabaret come Saturday. Oct. 18, at the Village Church of the Arts on Juneau. Wine, hors d' oeuvres, music by individual members, duets, trios, ménage a trois... whatever! I'm thrilled to be emceeing this event - so put down your knitting, the book and the broom.

They will be having a Jan. 10 concert in 2004 at 7:30 p.m. at Plymouth Church an ideal "Cabin Fever" remedy. And while you have your calendars out, their Spring Fling will be on April 17, 2004 and the return of their ever popular "Gay Concert" is set for June 19, 2004 at The Village Church of the Arts.

Following up on the theme of art – that is exactly what DeDe and Trixie presented at a recent dinner party to celebrate a myriad of birthdays. It was like being at a gala thrown by the love child of Martha Stewart and Liberace! The table, the flowers, the food, the beverages (of the adult persuasion...) and, of course, the music. The music of the night - it doesn't get any better than being serenaded table side. Ooh, what a night! The celebrants' birthday or otherwise: Joey A.. Wisconsin Leather Daddy 1995 Jim. Jezebel, DeDe, Trixie and moi - in a word EXTRAORDINARY!

Peter, the stunning bartender/singer at The M&M Club, has been christened "Lena Le Court." It seems that cheap talkin' ChiChi "Billie Jean King-ed" him all over the court! What a racket!

My heartiest congrats go out to Chris K. (the best plumber in the world - does he know his pipes or what) and Todd M. They've pledged themselves to each other in a touching sunset ceremony in their special, secret garden. Many, many happy years ahead, men.

Two Davids are returning to school – MIAD. Beware, Howser and Todryk have designs and this city may never be the same...

The 2003 Milwaukee Lesbian, Gay Bisexual, TransGender Film/Video Festival will soon be up running. Fifty+ films and videos will be shown Oct. 2-5 and Oct. 8-12. Watch for more details in the next IN Step.

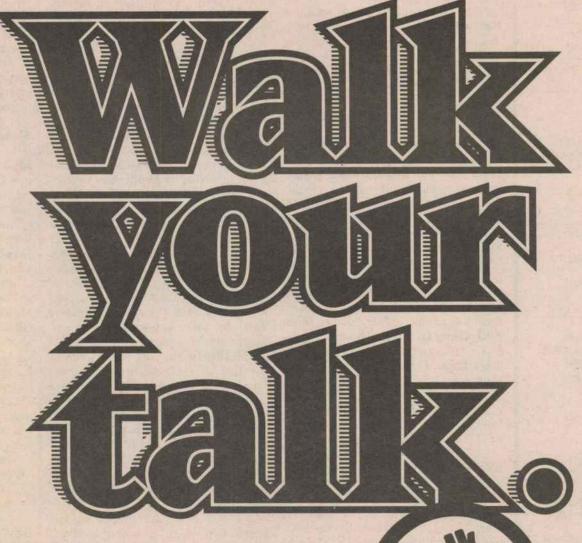

I had the pleasure of dining at LaCage's new eatery ETC. It was a decadent dining experience! Wayne was our server, Bill was our bartender, and having Chef Tim and Sharon Dixon herself actually pay homage to our table was quite a nice touch. Of course, it didn't hurt that I was with Ms. Rona of The M&M Club and her very own gal-pal Holly. Very unique selections, generous portions and something I don't think you could find anywhere else in the Dairyland.

I want to wish Tom Look, one of our community's finest gentlemen, a continuing speedy recovery. I know before long he'll be back holding court at The Ball Game. He has to hurry up though. Notre Dame has already started its season, and they need their #1 alumni.

Saturday, September 27 A VolleyBall Tournament to benefit HIT AND IGBO. Switch AND Fat Daddy's - that HOT place, next door! Will host an afternoon of sand and balls and fun!

Greg AKA Myrna had quite a B-Day celebration at Boom, where he tends bar. Specail guest: The Green Bay Packers and their debut game for the season. Everybody touch - ed down there!

Remember, it's the glamour, not the grammar! A wee bit tired from the Holiday Weekend, I still remain "Cordially Yours,"
