E-mail, Cappuccino & Rob

By Jess Littleman

Clink, Clink. Someone sets down a double-cappuccino next to my keyboard. I look up and see it's "The Cute Guy," aka Eric. He's not wearing the typical Cyber Street Cafe white smock/copper baseball cap combo, but instead dressed like a manager in smart looking dress slacks and shirt. Damn, I sigh to myself, he's probably straight. I appreciate the view for a moment, then return my attention to the computer screen in front of me.

I open my mailbox and look to see who's emailed me recently. Some junk mail from cnet.com and hotwired.com. A message from Za. Returned mail I sent last week to what is apparently a nonexistent address. I then notice an address unfamiliar to me. I click it open and begin reading. It's Rob! I ran into him and his new boyfriend, Jon, about a week ago at the bar. I totally forgot I gave him my E-mail address, and couldn't find his the next morning. I hit the page down key to continue reading.

The message itself was quick. Had a fun time in Green Bay. Moving down south soon. Hope to see you soon. As the text scrolls by on the screen, I start losing track of the words and get lost in thought. You see, Rob and I almost had a thing with each other a few years ago.

I don't remember how we met exactly—was he trying to sell me his car?—but, I do remember my trying to talk to him every chance I was given. One night after bar close I walked him to his car, perhaps to take a look at what condition it was in. From there the conversation wandered from one topic to another, and we talked in the parking lot for hours. About half way through the sky turned gray and it began to rain, slowly at first, eventually as a steady downpour. But still we stood there, oblivious to the rain soaking our clothing and hair. All of the sudden the conversation stopped and our eyes met, really met, for the first time. I saw Rob drenched from head to toe, fine blond hair spiking and flattening from the rain, droplets of water beading on his handsome face. It was one of those quiet moments which lasted an eternity.

We didn't go home together that night, which actually was a good thing. I decided although I was definitely attracted to him in that way, I didn't want this to be just a sex thing. I wanted to be a boyfriend, not just a boytoy.

We did actually go on a few dates together, met out occasionally, and hung out over at his place. In the end, however, we just never moved past the 'better than friends' stage for whatever reason. I guess I never told him how much I wanted him in my life—my loss. So, eventually we just ended up seeing each other at the bar until he moved out of town.

When Rob and I ran into each other again, he was visiting our fair city with his new boyfriend. I was so glad to see him again, and I realized how much I missed him. I hope he is happy, and I hope he keeps on writing me E-mail to keep in touch.

As I stare at the screen in front of me, I realize of all the men I've had different relationships with, I've never been more attracted to another man as much as I was to Rob. Although, in the end, we weren't meant to be a couple, I still smile to myself when I think about him.

I take a large swallow of cappuccino and click on the "Reply" icon to send him a message back. For a moment, my fingers pause over the keyboard, not sure what message to send. I remember the rain, and begin to type: It's Jess. Got your E-mail. Glad you had a good time. Visit again soon—I miss ya'.

ON OUR COVER

Who said military men can't have a sense of humor?

Papa Joe

The Firebirds bar night seemed to bring out all the studly Daddys and the cute cuddly boys, many looking as if they stepped out of a Tom of Finland drawing. Besides the hot men, it was a lot of fun with a packed house and they raised $110.00 for their favorite charity. I didn't move off my perch and 3 TOF cop types stopped by to say hi. One even sat on my good leg.

My darling husband, Lee, and I had to leave about 1 am. It was too early to win the "uncut" version of "The Wild Ones." For you guys who dig TOF types, this is a hot video from Renegade Studios with big-booted leather boys playing big boy games. The Papa Joe rating of "not one" means you can put the zipper down, you won't need the ff button. I already got the edited version and was considering this one; so if you buy/see it before I do, let's compare notes.

By way of some background on the Firebirds, here is what they had to say when asked about themselves:

"In February of '95, the 7 founding members of the Firebirds decided to form their own Levi/Leather Club, through which they could have a positive impact on the leather community in Milwaukee while providing a social setting for its members. In that time, the Firebirds have hosted several parties and bar nights in the community and have sponsored fund-raisers supporting such things as MAP's holiday food baskets, as well as having member-only social outings. They currently have expanded to 10 full members and 3 more people are currently pledging the Club.

If you would like to know more about upcoming Firebirds events, or would like to be included on their mailing list, you can call the Firebirds at (414) 299-9707."

WE INTERRUPT THIS COLUMN to report a juicy rumor update. It is common knowledge that MIAD, many moons ago made a lackluster offer to buy the Wreck Room building. Every now and again "people in the know" (aka seeders) announce as immutable, the WR's closing date. Normal folks yawn, but the hand wringing Aunt Lillies (aka spreaders) go to work and within hours every place East of I-94 is abuzz with the latest "facts."

A phone call to Bill confirms there is nothing new in all those many moons. A June closing date is not on and unless "they make me an offer I can't refuse," Bill says it will be business as usual. That is, EXCEPT for Monday thru Thursday, July 1 - 4, when due to Summerfest and the Big Bang, they will be closed.

Enough dish, back to the Club, folks. By the time you read this, the Oberons beer bust-affle club night at the Wreck Room will have happened. Their theme "Mae Western" is a Campy lead in for their "Shoot out at JO Corral" run which happens June 14 - 16. If you want more info, see a member or check in with Tim, the cocktail hour bartender, at the Wreck Room He is major mover and shaker in the Club and knows all.

On Saturday, May 18, The Brew City Bears will be doing a beer bust and raffle at the Wreck Room. It will be the place to be, so you can expect a good time even if you are not into hirsute men.

Come summer, and I hope it does soon, The Great Lakes Harley Riders (GLHR) are doing a meet in Milwaukee (7-9 June). This is the traditional weekend for Harley Davidson to do something big like the 80th, 85th and 90th Reunions. During the off years, there are lesser events still worthwhile to take in. This year, it is the kick off for the Route 66 Run. A lot of out of town bikers will be here for the event.

It is also the time when GLHR got together for the first time so it is sort of an anniversary. With all the Harley activities, bar scenes and Pride Weekend there will be plenty to do. Details TBA.

GLHR is a confidential contact service out of Milwaukee for gay men with Harleys.

Coming up: "Coming out in the leather community".

If you are just out or wanting to come out in the leather community, I would like to get your thoughts, concerns, reactions etc., for a future column. "Everything your mama never told you and are afraid to ask" type thing. Your name or address will not be asked nor will you be identified in what is written. If interested, just drop a note to Papa Joe, c/o Quest, on line, or in some way let me know your story.

E-mail: I am on line as PPAJOE@aol.com. How long I last will be depend how close I am to the plug when the next frustration level hits boil. If you are on line, please send your copy via E-mail. With the blessing and thru the courtesy of Quest, this column is also on line at/in/on Gay Universe. If interested, contact jim@gayuniverse.com for details.

I'm out of here; pray for summer. Papa Joe Wisconsin Entertainer of the Year Pageant at the Paramount in Madison drew a great crowd ready to party. The other state pageants could take a lesson from this one. The pageant was serious but not at the expense of fun! Tony blended the opening numbers so well it was like one great big high energy production number yet featured all the main talent including DuWanna, last year's title holder and CoCo the current national title holder. The winners are: 2nd Runner Up - Cass Marie Domino, 1st Runner up - Kiara Nicole and the winner - Paddy Cakes!

start of the gay liberation movement, started the night of Garland's funeral.

Perhaps the more interesting explanation points to Dorothy Parker, the American writer whose short stories and one-liners have been popular with gay men in particular. Parker was married to a gay man, writer Alan Campbell, and some have suggested she was bisexual herself. In any event, she is widely recognized as a master at the one-liner; when asked to use the word "horticulture" in a sentence, she replied "You can lead a horticulture, but you can't make her think."

As recounted in the recent documentary "Coming Out Under Fire," Parker's books were on the list of approved literature for soldiers serving overseas. The language in them is exaggerated and campy — and some gay G.I.s used Parker's diction and syntax as a secret gay language in their speech and letters.

PAST/OUT

BY DAVID BIANCO

What happened to gays and lesbians during the Holocaust?

The experiences of gay men and lesbians in Nazi Germany are only beginning to be fully researched and explained. Much of the literature that exists (particularly in English) is full of exaggerations and unproved assumptions. But the story is an important one, for during Hitler's reign the most open and politically active gay and lesbian community the world had ever known was utterly demolished.

Under "Paragraph 175", sex between men had been illegal in Germany since 1871. Nonetheless, by the 1920s a remarkably diverse gay and lesbian subculture had developed in Germany, centered around Berlin. That city's Institute for Sexual Science provided a museum, library, and counseling center for gays and lesbians. The Scientific-Humanitarian Committee, which began in 1897, educated the public and lobbied the legislature about gay and lesbian concerns. During the 1920s, Germany had six journals for lesbians and fifteen for gay men. And Berlin and other cities had dozens of gay bars and nightclubs, as well as lesbian costume balls, gay-themed movies and plays and other cultural activities.

But homosexuality was considered dangerous by the rapidly growing Nazi party. The Nazis considered any otherwise healthy but non-reproductive Aryans a detriment to the ongoing world struggle with the lesser races. Also, any relatively secretive "clique" within German society was seen as a political threat that had to be stopped. Germany's gay and lesbian subculture was quickly suppressed when the Nazis came to power in 1933. The Scientific-Humanitarian Committee was outlawed, the Institute for Sexual Science was trashed, and gay and lesbian meeting places were raided and closed. Gays within the Nazi party — most notably SA leader Ernst Röhm — were murdered and denounced in the press.

SS Leader Heinrich Himmler in particular led a campaign against homosexuality, which strengthened and vigorously enforced Paragraph 175. During the 1930s, thousands of gay men were arrested and convicted of Paragraph 175 violations — and many were faced with a cruel choice: castration or imprisonment in concentration camps.

Gay men who were sent to the camps were forced to wear to wear pink triangles as a symbol of the reason for their punishment. Like the other prisoners, they were used as slave labor for the Nazi state and, later, the war effort. They were poorly fed and housed, and faced beatings and shootings as a regular part of their routine. Some anecdotal evidence and statistical studies suggest that gay men in the camps were more likely to die sooner than other prisoners. The greater mortality rates can be explained by a number of factors including lack of support from their families and from other prisoners, homophobic and sadistic guards, and fear that helping one another might invite accusations of conducting a same-sex relationship within the camp. Even so, the gay prisoners who died were the victims of overwork, disease, starvation, and shootings — and not the gas chambers and crematoria of the Death Camps in Poland.

Sometimes, gay men in the camps would be subject to medical experiments — often attempts to "cure" their homosexuality. In a handful of camps, gay prisoners who "proved" that they were no longer gay by performing sexually with prostitutes (often prisoners themselves) could be released. While the persecution of gays continued after the start of World War II, the Nazis seem to have slowed their campaign once German men were desperately needed for the war effort. Nonetheless, at least 5,000 gay men died in the Nazi concentration camp system — and possibly twice that number.

Less is known about the specific experiences of lesbians in Nazi Germany, but unlike the men they were not subject to arrest and imprisonment for their lesbianism. Of course, some lesbians were caught up in the Nazi concentration camp system for their political or religious beliefs. But more significant was the fact that lesbian public life and culture — just like that of gay men — was annihilated and did not really recover until the 1970s.

What is the origin of the phrase "a friend of Dorothy's"?

During the middle part of this century, some gay men and lesbians in the United States used the term "a friend of Dorothy's" as a code word for a gay man. Closeted gays in mixed company could ask each other, "Are you a friend of Dorothy's?" without fear of revelation and awkwardness if the answer was indeed no.

Two possible origins for this phrase have been suggested. The most obvious one suggests that the expression refers to Judy Garland's role in the 1939 film The Wizard of Oz. The film has always resonated with gay camp sensibility, and Garland herself has been a gay icon ever since. Particularly after her well-publicized suicide attempt in 1950, Garland was seen as a beloved tragic figure by gay men, who flocked to her concerts. Upon her death in 1969, some gay bars were draped in black in memorial. The Stonewall Riots, which marked the PrideFest is gearing up for its best festival ever. The 5th annual celebration is marking its first year at Milwaukee's Summerfest Grounds, the Henry W. Maier Festival Park. PrideFest kicks off Friday, June 7, with a dedication and ribbon cutting ceremony at 6 pm. That evening, the festival welcomes nationally known comedians Romanovsky and Phillips to the Alyn Hess (Miller) main stage.

PrideFest continues on Saturday, June 8, with an excellent line-up of entertainers, including a Broadway review by producer Dale Gutzman, national performer actor/comedian Jason Stuart, recording artist Jeff Krassner and dance music sensation Gillette. Other acts scheduled to appear include Don't Records recording artists The Yell Leaders, the Cream City Chorus, the Fest City Singers, lesbian comedian Tracey Rose from Illinois, Chicago's Theatre Q performing troupe and fireworks by the Bartolottas, accented with a laser light show.

On Sunday, June 9, PrideFest starts with a 10:30 am interfaith service, followed by the Pride Parade at noon, the ceremonial wedding at 6:30 p.m. plus a six-hour country line-up starting at 1:30 pm with Nashville's Jeff Miller, comedian John Berg and the BJ Daniels revue, which includes the best in female impersonators and performers from around the area.

This is a sampling of the outstanding entertainment PrideFest has to offer this year; however, the festival is still securing more performers for the June 6-7-8 event. Watch Quest for additions!

PrideFest will host a volleyball tournament and a Classic Car Show on Saturday, June 8.

PrideFest has the backing of leaders throughout the gay and lesbian community as well as the straight community. The Festival is proud of its many corporate sponsors who contribute to the success of the Fest each year, and to individual businesses who join together to stage this celebration of Bi/Les/Gay Pride and support its continued growth.
