GWM, masculine, straight-acting, stable couple, early to mid 40s, near

There are a lot of holidays in my life I'd just as soon forget. Christmas. The Anniversary of my Birth. Any holiday inspired by Hallmark or FTD. The connections I have to these days are either unfavorable or nonexistent.

There is, however, one anniversary I do observe, and I'd like to share it with you. For lack of a better term, I call it what it is, the Second Wednesday in June.

As was becoming a habit at the time, I was hanging out at ZA's after work on a week night. They might have been doing construction, I'm not sure, but instead of hanging out downstairs, I was at the bar upstairs. I was on my third beer, trying not to be noticed by anyone, knowing exactly why I was there. He was standing across the way from me.

Jimmy and I were acquaintances. We were 'friends of friends' who liked talking to each other. What he didn't realize was I was noticing him in other ways. His smile. His legs. The way he carried himself when he walked. A hundred other things, tangible or imagined.

An image: After 'Last Call' is announced, the ugly lights are brought up, and for a moment, they hit Jimmy square in the face. He squints; all of the laugh lines and crevices in his face are amplified. For a moment, I see what he will look like in ten years, and as good looking as he is today, it's nothing compared to the man he'll be in his forties.

Two months after I'd met him, I knew I had a crush on Jimmy, and tonight would be first time I would tell another man I wanted to be with him.

The evening wore on. Beer four had been sitting in front of me for thirty minutes, barely touched. Jimmy and I had said all of three sentences to each other, but I couldn't stop looking in his direction. I could feel I was losing my nerve. After all, I said to myself, he thinks I'm straight. He doesn't know I'm wanting to touch him, to hold him.

Hell, I wane as I down half the warm beer in one swig, I'd settle for just kissing him once. I was deciding whether or not to cut my losses when Jimmy walked by. "Kinda quiet tonight, huh?" he offered. I was going to answer when I looked into his eyes. In that brief moment, he must have seen a shadow of what was going on in my mind, because his expression changed, and then it happened. He smiled. I found myself flush and smiled back. I was completely mortified and exhilarated at the same time.

Bar time rolled around. I timed it so that Jimmy and I would hit the back door together. The exact pickup line has been lost to time, but whatever one I used must have been the right one. I met him an hour later and the rest, as they say, is history. I could get into all of the specifics of the encounter, but most of us reading this have been there.

Moments do stick out:

Bringing my hand up from his shoulder to the hair-line on his neck, feeling the contrast between his soft, tanned skin and his thick, dark, almost military crop. I have never experienced that feeling before or since.

I also remember the drive home afterwards.

Bringing my arm up to cover a sneeze, I caught a whiff of his scent on my arm. It caught me so completely off guard; well, let's just say the intersection of Main and Mason almost became a three-way stop that morning.

This is not a love story. Part of me wishes it were, that Jimmy and I became lovers, settled down and lived happily ever after. It took me another week to work up the courage to even speak to him again, to tell him how I felt. I knew going into this Jimmy probably wasn't going to fall head-over-heels for me the way I did for him just because I slept with him. He did finally confirm what I thought was true, and I went home to listen to Bonnie Raitt for three days to get over it myself.

It's two years later now, so I make it a point to track Jimmy down on the Second Wednesday in June and buy him the shot of his choice. Without him, I never would have found out about this important aspect of myself. Good and bad, I wouldn't have my life any differently today, and I write this as a tribute to him. He treated me like a person, and in today's world that can be rare. Jimmy, this one's for you.

PAST/OUT

BY DAVID BIANCO

Were there any gay heroes in the American Revolution?

For decades, American gays and lesbians have researched and publicized evidence of the homosexuality of famous gays and lesbians in the past, including figures from the American Revolution. Just like African-Americans pointing to the role of Crispus Attucks during the Boston Massacre and American Jews glorifying Haym Solomon's contributions to financing the Continental Army, American gays and lesbians have searched for gay heroes in our nation's founding drama. Finding fellow travelers who played a role in the genesis of the country is a way of asserting a community's ownership of part of American history, and its continuing right to exist in America. Blacks, Jews, and gays have all understandably felt nervous about whether the rest of America considered their place in American society to be secure — and so they have emphasized past contributions to important American historical events. (A similar process takes place within the gay and lesbian community when drag queens or people of color who feel marginalized assert that they were responsible for the Stonewall rebellion.)

Of course, claiming that gays contributed to the American Revolution is quite different from demonstrating that specific famous Revolutionaries had same-sex relationships or identities that we would recognize as "gay." Indeed, there is scant evidence of Americans before the late-19th century whose identities embraced same-sex sexuality. Nonetheless, in honor of our nation's 220th birthday, here are three men who have been put forward as gay heroes of the American Revolution:

- Alexander Hamilton. Jonathan Ned Katz's Gay American History, published in the bicentennial year of 1976, contains several letters from the future first Secretary of the Treasury to fellow Revolutionary soldier John Laurens. The letters are filled with passion and innuendo, such as when he ended a 1779 letter with: "I have gratified my feelings, by lengthening out the only kind of intercourse now in my power with my friend."

- Baron Friedrich Von Steuben. Randy Shilts' 1993 book Conduct Unbecoming makes a strong case that Von Steuben — a Prussian military hero whom Benjamin Franklin recruited to help train the Continental Army — was gay. Steuben left Europe under accusations of "having taken familiarities with young boys." He arrived at Valley Forge, where he led Continental soldiers in uniform drills and military exercises — and became close friends with both Hamilton and Laurens. He was eventually promoted to division commander right before the war was finally won at Yorktown.

- George Washington. Though his view is accepted by few scholars, in a 1993 article "George Washington's Gay Mess: Was the Father of Our Country a Queen?" University of Massachusetts Professor Charley Shively argued in the affirmative. Shively's assumptions and methods are unconventional, as he asserts "Assume everyone is homosexual until proven otherwise." His article (which was printed without footnotes) nonetheless does a yeoman's job of questioning the assumptions of traditional historians that all famous people are straight unless evidence of repeated same-sex intercourse can be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

Shively's portrait of Washington is one of a prissy queen "who spent hours fussing over his uniform, his hairdo, his sword and other military paraphernalia." He surrounded himself with handsome and brave young soldiers, and evinced little interest in women, including Martha — with whom he bore no children.

How much evidence does it take to prove that a George Washington or an Alexander Hamilton was gay? And if they were gay, does it matter? Scholars struggle with questions like these all the time. Certainly, knowing that important people in the past were "gay" can help boost the self-esteem of gays and lesbians, especially youth. But rather than re-writing "straight" biographies of American heroes to make them "gay" biographies, a more promising project (albeit more ambitious) would be to look at the biographies of all famous Americans of the past with an understanding of the complex nature of human sexuality — and the impotence of labels like "straight" or "gay" as applied to people who never encountered any such categories.

David Bianco, M.A., teaches gay and lesbian history and politics at the Institute of Gay and Lesbian Education in West Hollywood. "I have already paid a high personal, emotional and financial price for my involvement. I can afford to do so no longer," Meunier stated in his letter of resignation.

The Pridefest Board of Directors had issued a written directive to Meunier seven weeks prior to the festival after members of the PrideFest board lost confidence in Meunier's ability to represent the organization or enter into contract negotiations on behalf of the festival. The directive clearly removed all administrative and managerial responsibilities from Meunier, although he did remain on the Board of Directors. Meunier offered to assist in various festival tasks when asked or consulted by other Council members to do so.

Susan Cook, co-director, said "The entire council recognizes that Bill was instrumental in getting PrideFest to the Henry W. Maier Festival Park, and we have not denied him that credit. Regardless of any rumors that have circulated throughout the community, the decisions made by the board were business related. We felt that this extremely difficult decision was in the best interest of PrideFest Inc. as an organization and a community festival."

The PrideFest board and council thank Mr. Meunier for his many years of commitment to the festival and the community.

en's use of breast cancer screening tests, nurse researchers at the University of Wisconsin-Madison are hoping to describe lesbian needs in particular.

"Our overall goal is to identify the most effective information health practitioners can share with women who have not had breast exams of mammograms, the routine procedures we use to screen for breast cancer," said study director Diane Lauver, Ph.D., R.N., associate professor in the UW-Madison School of Nursing. "In addition, we want to identify barriers lesbians may experience when seeking mammograms and breast exams."

Lauver's study is supported by a $956,000 grant from the National Cancer Institute and National Institute for Nursing Research, as well as a supplement of $40,617 from the Office of Research on Women's Health. The study builds on her several years of research on women's behavior relating to early breast cancer detection.

"As with all women, lesbians have a higher risk of breast cancer as they age," said Lauver. "However, lesbians may experience a lack of sensitivity and may not be receiving information particular to their individual situations in their dealings with health practitioners, resulting in less care seeking."

Lauver's team is enrolling Wisconsin-based lesbians between the ages of 51 and 80 who have not had mammograms in the last 13 months and have not had cancer. The confidentiality of participants will be strictly maintained, she stressed.

Researchers will talk with study participants by telephone two or three times over the course of one year, asking questions about their views and barriers regarding breast exams and tests. Volunteers will be paid $15 after the final phone discussion.

Interested and eligible lesbians should call 1-800-991-5539 and mention the study on breast exams and tests.

"Writing for Social Change" A Seminar for Those Who Give a Damn!

Redbird Studios will host a three-day seminar August 8-10 in Milwaukee to give writers and non-writers critical information, hands-on experience and an insider's perspective into the realm of social change writing.

"People care passionately about issues," says Judy Bridges, founder to the writing education center. "But they don't always know how to write what they feel." The goal of this seminar is to give people tools they can use to reach the right people and effect change through their writing. Participants will write about their concerns and meet others who "care enough to pick up their pens and do something about it!"

For info and a detailed brochure, call (414) 481-3029, Milwaukee.

COMMITMENT '96 Sept. 6-7-8 - Milw.

Hundreds of gays and lesbians will converge in Milwaukee the weekend of Sept. 6-7-8 for the 11th annual COMMITMENT '96 Wisc. and Northern Ill. twelve step recovery roundup!

The weekend is open to anyone involved or having the desire to become involved with a twelve step program, and their guests. COMMITMENT '96 caters to many twelve step programs including AA, AlAnon, SCA, CODA, NA and many others.

Workshops and keynote speakers dealing with the theme, "Conscious Contact: Opening the Door," along with a variety of other recovery topics will highlight the weekend. A Friday night social hour, Saturday night pizza party and dance and a Sunday morning spiritual breakfast are scheduled.

Conference headquarters will be the War Memorial on Milwaukee's lakefront, with $2 per day parking available there.

Special reduced rates are available at the nearby Park East Hotel for reservations made before August 6 (mention Commitment '96); hotel phone is (414) 276-8800 or 1-800-255-8894.

Registration is $38 before August 10, $48 after; cost includes all workshops and speakers and the Saturday and Sunday scheduled activities.

For more info., write Commitment '96, PO Box 92794, Milwaukee, WI 53202, or phone Carl or Rick (414) 830-1742 or Sandi G. (414) 476-5848.

PRIDEFEST'S "FOUNDING FATHER" RESIGNS FROM BOARD

Bill Meunier, a co-director of the Pridefest, submitted a letter of resignation to the Board, effective June 23, 1996 at the Board of Directors' meeting. This, however came as no shock to the Board as Meunier had stated at a meeting on April 14th that he had intended to submit a letter of resignation after this year's festival.

Holly Hot Damn's Birthday Show at Za's was a fabulous time for all including the huge bunch of straight girls she had come out to see her!

Papa Joe

Wet and cold, and then colder and wetter, and then the weekend got worse. Three church picnics, Harley Davidsons Route 66 run, Great Lakes Harley Riders reunion were all busts because of it. About the only affair that had reasonable attendance was Pridefest. Because of the wet and cold, a lot of folks had to leave Pridefest for a local pub to warm up.

To you folks from out of town, come back and see us again; it was fun being with you and we promise better weather.

Lee and I arrived at Pridefest on Saturday, just before the radical religious rights (RRR) got shoed away and I mean to tell you they are scary. I really thought if I looked away, a couple of them would take a bite out of my heels just like a mad dog. There was a small boy on his dad's shoulders who looked terrified, while they were shouting at his father for taking him to Pridefest.

I find it hard to believe that they believe the hateful loud slogans they were parroting. "You have to be born again to be saved" to which I replied, "Honey, once was enough if it makes me like you." "Christ died for your sins!" "Speak for yourself," I told one while giving him a left handed regal gesture, that my God was the only true God and a lot older, bigger and better than their God. It was fun, but I am not really proud of it. I am sure it made no difference what anyone would have said, bigotry and hate know no reasoning. Sorta like knocking a hornets nest, once you get their attention, it's best to cut out.

Sunday, in spite of the rain, we (two other crazies and me) decided to do a breakfast run before the Pride Parade. It was not to be. The rain started and continued to get heavier. Jack's bike started acting up and about 20 miles out, we turned around. While stopped for the light at Forest Home and 86th, the bike quit, zippo, nadda, zilch. After pushing in under the canopy of a funeral home, we bud-died to the nearest restaurant and fed our faces while waiting for the trailer to arrive. What a way to sit out the parade!

On the brighter side, the sun was high and hot the next Saturday when five Great Lake Harely Riders and one friend on a Honda did a 105 mile ride just to celebrate riding weather. The pit crew and car didn't make it due to a pool being serviced.

Would you believe, two nice Saturdays two weeks apart and my head peeled both times!

If any of you got a highway rated bike and want to ride with, get in touch. Generally speaking, the Saturday rides take shape on Friday evening at the Wreck Room. Just ask bartender Tim to point the guys out and introduce yourself.

Speaking of Tim, The Oberons (he is one), just celebrated their ninth anniversary with a run headquartered out of the Wisconsin Hotel on Old World Third St. Saturday evening, after an early cocktail party and dinner, they all took in the rodeo at West Allis Western Days. Our house guest, who'd never been to one, was all gaga by the tight butts tucked in chaps sitting on the fence. Reminds me of the old Manhole days when we did the rodeo in Manawa. I could just shut my eyes and drool for days.

By the way, The Wisconsin Hotel is gay friendly and has been catering to the Leather communities run and party needs for a bunch of years now. If you find yourself in town and want a reasonably priced hotel, give it a shot. It is a grand old hotel that was allowed to get a little on the rundown side. It is being refurbished by the current owners. You will like it.

The Castaways is putting together a bus trip to Chicago on Saturday, July 6th. The bus will leave The 1100 Club at 7 pm. For a $20.00 ticket price to and from Chicago, while there, you are included and will get transportation to the champagne cocktail party in honor of the Chicago Hellfire Club 25th anniversary, and then a bar night at the Chicago Eagle.

There will be time to explore on your own before the bus departs at 4 am returning to Milwaukee at 7 am to the 1100 Club which will be open for food at that time.

By the time you read this, all the seats may be filled, but give it a try. If you are one of those who spoke up for a seat, know that unless you have paid for and received your ticket, you don't - that is, DO NOT - have a seat reserved in spite of what you have been told. Call Tom at 764-1135 for further info and tickets. You can't miss on this one. Lots of fun, and cheap.

The following weekend, Saturday, July 13, will be the Oberons Club night at the Wreck Room.

At the time I write this, there is a joint club night being planned between the Rodeo Riders, a Chicago club, and the new Milwaukee Club, The Firebirds. Expect it to be a Saturday nite at the Boot Camp some time in mid-July. Keep an eye open for it in case I miss it.

TO MY WAY OF THINKING, a personal opinion #1:

When this column started, I felt it was best to leave the issues of "specialty life styles" in the Leather Community to someone else. I am not an expert, and only had my experiences to bring to the discussion. Further, in my opinion, the debate about what is supposed to be seems to prompted by what people feel another will think. But, I am having a change of heart.

During the last several months, I have had the opportunity to talk to a number of younger guys who are relatively new to the Leather scene. Like you and me, they are attracted by the masculinity of it. Like us, the sight, touch, sound, smell and/or

Advise for the Adverse

Hi kids. Back from my mid year break. Had a suprise need to visit a friend of mine by the name of Betty. Anyway, the folks workin for Miss Ford said I can go back to my readers, so here we go!

Dear Chinequa,

I can't help but feel sad as I look to the younger gay generation. They just seem to lack such fashion sense. Out just last night there were more pointed collars on these fools than a Dracula convention. They could take an eye out. I know it was easier in my day, just make sure that the was an aligator on it. But there must be something I can do?

Yours sincerely,
Lost in Retroville

Hello Lost,

Chinny girl is with you on this one. I mean with all these crazy little fools keep runnin around in the garb they are who knows what will next appear next. I went out the other night to a public appearance scheduled by my agent Lashonda (who by the way is gonna have a new hairdo when I'm done with her) and the whole place seemed to have borrowed their outfits from Fat Albert and Friends. I mean we have to ask ourself is Retro really safe. All that Latex and Polyester whapped around a bunch of flames gives me the jitters. Now I know this season's collection at the Gap ain't helping by supplying us with eleven shades of peach to choose from but there must be something. I guess we may just have to accept that the day of the preppie boy is gone. But dont you worry hun, I'm sure you don't look out of place. (Yah right). Look back and remember your momentary lapses of fashion (and dont tell me you didn't own any parachute pants) and hope for the best. As for what you can do for them hun, who knows.

Lovin ya in those Loafers,
Chinny Go Girl

Dear Chinny,

I am wondering if you can help me figure out a sticky situation. I am interested in this boy, but he says he just wants to be friends. But as he says that he calls me three or four times a day to talk and see what's up. This seems like a lot of times to call, or at least to me. I like talking to him and want him to keep calling, but how many calls is a sign that maybe he wants to be more than friends?

Sincerely, Phoning in Pheonix

Dear Phoning,

I'll say you have a problem on your hands but it is not how many times that boy is calling. What I really want to know is why you ain't got nutin' better to do than be home to count his calls. Ever heard of playin' hard to get. What this letter sounds to me like is the classic "How to Catch a Man Who Don't Want To Be Caught". And though I would love to tell you all those secrets, I suggest you buy my Book by the same title. What I will tell you is, no where on that list is "sit home and wait for him to call." You got to get out darlin', let him pester your machine, Cause everyone knows that "I can't come to the phone" translates to "I got better things to do than wait for your sorry ass to call."

Good luck darlin'.
The Ever Fab Chinny

taste trips their trigger. About the only thing different between them and us is the years we have been there.

They are asking questions which deserve response. What is right and wrong as a leather man in an S&M relationship? Just how far can you go if you're a top? What are my responsibilities as a top/bottom? Keys and Hankies, right or left? Where do you find the rules?

There really are no rules, and the more you read, the more you find differences in each writer's view. You will find one thing that is consistent, and I stress it, "if it works for you and your mate, it is the way it should be." At no time can it be at the expense of another. (to be continued)

GAY YOUTH HELPERS NEEDED FOR NEW "800" HOT LINE!

Gay Youth Milwaukee is looking for gay/lesbian/bisexual & transgender youth who are interested in working on a statewide toll free (800) hotline for GLBT youth 12-21 years of age.

Gay Youth Milwaukee and BESTD Clinic were recently awarded a grant from the Wisconsin AIDS/HIV Program to begin and operate a hotline for GLBT youth. The purpose of the peer-operated hotline is to break down the isolation that many GLBT experience, provide peer support, referrals and HIV risk reduction information. Initially, the hotline will operate Friday and Saturday evenings.

Interested youth need to apply for training,
which will take place during the latter part of July.
Trained youth hotline workers will receive stipends for the hours they work staffing the line. Interested GLBT youth can write to Gay Youth Milwaukee, PO Box 9441, Milwaukee, WI 53209 for an application, or call (414) 265-8500 for more info.

HIV PUBLICATIONS OFFERED

Three new HIV/AIDS publications are being made available by United HIV Services.

"AIDS 201: Survival Tips for Symptomatic PWA's" was written by Bobby Positive of Chicago.
This 51-page booklet provides 54 practical suggestions for persons with AIDS to have lives worth living and under their own control. Bobby Positive, obviously a pen name, writes with the authority of a person who has lived the roller coast-er ride called HIV disease.

The second booklet is entitled "Letters of
