The Art of Dating Continued

we talked with his friends for a while, get some dinner, catch a movie and go out for a drink. Redundant conversation notwithstanding, I thought it was an OK date. Art said he wanted to spend more time with me, but I figured ten hours was enough. "...and I don't think you're even listening to me now." Art says, bringing me back to the present. He finished dancing and has come back over to talk again. "Of course I was listening," I said with a straight face. "You were talking about how you just moved here from Nebraska after breaking up with Dale, your live-in boyfriend of three years, two months and seven days." (One of the few advantages of hearing the same conversation over and over again.) "Ummmm, yes," Art replies quizzically. He knows he has just been slammed, he just isn't sure how. He shoots, he scores!

Now it's not fair to dump this entirely on Arthur. I have just broken up with a guy who I thought was very controlling and needed more time than I was able to give. Art's a nice guy, but I can tell I'm not going to be able to give him the amount of attention he needs.

Arthur moves closer to me, putting my hand on his chest. "How does it feel? I've been working out for the past two days." It feels like the last time you put my hand on it on the dance floor, but I say instead, "Two days? So you decided to join Gold's Gym. How do you like it?" "I'm going to Gold's Gym," he says. Didn't I just say that? "I'm going to work this body, and come August, you're gonna see what you're missing, Jess." My hand slides off his body as Art walks away.

Honey—I slam the last of my glass as I signal the bartender—I know exactly what I'm missing. Stand down and move on. Time for another beer.

2 LesBiGay Travel Companies Team Up to Perfect new Damon Road Atlas 5th Edition!

The Damron Co. and Columbia Fun Maps have combined the skills that have made each company so successful in order to remake the Damron Road Atlas for its 5th edition. Damron, publishers of the original gay travel guide, the Damron Address Book, provided thousands of updated listings on gay-friendly businesses in over 60 cities and resort towns in the U.S. and Canada. Columbia, whose Fun Maps can be found all across gay America, brought their years of map making experience to redesigning over 100 full-color maps that highlight gay districts as well as a variety of tourist sites.

But the Damon Road Atlas doesn't stop there. The favorite feature of this book is its color-coded dots on every map that pinpoint accommodations, bars and bookstores that welcome lesbians and gays. In addition, there are non-mapped listings for restaurants, cafes, travel agencies, gyms and publications. As an added bonus to those always on the go, an overview box provides at one glance, phone numbers for taxis, public transportation, local gay centers and info lines, as well as precise directions on how to get from the airport to the heart of the lesbian and gay community.

The Art of Dating

By Jess Littleman

"Well, hello there, Jess." I am sitting at the bar when I hear his voice come up to me. Is he trying to sound like Diana Ross on purpose? I think to myself. I turn to look at the person walking up to me. He is slender, not too tall, a goodlooking face crowned by thinning hair. But I knew the voice before I even looked up from my Killian's Red. "Oh, hi Arthur," I reply, taking a large swig from my mug. "How was work today?" "Oh, not bad." There was a tone in his voice. "I was kind of expecting a phone call from you today." Oh, really? "Sorry, I had a busy day," lamely falling from my lips. I'm really not up for this today. "And you didn't even compliment me on my new outfit," Art adds down the bridge of his nose. Stepping back, he does a pirouette any prima donna would be proud of. "You look nice," I say after what I thought was an appropriate pause. You've gotta be kidding. I think, it's a T-shirt, it's a baseball cap and it's dark in here! As he parades out onto the dance floor, I think back to last week.

We met at the bar Monday, talked for a while, and decided to go out on Friday. Arthur wanted to meet up sometime in between, but I knew I had a busy work schedule that week, and Art was not someone who would tolerate being stood up. So I told him if I wasn't too tired, I would see him out at the bar.

As it turned out, we ran into each other every night during the week. And as the days passed, I realized we were having the same conversation over and over again, focusing mainly on you-know-who. Every night, he would ask if he could see me before our date on Friday, and I would decline because of my work. At first it was flattering, but by the end, it was just plain exhausting.

By Thursday, true colors were beginning to show. "I don't even know if this date is ever going to happen," he whimpered at one point. I'll tell you, there's nothing more attractive than a man acting like a grade school girl. I'm lying! Anyway, I wasn't sure if he meant he didn't want to go anymore or he thought I was going to back out, but I wasn't going to bite at the bait.

"Of course we're going out tomorrow," I said, thinking to myself, This is what I wanted—to go out on actual dates with guys. And I'm gonna go through with this even if it kills one of us.

Friday rolls around. I picked him up at his place.

PAST/OUT

BY DAVID BIANCO

What is the origin of the annual gay and lesbian pride events?

Many people know that the gay and lesbian marches, parades, and festivals that take place every summer across America and around the world commemorate the Stonewall uprising of June 28, 1969. But the idea of a gay event every summer actually goes back to the mid-1960s, to the "Annual Reminder" held every July 4th from 1965 to 1969.

The Annual Reminder was organized by the East Coast Homophile Organizations (ECHO), an umbrella organization of gay and lesbian groups in New York, Philadelphia, and Washington, D.C. The first Annual Reminder took place in 1965 at Independence Hall in Philadelphia as one of a series of demonstrations protesting government policies that considered gays and lesbians to be security risks and unfit for both military and civilian employment.

While ECHO also picketed the White House, the Pentagon, and the State Department in 1965, the Philadelphia protest became an annual tradition, with conservatively dressed gays and lesbians marching a stone's throw from the Liberty Bell on Independence Day five years in a row. Organizer Franklin Kameny, a long-time homophile activist and organizer of Mattachine Society-Washington, insisted that the women wear dresses and the men wear suits and ties. Protesters wore "Equality for Homosexuals" buttons and carried signs with slogans such as "Sexual Preference is Irrelevant to Federal Employment."

The 1969 Annual Reminder came within days of a series of clashes between police and gays in New York City, sparked by a raid at the Stonewall bar in Greenwich Village. Most of the forty or so New York gays and lesbians who had chartered a bus to join the Annual Reminder had "liberation" on their minds, not "equality." The activists who wanted to maintain the decorum of previous Annual Reminders objected when a pair of lesbians were seen holding hands. Kameny tried to separate the pair, much to the dismay of the gay liberationists. Craig Rodwell, a New York activist who had proposed the Annual Reminder in the first place, was furious and led the New Yorkers in breaking the "rules" of the Annual Reminder. For the rest of the demonstration, the New York activists paired off and held hands in same-sex couples.

Rodwell engineered a resolution that passed at the November 1969 ECHO Conference to replace the Annual Reminder with a new, annual demonstration shifted a week earlier to commemorate "the 1969 spontaneous demonstrations on Christopher Street." The resolution dubbed the New York City protest "Christopher Street Liberation Day" and urged other cities to form their own, parallel demonstrations the same day. The new protest was inspired by the broader goals and more confrontational tactics of the burgeoning gay liberation movement, in contrast to the public but polite protests of the homophile movement of the previous decade.

New York's first Christopher Street Liberation Day march was a part of a "Gay Pride Week" of activities including dances, political meetings, and an erotic art show. The march itself, on Sunday, June 28, visibly reflected the liberationist style, including shirtless, long-haired marchers, "Gay Power" signs, and open drug use. As with any march, crowd estimates vary widely, but perhaps five to ten thousand gays participated in the New York demonstration, with hundreds more in Los Angeles and Chicago.

The next year, the number of participants at the New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago demonstrations grew sharply, and marches were added in Boston, New Orleans, and other cities. Since then, events have been organized in every major city in America — some of which have continued the march/parade tradition, and some of which are more of a picnic or a festival. The issues most visibly represented in the pride events have varied widely — from opposing Anita Bryant in 1978 to supporting gays in the military in 1993. But contemporary gay pride events still draw on elements of the both the bold but conservative Annual Reminder and the confrontational, celebratory Christopher Street Liberation Day.

Papa Joe

International Mr. Leather is over and Joe Gallagher, Mr. N.Y. Leather will sport the title for the next year. He is one hot Leatherman's Leatherman. He had to win over first runner up, Mark Norton of K.C. Kansas and Antonio Sanchez, Mr. MSC. Amsterdam, Mr. ECMC Europe (Both biker groups) and Mr. Drummer Europe.

Male hormones just flowed off the stage and popular man in Leatherdom. To many it was one of the hottest contests ever in the International Mr. Leather series.

He will be invited and expected to be at most, if not all gay - leather related magazines, newspapers etc. on earth. He will be the most in demand and popular in leatherdom, invited to all major leather events in the world. He will be sought after to grace more events than is possible to do. There will be gifts from leather makers and suppliers. The list of kudos will go on and on but, with it comes the down side.

To give you some idea of what the title requires, Lenny Broberg's experiences come to mind. Lenny said he raised and set aside $10,000.00 to fulfill the job as he saw it. He limited himself to the major events and to those benefiting AIDS related causes. Even so, he gave up almost every weekend for a whole year.

To him it was almost a routine. He could juggle his time to fly across country, grace a reception, tried to get enough food to hold him over while smiling for pictures and hand shaking with everyone, after which he would judge or emcee a function, attend the follow up party and then jump on the plane getting back in time to shower and go to work. Flying to two different cities the same weekend was not uncommon, and while there, party going and table hopping was expected. He did this without pay, sometimes even paying his expenses.

When his year was up, he said he would do it all over again, but only because it felt good to help out where he could. That is the kind of man Lenny is, the judges try to find, and I admire.

Speaking of winners. It is over for another year and kudos all around. The fantastic amount of $21,814.06 was raised by the Possum Queen candidates, supporting bars, bar patrons, friends and the list goes on and on. Hats off to Max, who guided it, and to everyone who worked so hard and gave so much time, money and effort toward the election of their candidate. I am sure that each of you from Her Royal Possum Queen Highness VI - Dinah Thirst to the person who gave that last 6¢, feel a great sense of pride with the result.

FYI the money, minus expenses of less than 1%, was all designated to PWA supporting needs like food, shelter and medical.

Mae Western was the theme of The Oberons' May 11 club night at the Wreck Room. This was a lead in for their ninth anniversary run "Shoot Out at JO Corral" June 14 - 16. It promises to be another fun weekend with studly leather men from all over. If you're in luck, you could catch a glimpse of the ever charming but ever elusive Super Market Sally and her studly boy friend, Pete, who heads up the meat department. It is rumored that Pete's meat is the best in town. Detractors claim it's enough to make you gag.

Also in June - The Great Lakes Harley Riders will celebrate their 3rd anniversary with a meet and several runs June 7- 9. Most of the daylight hours will be devoted to riding, but you can expect them to be out and around in the evenings. GLHR is an international confidential contact service out of Milwaukee for Gay men with Harleys.

thermals, longjohns and leather will stop the numbing windchill cold that happens when you're doing 65 on the freeway with the temperature in the 40s. I am sure it took a couple of Boo Boo's Bloody Marys before they could coax blood into their extremities.

You've probably met many of them at the Argonauts' August campout. They are a riding-group who do almost weekly runs to better beaneries. The group has been around for over 10 years and is 21 members strong. If you are interested in joining them for a ride or whatever, contact them at O.R.R.O.C., PO Box 14033, Chicago, IL 60614. Tell 'em Papa Joe sent you.

The Lt. of GAY Comedy, Johnnie B. (At PrideFest Sun., June 9, 7 p.m.)

From the moment his show starts, you know you're in for a unique experience! Not only is he a comedian (oh, yes---a "gay comedian"), but a complete performer. There isn't a detail that he hasn't covered.

The Johnnie B. Show is a living shrine, a salute and homage to gays past, present and future. It's an educational experience for all, but more importantly, he breaks down the gay stereotypes and myths for those who may not know the true "lifestyle" of a gay person.

Johnnie B. is a complete one-man act, full of energy, full of honesty....a man on a mission with a point to make!

Catch his show at PrideFest on Sunday evening.
