On The Cover...

Jean Buschke joined Center Project, as Executive Director, in November of 1992. Prior to her move to Green Bay she was the Life Care Services Coordinator for the Central Wisconsin AIDS Network (CWAN) for two and a half years. Of her time in Green Bay, Jean says: "I've been fortunate to meet and work with so many people who are caring and compassionate. I leave feeling secure that with the community support I witnessed in Green Bay, and the committed volunteers and staff I have worked with, Center Project will be here for the duration, providing needed services to the community."

Jean has been recruited by Camp Heartland, a national non-profit organization which provides camping experiences for children infected or affected by HIV/AIDS. She will become Camp Heartland's national Executive Director in April of '95.

of all, guess what federal agency the money the WHPCPC seeks comes from? That agency is the CDC. Secondly, guess what has happened to that money since both reports appeared nearly simultaneously? The Republican-controlled House appropriations committee has cut it completely from the 1995-96 fiscal budget.

The third irony is the greatest and perhaps saddest of all: the confusion did not have to occur at all. AIDS service organizations throughout Wisconsin, aware of WHPCPC's report's content, tried in vain to get the state's HIV/AIDS program to find an appropriate means to present the report to the media. For the WHPCPC to hold a press conference, present a 164 page report, answer a few statistical questions and then expect reporters to condense the whole event into 500 word summaries submitted for 4 to 12 hour deadlines is to invite confusion to reign.

Unfortunately, there are two final and very frightening questions to consider as well. First, how many average Wisconsinites had access to only the WHPCPC report and have come to the conclusion that they no longer have to be concerned about HIV/AIDS? And secondly, how many of those will be infected by that very disease because it couldn't happen to them anymore? That last number may be the greatest and most terrible irony of all.

P-FLAG Regional Conference Set for April 1: Day-long Seminar to Examine Homophobia

"Overcoming Homophobia: Advocating for Change" is the theme of the third annual central regional conference of Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays to be held Saturday, April 1, from 8:30 AM to 5:30 PM at the Sheraton Suites in Elk Grove Village, Illinois.

The conference will encourage attendees to come to a better understanding of homophobia, both within oneself and in the culture, and gain the skills to support family members and friends directly affected by homophobia.

Featured speakers include Dr. Gilbert Herdt and Andrew Boxer, co-authors of Children of Horizons which examines the culture and development of gay/lesbian youth in Chicago. Herdt will discuss overcoming cultural taboos and supporting gay/lesbian children and Boxer will offer strategies for self-assessing internalized homophobia. In addition to the major speeches, the conference will offer organizational updates and numerous networking opportunities.

Registration for the conference is due by March 17. Registration forms are available through Positive Voice or by contacting P-FLAG Appleton/Fox Cities. Cost of the conference is $50 which includes lunch.

Green Bay/Appleton Gay Teen Group on the Horizon

Input from area teens sought March 26

Horizons, the gay and lesbian teen support group currently in formation in the Green Bay and Appleton areas, recently conducted its first teen input meeting at the Brown County Public Library.

The nearly thirty adults from educational, professional, religious and other gay-supportive organizations heard from teens as to what they sought in a gay teen group.

A second input meeting has been scheduled for Sunday, March 26 at 1:00 PM in the Brown County Public Library. Gay, lesbian and bisexual teens are encouraged to attend.

Positive Voice Meeting

March Meeting: Prospective gay and lesbian home-buyers should plan on attending PV's March general membership meeting on Monday, April 20, beginning at 6:30 PM in the auditorium located in the lower level of the Brown County Public Library. Guest speaker Mike Wery, a mortgage banker at Bank One, will review the issues gay and lesbian people should consider prior to buying a home or property. Mike will also answer basic financial planning questions during the question-and-answer period which will follow. Regular attendees will note a room change for this meeting.

POSITIVE VOICE CITED FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE

Positive Voice, Inc. was awarded Center Project's (CPI) community service plaque at the agency's recent "Have a Heart" dinner.

Citing two specific projects, the group's Christmas gift program and last Fall's AIDS Walk Wisconsin team, CPI executive director Jeanne Buschke presented the black and silver plaque to PV president Dennis Krenn. The Christmas gift project started in 1992 and has provided both needed and special gifts for over 150 clients to date. Positive Voice's AIDS Walk Wisconsin team raised over $1500 in its first year.

Buschke also noted that the group's regular newsletter coverage of HIV/AIDS issues and agency programs has provided invaluable outreach to portions of northeast Wisconsin's gay community not always reached by traditional gay media.

The plaque will be on display at the Spring general membership meetings.

MIXED MESSAGES & MASS CONFUSION

Sorting out the contradictory AIDS statistics Analysis by Mike Fitzpatrick

As last January turned into February, in the space of less than a week completely contradictory statistics and projections on the progression of HIV/AIDS were issued by the Wisconsin HIV Prevention Community Planning Council (WHPCPC) in Madison and the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta. Depending on which report you read, either HIV would continue to be primarily a "gay plague" sparing the general populace or spread into the heterosexual majority through IV drug users (IDU) and the sexual partners of IDU's. Even more startling were the completely opposite projections of HIV spread: the disease was ultimately abating or it was spreading relentlessly.

How the WHPCPC and the CDC could come to such completely divergent conclusions may seem almost incomprehensible to the casual reader, but a closer investigation of the two groups and their respective objectives makes the contradictions not only understandable but inevitable.

Looking at the national agency first, the purpose of the CDC statistics and projections is to put a comprehensive and understandable face on the epidemiology of HIV/AIDS. To define by analogy, compare HIV progression of infection to a spilled bottle of milk. Epidemiology informs where the "milk" came from and how and where the "spill" will spread. Thus the cause-unknown collection of symptoms originally termed AIDS has been identified as coming from a "bottle" labeled HIV and the disease is "spilling" by certain behavioral factors into a wider and wider pattern across the population just as physical factors cause milk to spill in a widening pattern across a surface.

However, epidemiology plays no role in the WHPCPC report. The purpose of the WHPCPC statistics and projections is to provide a workable plan of prevention for the state of Wisconsin in order to qualify for federal grant monies to finance community-based HIV/AIDS prevention programs. WHPCPC's report is not an epidemiological report but a feasibility study. Since the more feasible the WHPCPC plan is, the better is the chance of getting the federal funding, WHPCPC's goal has been to show how it can stop the spread of HIV, not report its current spread.

The feasibility study thesis is further supported by reviewing the WHPCPC's methodology, outlined in the beginning of the 164-page report. Statistics in the report were determined by mathematical averages of a variety of statistical projections and surveillance summaries of reported infections. The averaging makes good mathematical sense but renders the report scientifically useless as it combines statistics arrived at by completely different criteria.

The confusion has occurred because the media reported the statistics without the benefit of any context by which to interpret them. To return to the spilled milk analogy, reading the WHPCPC report as an epidemiological study would suggest that the "milk" will stop spreading and then return to the bottle from which it came!

Conversely, reading CDC statistics as a feasibility study would also be folly: what government agency would want to grant money to a prevention program which projected continued failure in lowering the rate of infection?

To further add to the confusion and frustration there are three great ironies to this situation. First endorsements, largely from moderate to liberal judges. The net effect, however, has been to turn this nonpartisan election into a referendum on which political philosophy the court should take.

Third, spring off-year elections have historically low voter turnouts so local races can impact state races in ways no one expects. The heavy turnout for the eight-way Green Bay mayoral primary is a case in point. Last February 21 Green Bay's mayoral race had local voters out in force. State voter turnout was about 11% but in Green Bay it was close to 50%. Green Bay voters voted for "the local guy" in the Supreme Court race so overwhelmingly in the race that they tipped the state election in Judge Crooks' favor despite strong runs by Milwaukee and Madison candidates who expected a traditional vote boost from their statistically larger communities. The Green Bay mayoral race will likely bring out a similar turnout again on April 4.

Just a reminder: Wisconsin's Supreme Court justices serve ten-year terms. No matter which political philosophy wins it will take at least a half a decade to reverse that philosophy. Action Wisconsin may make an endorsement at the state board's March 19 meeting. While I encourage the gay community to take notice of that endorsement, I want to urge each of you to get out and vote! If you are moved to action by the above, share this article with your friends both gay and gay-supportive. And mark that social calendar now-you have the hottest date in town on Tuesday, April 4: a date with your own destiny in the privacy of the voting booth! (Just a reminder: you can register to vote on election day at your polling place. Call your community's city clerk's office for more information.) from 7:15 to 8:30 and will cost $2.50 per person, Interested group members will meet at the Country Kitchen South about a half-mile south of the rink at 2330 Oneida St. for a light snack and socializing. Refreshments will also be available at the Rola Rena snack bar during the skating party. Participants' refreshments will be The Rola Rena skating rink is not far from Lambeau field (also known as Packer stadium).

To reach the rink from the north, east or west, drive to Lambeau field's northeast corner at Lombardi Drive and Oneida Street. Turn as appropriate and head south on Oneida to Morris avenue, which is at the second traffic light four blocks south of Lombardi. Turn left onto Morris and look for the Mountain Dew/Rola Rena Rollerskating sign on the left after passing through the Gross. St. intersection. For our Fox Valley participants from the south, take Highway 41 to the Waube Lane/Oneida Street exit, bear right and drive north on Oneida St. for about three miles. Turn right on Morris, which is the seventh traffic light.

gay community is being handed a golden opportunity to "take part": The Wisconsin Supreme Court justice election.

The Supreme Court justice race is probably one of the most important races for the lesbian/bisexual/gay/transsexual community in years and there are three reasons why. First, the recent decision by the U. S. Supreme Court to review Colorado's Proposition 2 will impact Wisconsin's civil rights laws for gay and lesbian people no matter how the court rules. If the U. S. Court rules completely in favor of gay and lesbian people, as we all might hope and pray, the only impact on Wisconsin law will be the validation of our civil rights as already legislated. Anything less may invalidate part or all of Wisconsin's protections, which may ultimately leave the state's high court to resolve the difficulties or to review new legislation which could be challenged by those who oppose civil rights for gay and lesbian people. It's necessary to point out that the last time the Supreme Court took on a specifically gay issue, the Hardwick sodomy law case in 1987, they ruled against us. It also possible to have the court define gay status in narrower terms than the community may believe is correct and proper. To prepare for a possible less than full victory on Colorado Prop 2 or even defeat means working for a more receptive court here in Wisconsin now while the gay community has the chance.

Secondly, the new justice elected this April will be the swing vote on a Wisconsin high court currently containing two liberal to moderate justices and two conservative ones. The two candidates currently running for that office offer a real choice. Judge Anne Walsh Bradley positions herself as a moderate with bipartisan support and endorsements, including ex-governor Tony Earl, who signed Wisconsin's "gay rights" anti-discrimination legislation into law. On the other hand, Judge Patrick Crooks has positioned himself as the "conservative choice" and appears to have moved even further right since winning the February 21 primary. In the last two weeks unsuccessful candidates Ted Wiedemeyer and Patience Roggensack and a host of conservative Madison and Milwaukee judges have announced their endorsements for Crooks. Bradley has countered with more

UNIQUE COLLABORATION TO PRESENT "BENT"

"Bent" is the story of two men faced with the most horrific of circumstances who find pure and natural love for each other against the backdrop of prejudice and terror perpetuated during the Holocaust. The play tells the not often told tragedy of being a homosexual during Hitler's reign of horror in Europe. An audience experiences the difficulty in facing the question of safely being able to identify oneself as a homosexual by witnessing a love story evolve that is formed through shaded glances and whispered confessions.

The production is part of Theatre X's Late Night Series and is running in tandem with the theatre's production of Oscar Wilde's "An Ideal Husband." Show dates for "Bent" are April 12, 13, 19, 20, 23, 26 and 27. Show times vary. Tickets are $5, and may be reserved through Theatre X by calling 414-278-8898.

GREG LOUGANIS' BOOK, "BREAKING THE SURFACE" REVIEWED BY ELDON E. MURRAY

Book by Greg Louganis, with Eric Marcus, Random House, New York, 290 pages, illustrated, hard cover, $23.00

It has been an open secret in the gay world for many years that four-time gold medal Olympic diving champion, Greg Louganis is gay. We know why he was so shy and why he refused in interviews to discuss his personal life style since other top athletes who are gay or lesbian have damaged or ruined their careers by coming out of the closet. That the greatest diver that the world has ever known (or is likely to know in the future) should choose to remain in the closet seemed very understandable to almost all who knew or suspected that he is gay.

Millions of people watching the 1988 Olympic diving competition saw him hit his head on the diving board during the 3 meter springboard event and then return to the board a few minutes later with four stitches in his skull and a waterproof patch to execute an almost perfect dive to win the gold medal. He returned the next day to the 10 meter platform, giving a breath taking reverse three-and-a-half, the most difficult dive in the sport, to win a second gold medal. Thus he became the first male diver to win a pair of gold metals in consecutive Olympics. Everyone in the world applauded his courage and his poise. When his coach, Ron O'Brien embraced him after the win, he said to the coach, "Nobody will ever know what we've been through."

Now we know. Louganis recently revealed in a TV interview with Barbara Walters a few days before this book was released that he had learned several months before the Olympic event that he was HIV positive. In the book he explains that he did not tell the Olympic Officials that he was HIV positive for fear of causing wholesale panic and controversy. He also knew that the risk of infecting another diver was infinitesimal. Diving is not a contact sport and the chlorine in the pool would kill any virus. The diluting effect of a few drops of blood in thousands of gallons of water also argued against transmission. There was a tiny risk for the doctor who stitched his skull without rubber gloves. However, Dr. Anthony Fauci, AIDS expert from the National Institute of Infectious Diseases estimates that the risk was less than 0.3 percent. That doctor, a Dr. Puffer, several years later tested negative for the virus.

In "Breaking the Surface," Louganis, through his ghost writer Eric Marcus, speaks frankly about his unhappy childhood as the part Samoan adopted child of a middle class Greek couple. As a youth he struggled with dyslexia and discrimination while battling bouts of depression and low self-esteem because of conflicts over his homosexual feelings. He focused his entire life on the one thing he was good at: diving. Believe it or not he didn't even think he was good because his skin was darker than his school mates who taunted him by calling him "nigger," "faggot," and "retard." His adopted father was cold and distant, at least until he began to win medals. His adopted mother, however, was warm and supportive. As he won one competition after another (he won 47 U.S.

National titles, more than anyone in history) including a silver medal in the 1976 Olympics when he was only sixteen, he began to experiment with drugs and alcohol. He also had several ill fated love affairs with men. His last affair was with an abusive and controlling man who hid his shady past. This man became his "manager" before the 1988 victories and Louganis had a very difficult time getting out of the destructive relationship.

Louganis came out publicly in a short video at the Gay Games in New York in 1994, saying, "It's great to be out and proud." The thousands of people at the opening ceremonies roared to their feet, cheering their hero. Two weeks later before about a thousand people at the U.S. Olympic Festival, he accepted the prestigious Robert J. Kane award, but at the same time made an impassioned plea to the Olympic Committee to move the 1996 volleyball preliminaries from Cobb County, Georgia, which had passed a resolution condemning gay people.
The plea made national headlines and three weeks later the Olympic Committee moved the volleyball competition from Cobb County.

I am a person who usually has little sympathy for people who remain in destructive relationships and continue to do other things that are not in their own interests even when they are aware that they are harming themselves. However, when I finished the last page of this book I had tears in my eyes. The last sentences of the book are: "Wish me luck. I'll need it." When I say, "Good luck, Greg," I mean it from the bottom of my heart.

Gay Gourmets Gather As A Group. The Dinettes boasts membership throughout northeast Wisconsin

A simple formula of good eating and good fellowship has led to the successful northeastern Wisconsin gay gourmet group known as the Dinettes.

Founded in the Fall of 1993 by Ted LaPine and Bob Jarvey, the group now claims membership from Green Bay to Neenah. The organization's membership is broken down into groups of couples which take turns hosting dinners every six weeks throughout the calendar year.

Membership requires a one year commitment to the group. Members range from singles who invite a guest to the meal and friends pairing as a team to long-term committed couples. The group ranges in age from early twenties to "retirement" and older. Some members are apartment dwellers and others are home owners.
The group is currently limited to gay males.

Dinners are usually planned around themes and the hosts provide recipes to each of the couples attending. Each couple prepares their assigned recipe and brings it to the meal served at the host home. Recipes are chosen to both provide new dining experiences and allow members to expand their cooking skills. In the first year LaPine and Jarvey developed the themes and selected the recipes. In the current Dinettes' calendar year individual hosts are expected to take on the thematic and menu-planning.

Several times a year all-membership theme parties are held. For example, the most recent Christmas party had a medieval theme, with turkey, rabbit and other meats and dishes served on long, candlelit banquet tables arranged in a castle-like setting. Each summer a general membership meeting and party is held at which time new members are welcomed into the group. Interested people can join on a "standby" basis throughout the year. Stand-bys can participate when a dining group's scheduled meal conflicts with a group member's schedule.

For more information on how to join the Dinettes, call this year's chairpersons, Glen and Larry, at (414) 725-6738.
