Why Is That?

By Skyler Greene

Why is that our society punishes convicted killers by means of lethal injection, but unclaimed pets at the pound are euthanized to keep them from suffering?

Euthanizing animals has been around a lot longer than lethal injection. If euthanasia is considered the human thing to do to prevent old Sparky from suffering in a cage, wouldn't the same be true for a convicted killer? It seems to me, sparing the life of a killer in order for him or her to serve a life sentence would be a much greater punishment than execution. I'll bet Timothy McViegh was thinking the very same thing. Otherwise, he would have clawed his way through the appeal process.

A number of years ago, I remember talking with a group of guys about jails and prisons. One of the guys in the group, who happened to be one scary fellow, commented on how he would never be taken alive if he had to go to prison. A few years later, this very same individual raped and murdered a woman. As the law was knocking on this creep's door to take him in for questioning, he shot himself in the head. He took the easy way out.

I personally would like to see prisons set up the way they ought to be - segregated cells and no cable TV. Set up a killer's cell in such a way that he can contemplate his victim each and every day for the remainder of his life. How about a mural on his cell wall depicting his victim and the victim's family. How is that any crueler than the daily reminders the victim's family must endure -- family photos on the mantel, missed birthdays, or holidays? Set up a killer's prison cell where no interaction with other inmates can occur. Make him think about what he did.

If a killer wants to read, they get one book with restricted reading hours. That's it, one book to last them the rest of their life. And it better be a good selection because they'll only get one opportunity to make their selection. The tax payers will provide three squares a day and basic medical services. And just so they won't rot in prison, they can shower every third day. Soap optional.

When it comes to the death penalty debate, I believe the easy way out for a convicted killer is for the state to put them out of their misery - just like old Sparky. I know I'd just as soon be put out of my misery, rather than have to face that type of environment for the rest of my life.

But in order for this type of punishment to work, hard time must be hard time.©

A Restaurant Review

By J. Alan

If you are looking for Mexican cuisine La Perla is one of many places to go in South Milwaukee. Being convenient to all the bars (corner of 5th & National), makes this a great place to start a night out for cocktails.

As we walked in, immediately we were greeted by a hostess who promptly seated us. Authentic Mexican music was playing that set the mood for an upbeat dining experience. Our waiter took our drink order, suggesting their famous frozen margaritas, as we looked over the menu. Since we are not avid tequila drinkers, we opted for our usual cocktails. The menu was very extensive, a lot to choose from and very reasonably priced. We started with chicken quesadillas for an appetizer, $6.25. They arrived promptly, hot, and were very good. However, there were only three of them and two of us. Since it consisted of one large quesadilla cut into thirds, better planning would have had it divided into fourths.

While waiting for the main course, over in one area, a large group was enjoying rides on the bucking red chili pepper. They were laughing and a lot of pictures were being taken. Several people were sitting at the bar keeping that cute bartender busy mixing up frozen margaritas that La Perla is so famous for. For the main course I had chimichangas for $7.75 and my partner had three enchiladas also $7.75. Both dishes were absolutely wonderful. The chimichangas were nice and crispy on the outside and filled with cheese and chicken. The chicken enchiladas were very good too, they did not skimp on the chicken nor the cheese on either entree. Both entrees came with rice and refried beans as usual. The service was good despite the fact they were very busy and were short-handed. The total bill came to $31.80, including a round of drinks. With the tip our bill still came to less than $50. I would rate La Perla 8 on a scale of 1 to 10 (with 1 being the lowest and 10 being the highest). I recommend La Perla for a nice Mexican dinner, so try it out. Take a ride on the bucking red chili pepper and have your picture taken, you will have a great time!©

Where's The Beef?

By Cruisin' Carl

The question was asked, "Where's the beef in the dairy state? To answer that question I had to ask, "What kind of beef are you lookin' for? A slab of quarter-inch sirloin steak cooked medium rare or a hunky guy. A hunky guy! I said. Then I asked, "What do you think is a beefy guy?" and decided to go out cruising hot spots in Wisconsin lookin' for beef. Keeping an open mind, I decided to start in Milwaukee (lookin' for beef?).

Since, south Second Street has quite a number of bars, I headed down I-94 going east toward downtown Milwaukee. I got off at Plankinton and headed south on Second Street.

Jake at Ballgame

Coming to the first bar, Ballgame. I parked my car around the corner and proceeded to walk in. The bar was a bit dark and I had to wait for my eyes to adjust. As my eyes adjusted, I noticed a few guys (not beefy) sitting at the bar engrossed in conversation about their yard sale scheduled for the next day, Saturday. Averting my attention, immediately I took a liking to the bartender who introduced himself as Jake as he politely asked me what I wanted. Although I was thinking I wanted him, instead I said I wanted a Bourbon and Coke, no fruit (after all, I was lookin' for beef). When he brought my drink to me, I asked him if he works every Friday night. He replied in a very seductive voice, "yes."

Jake is a bit on the husky side with very nice facial features, beautiful eyes, and is definitely beefy. He looks great in that leather vest and sexy armband tattoo. If you are looking for a nice husky bear cub, check out Jake at Ballgame.

Well, I was lookin' for beef and wasn't going to stop at the first bar I came to. I left and headed farther south on Second Street to Club 219. After entering and paying the $5 cover charge, I noticed the male stripper on stage.

Stripper at Club 219

Seems this bar offers a main course of hot beefy studs, jiggling and wiggling, hopping you will slip a bill where you ought not touch someone if you were in public. I also noticed a few interracial gay couples. A nice african-american guy offered to buy me a drink and I accepted. We talked and he asked me what kind of men I was into. I told him I was into beefy men. He asked if I was into black men and I responded again, "I am into beefy men." He was a bit perturbed with my answer and walked away. He figured this meant I assumed he was a bit twinkly and I was not interested. He got that right.

Club 219 has a great mix of ethnic and white studs, some beefy some not, making for a unique experience. Since I did not want to settle on anything too soon, I left to continue my search for beef.

Dancer & Alex
at C'est La Vie

My next stop on second street was C'est La Vie. As I walked in, I noticed this bar was full of young boyish guys (Hmm, desert, if you like those little cakes, soft on the outside, creamy on the inside) and older men. There was a stripper, working the crowd, flaunting his wares and trying to get the last dollar before his number was over. The guys were not my idea of beefy but they were lean and some with muscular definition. Alex, the bartender, was very polite, prompt and seemed personable enough to confide in. Never the less, I was lookin' for beef.

Tim & David at Boom

Moving on, farther down Second Street, I came across Boom. I saw a nice variety of guys, some young, some older, and definitely a few beefy studs. Two beefy studs that caught my eye were the bartenders, polite and eager to please. But probably not eager enough as they seemed devoted to each other.

The music was upbeat and the videos kept me amused as my eyes scanned the place for just the right kind of beef. The only problem is, it seemed that the choice cuts were already taken. Still, I had a great time and a few drinks later I decided to move father south, in pursuit of the perfect cut of beef.

Fluid was my next stop. As I entered the bar, I was greeted by the doorman, who was definitely beefy. I thought he was going to card me as I walked in but he said he did not need to see my ID (I guess I am past those carding years).

Bill, Matt, and Tim at Fluid

The bar was crowded with a mix of collegiate and businessmen types. The decor reminded me of a bar I frequented in Florida and the music put me in a party mood. I saw a few beefy guys and tried to make eye contact with one of them that was standing alone and posing as if he was making himself available. I noticed that he was cruising another guy across the bar who was a daddy type. I knew then that I did not have a chance.

I noticed a few beefy guys leaving together and I decided to find out where they were going, so I followed. Well, of course they went to La Cage. Why was I not surprised? I thought they looked like the circuit-boy type. I went inside and paid yet another cover charge only to confirm that this was where the circuit boys hang out. And they were definitely hanging out if you know what I mean. Not my type of beef so I left without even ordering a drink. I did get my hand stamped just in case I wanted to come back later.

A few blocks farther south I found myself at Woody's. I saw quite a few people huddled around the winding bar. Some guys were playing a computerized trivia game some guys shooting pool and a group of guys in the back playing darts. I grabbed a bowl of peanuts and sat at the bar.

XXX Video Review

by Studwarehouse.com

Conquered, Director - Chi Chi La Rue Studio - All Worlds Video

Big, bulging, muscle stud BILLY HERRINGTON takes it like a true Gladiator! For the very first time, the former Colt model gives up his sweet cherry in this authentic Roman Gladiator video directed by none other than Chi Chi LaRue. Billy is being held in a cell when two Roman guards, sexy TRENT COUGAR, and Czech sensation, ANDEL, have their way with Billy. Billy and Anandel give it to the over sexed Trent but good. Something is in the air in good ol' Rome that makes all these studs horny as hell. Over in the slave's quarters, blond CASEY WILLIAMS (Mr. All Worlds 2001) gets plugged by AWV exclusive, the steamy Latino, TINO LOPEZ. However, Billy is observing the man-to-man action and still hasn't gotten enough as he takes matters in to his own hands. Then over at King BLAKE HARPER'S quarters, a true blue Roman orgy takes place as they bring in the sex god, Herrington, to join in with the King's water boys, JAY ROSS and NINO BACCI along with the guard, played by the new (Mr. All Worlds Bear 2001 Winner), COLTON FORD. However, the horny King is feeling frisky and wants something big. And if the King commands it, he gets it! The final scene has the dark, handsome and hairy muscle man, TOM KATT as the slave who captures Billy's heart! The two muscle men flip-flop and unleash their appreciation for each other's magnificent bodies. Get this video at your local video store or get it online at www.studwarehouse.com.

Another bartender, who I later found out is named Bob, was showing some armbands to a customer. Quite a few guys were shirtless and I soon found out that the drinks are half price if you take off your shirt. Since I do not feel I have the body to be taking off my shirt, I decided to pay full price and leave mine on. I met quite a few guys but none of them were the beefy types that I prefer. I did enjoy the cruising and the atmosphere was fun but time was running out and I still had not found the beef I was looking for so I decided to go to a bar that was a bit Off The Tracks.

Michael at Off the Tracks

Off The Tracks is indeed off the tracks. I went west on Beecher and turned left on 16th St. until I reached W Grant Street where what d'ya know I saw it on the left. Parking was easy and I walked in and a few women sitting at the bar drinking tap beer. The bartender greeted me right away. At first I was apprehensive, as I knew that there were mostly women in the bar. But I soon felt at home engrossed in conversation with the women patrons. The bartender Michael told me that this bar is a place where gay men and lesbian women can get together and talk.

It was nice talking with my lesbian sisters but I was on the hunt for beef. It was getting late and I had only one more bar left to go in hopes that I could find what I was looking for, "BEEF".

This Is It I thought while looking for the bar by that name. I got lost looking for it and don't ask me how I found it, as I could not tell you. Anyway, I walked in and found only a few patrons sitting at the bar and the bartender was calling "LAST CALL". I ordered a drink and talked with one of the guys. The bartender was nice but I knew he wanted to get out of there. The place was quaint and the patrons were very nice. A great conversation bar but not the cruise bar that I was looking for. Seemed again that all the choice cuts were taken here too. Closing time came and we all had to leave. I still did not find the beef I was looking for.

As I was walking back to my car in a bit of a depressed mood, I tilted my head up and hollered "Where's the BEEF." At that moment a carload of the beefiest guys who were obviously still in a party mood drove by and one of them stuck his head out and said "See you in Madison." And I thought that's it, next month I'm headed for Madison.©

If you have any comments or suggestions about my quest, please feel free to send email to cruisincarl@outboundwi.com.

Tobin at Woody's

I did not see any-one especially beefy, other than the bartender Tobin. He was very friendly and smiled at me seductively while serving me my drink. Although very attractive, he was not my type of beef so I had a few drinks and talked with a few of the patrons and left. Woody's is a very friendly bar and fun to go to with a group of friends.

Bill & Scott at Switch

In my pursuit of beef, I decided to head north on Second Street and east on National. A bar called Switch caught my eye to my left. I parked my car around the corner again, since parking just about anywhere in the area is scarce, and went in for a drink. The bar was quaint and the bartenders were friendly. There were a few guys sitting around the bar and I noticed some of the guys were from Fluid earlier. If you like the young college-boy types, this is the bar for you. I had a few drinks and conversed with the bartender before deciding to look for some serious action. "Where's the beef?" I asked myself, while driving farther east on National Ave.

James, Dave & Buzz at Triangle

Triangle was to my right, and I found easy parking near the entrance (unbelievable). I walked in and noticed they were having a drag show. I did not see any beef in here other than the drag queen that was performing without her wig.

Lilly White as a boy

And what do ya know but Lilly White, out of drag, walks in and takes the microphone. Now I have only seen pictures of Lilly White in Drag and she looks great as a drag queen. But she is cute, as a boy too. I like diversity, but if I was to pick Lilly White to go home with I would rather her leave the heels in the closet instead of scuffing up my ceiling. I had a great time at the Triangle, the bartenders were friendly and cute and the drag show was entertaining and fun. However, I did not find the kind of beef I was looking for.

Steve & Bob at Boot Camp

In my search for beef I stumbled upon Boot Camp directly across the street. I walked in and was carded by the doorman. By the looks of the doorman, I knew right off that this bar was seriously into leather. The bar was very dark and very cruisy as I passed through the crowd toward the bar. The bartender was eager to wait on me and quickly served me a Wild Turkey and seven. I thought this place is one of the only places in Milwaukee that I can get a Wild Turkey and seven (very cool).

I made eye contact with a hunky leather guy wearing a harness and chaps. He smiled and looked me over. I thought this is the place that I was going to find the cut of beef that I have been looking for. I said "Hi" and he replied with a smile. After talking with the gentleman for about five minutes, I found out he was just waiting for his lover. He asked if I was into three-ways and I replied, "No!" He said, "To bad," and walked away. I finished my drink and decided to check out South Water Street Dock (or just Docks, as the locals say), in my search for beef.

Dan, Rob & Ron at South Water Street Dock

South Water Street Dock is located east of Boot Camp, on the corner of E. National and South Water Street.

They have plenty of parking, which makes it convenient to go there. I walked in and was greeted by a nice hunky bartender with a goatee. He quickly got me my drink and seemed to be very busy with other customers sitting around the bar. I walked to the back and watched a few guys shooting pool and talking about their plans to for Summerfest. I cruised the bar for beef. Everyone I thought was beefy was already with someone so I decided to check out the patio. There was a cute guy sitting alone on the deck reading a magazine. He did not seem interested in talking with anyone so I went back inside to refill my drink and play a video game in hopes that some beef would happen to walk in.

After a few video games, the guy from the patio approached, wanting to join me. I accepted and we both had a great time. He told me he was killing time until he had to go to meet some friends at M&M, but invited me along so I went.

M&M is located in the Third Ward. We walked in and immediately were greeted by a few of his friends. He introduced me and I bought them all a round of drinks. The place was chock full of hot beefy guys and a few women too. The atmosphere was upbeat and the bartenders were very friendly.

Chi Chi at M&M

I have never been to M&M before, but Chi-Chi, one of the bartenders, was prompt and made me feel at ease. I noticed they had a restaurant off the back. Since it was closed just then, I noted it for a future visit. I looked around and saw many hunky beefy guys and tried to make eye contact with a few of them. I figured out very quickly that this was not my bar to cruise. Most everyone was with a group of friends and was engaged in intelligent conversation. After a few drinks with my newly found friends they suggested we go to Harbor Room. Still on a quest for beef, I decided to check it out.

Rick & Bob at Harbor Room

Harbor Room was packed with all types of guys. Even though the bar was packed I was able to get up to the bar and get a drink and the service was fast. (Thanks to the designated service areas). That is one thing I hate is when some queen is standing in the service area and not even trying to get a drink. I see a lot of that happening in Milwaukee. Anyway, I got my drink from Rick who was decked out in his leather shorts and harness. I looked around the bar and could tell right away that this bar was the place to cruise.
