GJ: Jimmy was...different. He was...(searches for the right words while taking a sip of soda) working for him for the couple of years that I did taught me how to deal with people--how to deal with bar owners, how to deal with customers, especially how to deal with queens. (laughs) Ninety-five percent of them are really nice. (Shakes his head) Five percent of the queens you just wanna tell them...(holds up The Hand)

JL: I gotcha on that one. This was my first time down in Milwaukee and it was a lot of fun. I saw you were always flanked by Todd. Wasn't he your dresser that night?

GJ: It's best [when] your dresser is someone you can yell at when you get tense--that you can ask to do the stupidest things for you, such as, "Could you tie my shoes? I can't bend over..." and they'll do it. It's not fun to be backstage, have them getting mad at you when you get mad at them for the littlest things and they storm off and won't help you anymore. I know Todd won't do that.

JL: Is it a good thing to have a roommate-slash-boyfriend as your dresser?

GJ: Some people would say no. Some people say, "I don't want to be back with my boyfriend because I don't want to get in a fight with them." Todd and I, when we're backstage, he knows that, hey, this can be really tense, but he just takes it with a grain of salt. He knows I'm not serious. He knows I'm just going through pageant jitters.

JL: Tell me a little about the Milwaukee competition. What did you do to get prepared for it?

GJ: Really? Not a lot. This pageant...I decided about a month and a half ago to enter. It wasn't on my mind all year, this summer, and just got to a point where I thought I would enter. I talked to Kelly Jo Klein, DuWanna Moore and Sage LaRue and they said they were going to enter the queen portion of it. I jokingly said I was going to enter the Mr., and then started thinking seriously about it--"Maybe I could...maybe I should." It started getting back to me that no guy had ever won it twice. I thought, "Well, if I enter, I'll try to win it a second time."

JL: How did you choose your costumes and talent for this competition?

GJ: Talent? I'm not a dancer, but I like to be on stage--I found this out years ago--and play to an audience, and the only way can think of doing that is dancing and flirting with anybody sitting in the audience. As you saw when I was there, I do take off a few items of clothing.

JL: Didn't Notice. (I'm lying!)

GJ: I have the worst voice, I can't sing live. I can't be taught to dance. If somebody told me I had to do a box step, I'd be like, "What? Step in a box? What the hell are you talking about?" I can do a grapevine. That's about it. To be out there to dance and to just have fun? I think I'm good at that.

JL: What did you think of the Milwaukee competition this year?

GJ: I liked that competition. Every pageant has its faults, but this year I think the competition was the best I've seen in years. It's not like one male contestant walked on stage who was going to walk away with it. This year it was all five who competed were backstage wondering who won?

JL: So there wasn't a point where you thought, "I've got it. I've won this"? Not until they announced your name!

GJ: No.

We also talked a while about the interviewing process.

JL: What's a typical question?

GJ: "What cartoon character do I associate with?" Simba [from The Lion King]. A standard is, "If you were stranded on a desert island, who--besides your lover--would you to stranded with and why?" The classic question, asked again this past weekend, is "If the gay community had their own Mount Rushmore, who should the four faces be?"

JL: Now that you've won down in Milwaukee, are you going to do anything else with this title? Is it a preliminary for any other pageant?

GJ: No...there are a few requirements of the winners. Last time I won they asked if I would perform at MAPFest...[people] may now call you to perform, but the pageant doesn't really promote you as their star. It's a feather in your cap, and it's a fun competition.

JL: Are you going to keep on competing for crowns?

GJ: Someone asked me last night if I'm going for number three at this pageant. No. If I try that again, it'll be another five years and I'd be almost forty! (laughs)

JL: Not everybody knows about that you were working at a store where you felt you were discriminated against because you were gay. Eventually, when you were fired, you felt it was because of that and...

GJ: It actually came about when I competed at Mr. Gay Wisconsin the first time. My district manager found out why I took a day off--to go down and compete at a contest--and when she found out I competed at something called Mr. Gay Wisconsin, she put two and two together. From that day forward, I got the worst reviews, the worst write-ups you could imagine. Two years before that I was her number one manager and could do nothing wrong. I could tell her off to her face almost, and she wouldn't care. The day she found out I was gay everything turned around. I proved through the State that [the store] was wrong.

JL: Do you have any messages to your adoring fans at the bar? Anything you want to get off your chest? This is your big chance...(personal note; I was hoping he would get his shirt off his chest!!!)

GJ: Congratulations to the other four guys I competed with...I had fun. And (he thinks for a moment) I'm still the same guy...

JL: ...and the shot is still 151.

I always have a lot of fun doing these interviews, but interviewing Gregory James was a special treat because I also consider him a friend. I just wanted to convey my own personal congratulations to him as well as Todd for making my first visit to Mr. Gay Wisconsin a wonderful experience.--Jess Littleman living while being supported according to their own individual needs. The residence which is sponsored by St. Camillus AIDS Ministry, offers private bedrooms, comfortable common areas,

The Argonauts of Wis. put out the barrels for their annual food drive in all the Green Bay area bars. Coordinating with Center Project, they collect food for PWAs in need. Some of the bars will be offering special promotions to encourage participation.

The AOW has just announced their January 18 anniversary dinner party will be held in Green Bay. After the dinner, there will be a bar bust and an after-hours party. All is not firmed up, but if you arrive on Friday, along with special hotel rates, you can expect some special activity for you to enjoy. If you are still there on Sunday morning, a pancake and porky breakfast will be available.

All inclusive weekend prices or ala carte will be available. For further information regarding the Club or its activities, you may call (414) 433-0528.

The Argonauts have for many years been known for their AIDS related fund raising. They are the longest established club in the state and have sixteen members.

On Saturday, November 16, The OBERONS will be staging the second of their fund raisers for Children with AIDS at South Water Street Docks (formerly Gargoyles, the last building at the end of National Ave.) Note, as mentioned before, this is the third Saturday of the month instead of their normal second Saturday.

The FIREBIRDS of Milwaukee will be holding a fund raiser for the St. Camillus AIDS Sat., November 23 at the Boot Camp Saloon. In addition to drawings for gift certificates from various area businesses, they will be holding a silent auction featuring two autographed Steve Kelso calendars. Buzzcuts will be available for a minimum $5.00 donation to the Raphael House.

Raffle tickets will be available at the door for $1.00 each or six for $5.00. Items for the silent auction will be on display at the Boot Camp the week before the event. Boot Camp is located at 209 E. National. The Firebirds information line is (414) 299-9707.

Out-of-town guests may wish to take advantage of a special rate at the Hotel Wisconsin, located downtown at 720 Old World Third St. To make your reservations, call the Hotel (414) 271-4900, and mention the Firebirds for the reduced rate of $42.00

Raphael House, named after the angel of healing, offers a supportive home like environment for up to seven adults living with HIV/AIDS. Residents contribute toward effective small group community recreation and exercise rooms, sun porch and meals, all in a beautiful wooded setting. Services are rendered without regard to religion, sexual orientation, race or gender.

Based on a conversation with Jeff E, I was expecting to relay their intentions to claim one of the Saturdays of the month for their club nights. Just keep the day in mind until we are able to confirm one way or the other.

And speaking of fetishes, I have just received early word that Men in Boots -Wis. and Great Lakes Harley Riders will do a social on Friday evening, Jan. 17. Saturday, a boot and leather swap meet will take place in Milwaukee. Details TBA.

Here is another chance for you to become acquainted with people who share your interest(s) and for the curious, stop in, look 'em over and ask questions. You will be welcomed even if you are not into boots or Harleys. If you are interested in selling some or your leather clothing and/or gear, get in touch with GLHR. If you're buying, be there.

The Great Lakes Harley Riders is sending out PRs saying they are now an international organization. This group is a confidential contact service for Gay men who own Harley Davidson bikes. If interested, write PO Box 341611, Mil WI 53234-1611 or EMail - Gayharley@aol.com.

A Great Lakes Harley Rider

GLHR started in 1992 by a few Gay Harley men who wanted to meet other Gay Harley men coming to Harley Davidson's Homecoming '90 in 1993. It has grown to over 100 men, publishes a quarterly newsletter, and has no rules, no dues, no officers and no elections, much like the Saturday Condo Association. I like that kind of club.

HAPPY TURKEY DAY!

Here He Comes....Mr Gay Wisconsin!

It's about 2 hours before bar time on Monday night. I wander into Java's, the second floor bar above ZA's in Green Bay. Here I am meeting up with Gregory James, the gentleman who won the Mr. Gay Wisconsin 1997 title a scant twenty-four hours previous in Milwaukee. We adjourn to a business office to talk to--with the exception of those damn shots of 151--this interviewer's favorite bartender. A graduate of Ashwaubenon High School and holder of an Accounting Degree from NWTC, I asked Mr. James what he was like back then.

Gregory James: I wasn't a jock and I wasn't a nerd...(laughs)...I was very quiet. I did not belong to anything...no big groups of friends. Shy through my senior year.

Jess Littleman: Were you like that at NWTC, too?

GJ: No. I would go out at night. I could skip school and not have to worry about it.

JL: What are you doing now? What do you do in your free time--besides sleep?

GJ: I don't have a lot of free time. A lot of my time is spent working on my house remodeling, spending time with Todd (TC Hammond, his partner of five years), which isn't very often. Our schedules conflict.

JL: Give a quick rundown of your career competition for titles.

GJ: God! I started reluctantly as a backup dancer for Lorinda Kelly in 1991 when she competed for Miss Gay USA. From that, I won Mr. Emerald City 1991; Mr. Gay Wisconsin in '91-'92; Mr. Gay Wisconsin USA for '93-'93; and I just won Mr. Gay Wisconsin again for '96-'97.

JL: Cool. You went to Nationals, was it...

GJ: (counts to himself) Three years ago. The one I went to was in Hickory, NC. I made Top Ten...I've been told seventh. I'm not quite sure what the placing was.

JL: What was it like?

GJ: It was...different. [Hickory was] a very small city [and] a small, tavern-like bar with a dance floor for a stage. For a national pageant, it's weird to be in that small of a bar.

JL: Do you have a favorite competition or show that you've done over the years?

GJ: Um...actually, this last Mr. Gay Wisconsin was the most fun. Nothing was expected of me, so I could relax and have fun.

JL: What do you mean, nothing was expected of you?

GJ: I entered because a number of friends said they were going to enter as queens. They said we'd enter and have a lot of fun with it--to compete, hopefully place. I didn't accept any sponsorship money beforehand. That way, if I didn't place, I wouldn't owe anyone anything, except for myself. That way, I didn't owe any explanation.

JL: Do you have a favorite category?

GJ: Favorite category? Evening wear, but none of them do that anymore. Now my favorite is talent.

JL: Do you have a favorite event?

GJ: PrideFest, when I was Mr. Gay Wisconsin the first time, and performing at a benefit show in Milwaukee years ago.

JL: What originally got you to go after your first title? Did someone say, "You gotta do this?" How did you get into this?

GJ: I used to date one of the local queens years ago. She entered a few contests, and I was her backstage dresser. When we stopped seeing each other, a friend of mine, Christopher Jensen--Lorinda Kelly--asked me to be a dancer with them. I told him, "I've never been on stage! I don't want to do this!" And he just kept on bugging me about it until I said yes. When I was getting ready for his show, I saw Emerald City was coming up. I thought, "Maybe I should enter it as a boy." That's how I entered my first pageant.

JL: The first time you tried, you won?

GJ: (grins) Yes!

JL: You've also been on the other side of the judging table. You were involved with TAG Team Productions for about a year. Tell me about that.

GJ: I was involved with the USA system with Jimmy King for at least six years, helping queens out with the pageant, helping Jimmy with some of the stuff, and helping Todd with his first Mr. Pageant. When Jimmy King passed away, the USA system was thinking of moving the Wisconsin title to an owner outside of Wisconsin. I told the owner of the national system that [I along] with two partners [Todd and Ann] would take it over for a year and keep it running. We ran it for one year to support the preliminaries, an At Large pageant, Miss Great Lakes, and one Miss Wisconsin. (Thinks for a moment) And we ran a Mr. And a Ms. We ran all of them! Then we decided to get out of it for financial reasons.

JL: Tell me about Jimmy King.

An Interview with Gay Comic - Jason Stuart by Mike Fitzpatrick

Gay comic Jason Stuart returns to Green Bay for an encore engagement at the Funny Bone Comedy Club November 13-17. This time around Jason hopes to raise money for Center Project and top the success of his January appearances, which hold the attendance record for the night club.

Since his appearance last winter, Jason has captivated audiences both gay and straight throughout the country. Jason's main stage appearance at Milwaukee's Pridefest last June brought a sustained standing ovation and is considered by many to be one of the highlights of the festival.

Quest spoke with Jason on November 5 while he was in New York City preparing for his appearance at Caroline's Comedy Club.

Quest: What's happened to you since your appearance last January in Green Bay?

Stuart: "It's been a very busy year. I just finished guest starring in the new Fox network drama 'Fire Company 132.' It debuts in December and is a fireman's version of 'ER.' I played a straight janitor - can you believe that? - who sets fire to a cigar store by accident. It was a cute part. "I also did a featured role in 'National Lampoon's Vegas Vacation' with Chevy Chase. Yes, the Griswolds go to Las Vegas! The film comes out next Spring. "I also just hosted the first GLAMA Awards - that's the Gay/Lesbian Music Awards. I got a nice review in Billboard and got to work Michael Musto, Lypsinka and Melissa Etheridge. As a result of the awards show, I have a meeting with Atlantic records who are interested in my doing a comedy album for them."

Quest: Sounds like you've been busy.

Stuart: "Oh there's more. I got to be a 'gay love interest' this year. I did a play - Ronnie Larson's 'Scenes From My Love Life' (Larson's play 'Making Porn' is currently a smash off-Broadway) - I played a guy basically was cheated on. Did six weeks in LA and two in Palm Springs."

Quest: And then there was your appearance at Pridefest.

Stuart: "That was wonderful! I felt very supported. I mean it was outside and nobody was listening to anybody. The minute I got up and started my act everyone just crowded around and paid attention!"

Quest: And laughed and gave you a huge standing ovation. It seemed to last forever.

Stuart: "I know. It was one of the most overwhelmingly positive experiences in my career."

Quest: You did a lot of very topical material that night. Has the fact that gays have been in the news all year given you a lot of ideas for new jokes.

Stuart: "You bet. One of my newest is about Hillary. You know how she says it takes a village to raise a child? Well, for gays it takes the Village People!"

Quest: Are you looking forward to return to Green Bay?

Stuart: "Oh yes! The gay community was so supportive! You know my first week holds the record at the Funny Bone as the best since they've opened. And I've arranged for my opening night to be a benefit for your local AIDS organization."

Quest: Center Project?

Stuart: "Yes, that's the one. All the door proceeds will go the them. 100%"

Quest: Any closing thoughts?

Stuart: "You know I got to meet (openly gay former Clinton advisor) David Mixner at a book signing not to long ago. And he wrote in my copy 'Jason, you're a true pioneer.' That was quite a thrill to see that."

Tickets for the opening night benefit show are now available at the Funny Bone and are $7 general admission and $9 for prepaid reserved seating. The Funny Bone is located in the Ashwaubenon plaza, 2801 S. Oneida St. The box office is open daily at 10 AM and tickets may be reserved via phone by calling 498-BONE (498-2663).

PrideFest Grows Internationally!

Milwaukee--On Nov. 1, PrideFest joined Pride groups from around the world in Kansas City, Mo. for the International Association of Lesbian/Gay Pride Festival Coordinators convention (IALGPC). The three-day convention hosted 167 people from the United States, Mexico and England. Conventioneers took part in educational seminars including procuring entertainment, merchandising, communicating with your community, working with the media and corporate sponsorship just to name a few. IALGPC also takes this time to work on strengthening its membership, increasing communication between pride groups and building the organization through election of new leaders and improving its own operations with the help of its members.

This year, Co-Director Mike Hall and Marketing Director David Todd attended the convention on behalf of PrideFest. Todd was also elected to the IALGPC Board of Directors representing the Midwest which includes Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio and Nebraska.

"It's incredible how much you can learn, how much you can share and how much you can walk away with after just three days," says Todd. "This convention not only fills your head with an abundance of great ideas, but also inspires you. It really gets you excited about the year ahead."

The International Association of Lesbian/Gay Pride Festival Coordinators meets once a year, supporting member groups in planning their pride celebrations, with their regional conventions and facilitating networking and idea-sharing throughout the organization.

PAST/OUT

BY DAVID BIANCO

Who was Yukio Mishima?

Yukio Mishima was one of Japan's most popular twentieth century novelists, whose writings include some of the first modern Japanese explorations of gay identity and gay subculture. His disturbing suicide in 1970 drew attention to his unusual philosophy, which combined right-wing nationalism with the veneration of the male body and a fascination with violence.

Mishima was intensely proud to have descended from samurai warriors, and he aimed to make his life follow that of the ideal Japanese warrior, with a finely honed sense of both the martial and the fine arts. Although he generally looked down upon anything non-Japanese, even as a student he was a fan of the essays of the previous century's gay literary savant, British writer Oscar Wilde.

Perhaps his most famous - and certainly his most personal - novel was Confessions of a Mask. Published in 1949, it told of a boy's growing awareness of both his homosexuality and his fascination with sadomasochism. The protagonist's inability to make himself aroused by his girlfriend puzzled many postwar Japanese readers, some of whom considered the book to be an attempt at parody. Few recognized (until years later) its autobiographical nature - Japan's first "coming out novel."

Two years later, Mishima published Forbidden Colors, a second novel with gay themes. This one, however, had a broader setting, introducing its readers to the diverse gay subculture in 1950s Tokyo, with its bars, cruising spots, and gay parties. One of the main characters is a gay man who uses a younger man to wreak vengeance on women who wronged him in the past.

During the 1960s, Mishima continued to write, and to develop the philosophy that ultimately led to his violent death. He believed that the emperor was central to Japanese society, and indeed that no two people could love each other without first loving the emperor. He also believed that to live with honor meant to be prepared for war, to be unafraid of violence, and to be intensely loyal to one's colleagues.

Sometimes, these beliefs had bizarre manifestations. In 1967, Mishima led a ceremony for about a dozen university students in which all of them drew blood from their little fingers and poured it into a cup. They then used the blood as ink to sign their names to a pact. The ceremony finished with Mishima adding salt to the cup and drinking from the blood, after which each of the other students followed suit.

In his writing, Mishima frequently praised the Japanese samurai who ended their own lives by performing seppuku (also known as hara-kiri), a ritual form of suicide in which the warrior takes a short knife and disembowels himself, after which a fellow warrior cuts off his head. It became clear to many who read his works (which by the late 1960s were among the most celebrated of any Japanese writings) that Mishima hoped to end his own life someday in such a fashion. Seppuku was clearly erotic for Mishima, who once called it (just months before his death) "the ultimate masturbation."

However, Mishima felt that ritual suicide was not honorable unless one's body was in peak physical condition. Though he was skinny as a young man, he started a strict regimen of bodybuilding at age 30, which he continued through his death at age 45, by which time he was extremely muscled. With such a body, Mishima posed for many erotic photographs and even acted in a Japanese gangster film.

But Mishima is probably best remembered for the last day of his life. On November 25, 1970, along with some of his right-wing nationalist followers, he stormed a Japanese military headquarters (the army was then called the "Japan Self-Defense Force") and demanded to speak to the troops outside. When they assembled, he exhorted them to rise up and overthrow Japan's postwar pacifist regime and replace it with a government that once again emphasized military might. When the troops laughed at and heckled Mishima he returned to an office inside, where he shouted his undying loyalty to the emperor and proceeded to cut open his abdomen with his sword. His protege (widely believed to be his lover), Masakatsu Morita, then cut off Mishima's head and committed seppuku himself.

The performance, by Diane Bloom and Marge Rock, presents their new "Work-in-Progress" called Pop Out of the Drama. A "psycho-musical," it is the first of its kind....a unique blending of the-atre and therapy."
