Haute, Indiana and I'm one of the three headliners. [One of ] the other headliners [is] Jim J. Bullock (of Tammie Faye and Too Close for Comfort fame).

I hate to even mention this, but last week I got a call from the TV show Crook and Chase (formerly of The Nashville Network). They called and they're interested in having me on their show. I sent them videotaper footage today...I don't know when I'll know anything. I don't know if anything's gonna happen or not, so I hate to even to tell people about it because if it doesn't happen, then they're all disappointed. (Slaps head) Like, I'm not gonna be...!

This isn't the first time Randy has had television exposure. I remember the news story Erin Davisson did on him for WFRV Channel 5. He then told me he was on the original grandmother of all lip sync shows, Puttin' on the Hitz. Frightening!!! He's also appeared in two-page spread in a publication called Dragazine.

But I digress. We did get around to talking about the reason he's on our cover this issue: The CCRae show. Besides some old favorites and new characters, the show has a new twist—a second actor.

CC: Polly Griffin is a twenty-six year-old female actor from Richmond, Virginia, but actually she is a Wisconsin native. She's done theatre, dinner theatre; she's done backstage theatre and theme park theatre. She's got some experience under her belt. She's a very attractive young lady, very talented. She's able to do what I do in the show, and that is to create many different looks throughout the show.

You'll see many new characters in the show this year. In fact, there will be very few carried over from other shows. We're looking at characters like Batman and Catwoman; Patsy and Edina from

Polly Griffin
doing
ABFAB

Absolutely Fabulous; Adam and Eve (Author's Note: They're in the Bible. I had to ask, too); Pete Burns from [pop video band] Dead or Alive; and other characters that we are creating on our own.

I've added two new angles—one of them is Polly, so we can do 'duet' kind of things, and a sexual aspect...(he pauses for a moment)...I should say an 'erotic' side, because I wanted to draw in more people. I have a great following now—I'm happy with that—but I always want to bring in more people. People who are afraid to come, or won't come to the show because they don't like drag. I tell them it's a comedy show, a point I really like to stress. Drag is very secondary. In fact, in this year's show, I'll be the first half in drag, the second half out.

JL: Does Polly do any 'male drag'?

CC: Yes...but no. It's so subtle that it's not even worth mentioning.

JL: One of the character's I'm assuming is coming along for the ride is Eunice P. Hole. Where did she come from exactly?

CC: She is a combination of mental patients I took care of at the mental health center, and drag queens I've known over the years. She's a twisted person of all of that into one crazy character. She's been such a successful character, I've kept her in every year and built a repertoire of numbers on her. Eventually, they'll be The Eunice P. Hole Show.

JL: Have you ever considered doing stand-up comedy as Eunice?

CC: No, I've never really thought of that. I kinda like sticking with CCRae as the stand-up character right now—I not sure why. I guess it's because that's how I've done it...I'm comfortable with that. I'm not sure about Eunice. I'd have to be totally crazy all of the time, like, whacked out. (Laughs) I'm not sure if that would be too much for people. They'd be afraid to talk to me!

The hour grew late; my computer batteries almost dead. I said goodbye to Randy, but I knew I'd be seeing him up on stage soon. I would be reprimanded if I didn't mention some upcoming performances of The CCRae Show: Za's Videobar, Green Bay on 3/15, Manouevres, Madison on 3/16, Rumors, Minneapolis on 3/23. And always keep an ear to the ground as more dates are being confirmed.

Green Bay, WI, Argonauts of WI, 21st Anniversary Party!

Brandy's II was where I caught up with everyone when I arrived about dusk. By that time, the meetings between The Castaways and Argonauts for their joint run and the Daddy and Daddy's Boy Weekend were over and the party was underway. AOW members Thom, John and Glen did their best to entertain the out-of-towners. George and Ma were rude, crude and obnoxious until they left for their beauty rest prior to the evening's festivities. (Don't know why, don't get any better.)

Cocktails and dinner at Cheeks was very enjoyable; three hours flew by catching up with persons I haven't seen since I moved to Milwaukee. (Dean, you're looking better than ever.) From there, most of the group went bar hopping. Some of more vintage folks went to Java's for a toddy and to watch the hot young stuff dancing at ZA's. Nice view without the volume of the lower bar.

Family business prevented me from taking in the after hours party and Tom and John's, but from the look of folks about 2 pm Sunday, it was a doozie.

Argonauts also presented their new officers: President, Steve J.; V.P., Stacy D.; Sec'y., John K.; Treas., Thom T.; Corresp. Sec'y., Russ S. and Sgt.-at-arms, Al K.

Washington, DC, Mid Atlantic Leather Weekend.

This event is a cross between IML and a major club run. Limited to 1200 guests, headquartered at the Washington Plaza (old Ramada) on Thomas Square, this is a weekend of being catered to.

Shuttle buses to and from events, bars and hotels made it convenient. The Saturday dinner buffet was nothing short of spectacular. The bars were so packed you got to "know" your neighbor well. Probably the most enjoyable spot was the hotel lounge.

Just two drawbacks, the long lines for Sat.

evening buffet and the Sat. brunch food. I didn't mind the lines, for I met many hot leather men while waiting to eat, but I will have Sat. brunch elsewhere before I get on the bus.

Got a chance to chat with Steve Kelso, since I missed him in Milwaukee. Would you believe, Bob of Designing Men got in the picture. Is there no place you can get away from him?

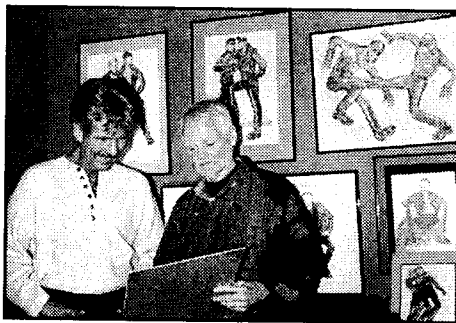

Steve Kelso

You might want to put this event on your list to check out. You won't be disappointed.

Milwaukee, WI Leather Swap Meet and Parties - 1100 Club

There was a lot of buzz on this event, but not one of the involved Great Lakes Harley Riders expected it to be the success it was. There were leather bargains all over the place. Much of the leather items sold as they hit the tables, but still merchandise piled up. Got so crowded, late arriving vendors had to sell out of their bags. By the time 7 pm rolled around, the only stuff left had 31 or under waist lines or short legs. Individual vendors folded up and the consignment table was taken down by 8 pm. Some folks came in later and were disappointed to see nothing left.

Besides local men, GLHRiders came in from Minnesota and Illinois. Hot men all. Even had several join

The Saturday Condo Association.

The WI Boot Men beer bust and the Castaways MC after hours party were packed and fun.

Bob G., the organizer of this weekend, owner of Wholesale Boots (a discount mail order source for quality boots) and the facilitator of the Wisconsin Boot Men, has promised to do this event again and asks you to suggest ways to make it better.

He is also thinking of some boot party nights. If you are interested in his events, parties, etc., send mailing info to Wholesale Boots, PO Box 94, Francis Creek, WI 54214. e-mail address BOOT4SAL@aol.com.

gy! And it's not catchy enough!" I wanted something shorter, that's gonna stick in people's minds. So I thought rather than changing the entire name...I initialized it to C-period-C-period...which really has no great, wonderful meaning—no great story behind it. (Shrugs) Just because it's easy, I tell people, "It stands for Credit Card, and that's how I finance my career!" (Laughs) Which is partly true! And I'm still paying those Goddamn credit cards...

JL: 'Till we're long gone, I'm sure. When you were performing in drag, you were a Miss Emerald City, and you won locally as Miss US of A...

CC: It was a Miss Wisconsin pageant, and the winner and the first runner-up were allowed to go, and I was the first runner-up. In 1991, I was in the Miss US of A Nationals [in Atlanta], and I won Outstanding Talent Award in my particular group. That whole week, I think there were eight or nine contestants. There were two standing ovations given for Talent—Sable Channel, who won, and myself.

JL: According to one of my sources, you helped a lot of other people start performing locally. You were able to help get them out and on stage, basically.

CC: I worked with lots of different people for different reasons. Sometimes it was a group involvement thing with, say, three or four people, and I would choreograph something and teach it. Maybe somebody was interested in doing drag, and they asked me if I could help them out. I would teach them what I knew.

I think that's really important—to not 'hog' the knowledge that you've attained, but to share it. Especially when people are just starting out. They have no idea where to start and where to go. I can remember being at that stage thinking, "Oh, God! What am I doing wrong?" I like to try to help other people who are starting out and teach them what I know. And not necessarily force it on them and say, "This is the way it has to be," but give them the information and then let them pick and choose what they want, if anything.

JL: Sort of like, "When I did it, these are the mistakes I made, and my answer was this." It still allows them to do what they want to do, because sometimes what's really difficult for one person is easy for another.

CC: That's true, that's very true.

JL: Back in November of 1994, you granted Quest an interview right before you performed at ZA's. In that article, you said you were 'touring nationally' and '...performing four nights a week...' What did you come away with from that experience? What's is like being on tour?

CC: Very good memories. I've been very lucky. The show has been very successful. I've had a few sour gigs, and I'll tell you—the show basically is the same from night to night, so I know that the show is basically good. So when I see the show dying in from of an audience, I try to take into account different aspects that can affect it, and I'll tell you what they are: Poor Lighting, Poor Sound Equipment—where they can't understand what's being said or you sound muffled, and a persistent heckler in the audience. That can be funny, and I can work with that for a while, but when they continue, it totally throws off the timing of the show and can destroy it. I've seen it happen. There are factors that come into play that I have no control over.

But basically, the tour's have been very good. I've met a ton of wonderful people on the road. The experience has been good. Each time I did the show, I learn something new, and I get a little bit better at something else. Or, something happens during the show that I didn't expect, and it turned out to be funny. I'll remember that, and use it again. As the tour progresses, the show gets slicker. It's a constant process of tightening up the show and making it better and better.

JL: So, by the end of the season...

CC:...it's pretty damn good! (Laughs) But you still have those bad nights thrown in there. And there are nights when I think, "Oh, God, they didn't like it."

JL: And they're just like, "That's the greatest show I've ever seen!"

CC: Right! And it's killing me, because I'm thinking, "It could've been so much better!" I know how much better it can be—that's what's frustrating.

JL: It sounds like you don't perform in just gay clubs.

CC: It varies all the time. The majority are gay clubs, some lesbian clubs. More and more I've been getting into clubs that are 'alternative' type clubs that are a mixture of gay and straight people—they're very gay friendly. They're some of the best gigs—some of the most successful.

JL: Have you had the chance to meet anyone famous—anyone come back stage to tell you, "You're Fabulous!"?

CC: I've been asked to open for Rip Taylor. Two years ago when I was down in Texas, the producer of that show saw me and asked, "Would you like to open for Rip tomorrow night?" I said, "I'd love to, but I have been down in Dallas tomorrow." Dallas had a major advertising campaign for my show, and I just couldn't call them and say, "Sorry. Not Coming. Opening for Rip." [Opening for Rip] would be a nice thing to have on my resume, but I didn't want to back out of my commitment to the club and say no.

Another interesting thing along those lines: This month is the Midwest Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual College Conference held in Terre

The CC Rae Show has been running for five years. Now Randy Bouche has completely reworked the show adding new characters and an additional cast member. With the new show just starting to tour our area, Quest thought it time to once again sit down and chat with this powerhouse talent.

The CCRae Interview with Jess Littleman

I fumbled for a moment before I found the right key to open the door. "Come on in," I said to the slender man I was standing next to. He is Randy Bouche, otherwise known, among other things, as CCRae. We are getting settled to talk in Java's after hours, turning over the chairs at one of the tables. It's been over two years since I saw him perform as CC, Eunice P. Hole, Peewee Herman and others downstairs at Za's. He—or, maybe I should say "they"—are back with a vengeance and an all-new show. I turn up the lights; and it's show time...

Jess Littleman: It sounds like you grew up here.

CCRae: I actually grew up in a small town called Casco, WI. Population five hundred—very religious Catholic Community.

JL: As a kid growing up, did you have any idols: "I wanna be just like..."

CC: Farah Faucett!! (laughs) Actually, I loved all of Charlie's Angels. I saved all of the bubble gum cards until I could make the puzzle with all of their faces on the back. I thought that was the coolest thing!

I really wanted to be a dancer. That was my dream, and I just started too late in life with my training. I didn't get any until I was eighteen, and you need to get training when you're a kid. A dancer's life—their career—really lasts from eighteen 'till they're maybe thirty. Thirty's even pushing it.

I kinda put that dream on hold and just worked at the [Brown County] Mental Health Center for several years. I moved to Las Vegas for a couple of years with a lover at the time.

When I moved back here in 1987 Who's was having weekly lip sync contests. (Author's Note: Who's is a gay bar that preceded Za's....my, aren't we a young'un?) I got involved, and that's how this whole thing started.

JL: There's a big difference between lip syncing in a local competition and a performer who has his own stage how. How did you make the transition?

CC: It was in my blood. Once I started doing the lip sync thing, I got a taste of it and I couldn't stop. Like, I had numbers weeks ahead, ten numbers ready to go, so I just had to wait for each Thursday night to come up. I did my numbers and got more and more involved. The Pivot Club used to have lip sync contests, so I got involved there. I started working with a group of people locally. It was a group of eight people, and we did whole shows. We did straight gigs, church groups...

JL: Really?

CC: Church groups, we did the Green Bay Bar Association, Senior Citizen [Groups]...lots of different things like that. Then I became show director at the Pivot for a couple of years.

I went to Florida—I had a friend who lived in Orlando—and I went to several different clubs and started doing little gigs here and there. I was the "Special Guest" in other people's shows, or I'd come in and do, maybe, three numbers.

JL: Were you doing lip sync at this time or were you doing other things, too?

CC: It was all lip sync at the time. I started to piece together a couple of characters, where I could do one character on stage, and within thirty to forty-five seconds I could become another character, sometimes right on stage (snaps).

Then I thought, "Could I put together a whole show of this? Could I piece together sixty minutes of different characters without long, long periods of time off-stage?" I started to work on it on paper, and I thought, "Yes, I could do this!" That's how I pieced together the very first tour show and took it on the road.

JL: Where did the name CCRae come from?

CC: (Laughs) Everybody always asks that. They always expect some big great, grand story, and there isn't any! I started out as Cassandra Rae, and after a while I thought, "God, that's just too drag-

Unicorns of Madison, from Pledge Master John S's letter (personal notes deleted):

"Yesterday at the 1100 Club was super. The hot leathermen were attracted to the place in such numbers that the cruising was exhausting! I wish I could have stayed for more, but with only two week-ends off per month, I have to ration my time.

Please do tattle in your column about the Unicorn Pledges and their lesson in boot blacking, thanks to the expertise of Michael S. and the watchful eye of the steamy, hot Mr. G. They were all thrilled and I am very happy to see that we were returning to these original pledge requirements. Actually, our pledge process is now designed to be a sort of leather "finishing school," so the fine traditions and etiquette of our beloved community can be passed along and properly appreciated. The young ones don't often know what the rest of us did to get this far."

OK, John, didn't get a chance to see what got you so tired, was too busy myself. Nothing much to tell about the pledges, except maybe what they were doing while your back was turned, I'm not telling for fear they don't do it again. Live with it, buddy.

That Saturday, The Firebirds did a club night at the Boot Camp. Because of the activity at the 1100 Club, I didn't/couldn't make it, but hearsay said the place was also packed.

The Club Appreciation Buffet hosted by and at the 1100 Club was well attended. Members of most of the Wisconsin club were there as well as some from Minneapolis and Illinois.

It was a good weekend full of good people and reaffirmed the meaning of our brotherhood.

SWS Docks is having a Valentine's Day underwear party on Friday, the 14th. Neat prizes include dinner for two at La Trattoria and La Perla as well as bar tabs, etc. No thongs, pouches or jock straps -- underwear only, leather bikinis OK??

About THE letter - you will get no response from me; it's a one person pissing contest. To quote one of yours, "Get off the cross, honey, we want the wood." Thanks for the fun we had with it. P.S. See cartoon, pg. 6, In Step, Vol. 14, issue 3, subject police harassment.

"Can I see your printout...?"

by Sue Zip

Started working on my family's genealogy and was reminded of the LESBIAN CONNECTION PROJECT so many women have thought up but never realized. You know what I'm talking about. You're at the bar, someone walks in and you chat, then you turn to introduce her to someone you know and they begin to fight like cats (or bulldogs) because they are exes or one of them is with the other's last lover or one stole the other's girlfriend...you've been there. Wouldn't it be nice if there were some sorta chart or something, where you could trace who has been with whom? You'd get a web of interconnecting lines giving testimony to the interwoven nature of our community. It would also reveal what is so divisive. You're in a small pond, baby.

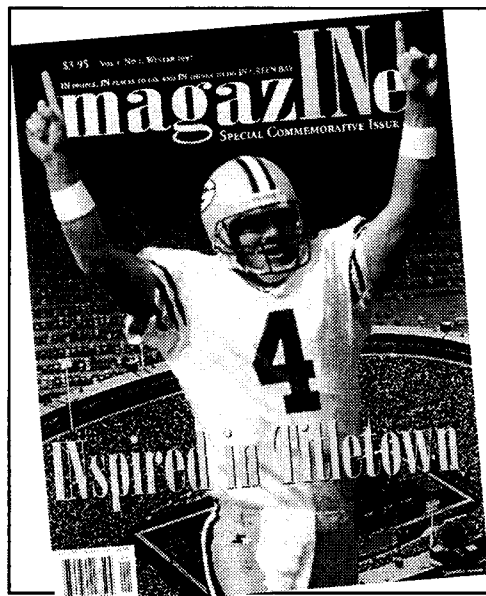

Everyone who has discussed this idea of a relationship record with me has thought it was a good idea. I think they see it from a viewpoint of personal protection. You could have your little handbooks, flip it open and see whom to avoid, who's available, keep tabs on your favorite heartthrobs. There would be monthly updates of course. Keeping tabs. Scars the shit outta me.

My imagination works overtime. With modern technology, this would lead to terminals in every establishment, a database of personal history with ID cards. Info would be available on a person's past relationships, reports filed from their ex-lovers, likes and dislikes, hobbies, all the mundane and horrific details. So theoretically, you could research your possible mates, see their picture, get a list printed of everyone with your interests and their availability. Then when someone on your list walks in, you can surprise them with their favorite drink. You could weed out your prospects and avoid any messy scenes. Or:

You approach someone, begin to introduce yourself, use your best line, whatever. She says, "Let me see your card." You hand her your ID card and she walks over to the MACHINE, sticks it in and begins to read your profile. Your hands sweat as you watch her. Did one of your exes update your file with a scathing bitch about your downfalls? Did someone snitch on you about that night in Madison? The woman walks back and hands you the card. "No thanks," she smirks, and walks away to giggle about you with her friends. Or throws the card in your face. And you consider scratching the magnetic strip on your card so it can't be read, as you've heard some women are starting to do.

And after awhile the machines would mysteriously stop working, or get unplugged, or inadvertently get jammed. And women would delightfully return to taking a chance, getting to know someone face to face, one on one, on their own terms. Rediscovering the thrill of uncertainty and the strength gained by trusting their own judgment.

BY DAVID BIANCO

February 2, 1972 (25 years ago this week):
Natalie Barney dies in Paris at age 95.

Who was Natalie Barney?

Often called "the leading lesbian of her time," Natalie Barney stands out in the history of the early 20th century as an unapologetic, visionary woman-loving woman whose influence extended far beyond the circle of lesbians who surrounded her.

Born into a family of railroad magnates in Ohio, Barney lived a life of luxury as a child, and soon found herself studying in Paris, as was the custom among many young women of her class. Paris and Barney were a perfect match, and she quickly acquired impeccable French, and came to love deeply the city where she was to spend the vast majority of her life. Paris was one of the few places in the world where lesbianism was not only legal but looked upon as exotic and fascinating - and Natalie Barney fit right in. When her parents died and left her more than four million dollars (in turn-of-the-century dollars), she had the wealth necessary to embark on her unusual career as an open lesbian intellectual in early 20th century Europe.

By age 12, Barney had experienced lesbian sex, and by age 22, she was involved in a passionate affair with the stunning Liane de Pougy, the most prominent courtesan of her time (a courtesan was a kind of high-class prostitute). But Barney was never one for monogamy, and while her lover was abroad she fell in love with another expatriate American in Paris, a poet named Renee Vivien. Barney and Vivien (an alcoholic anorexic who was fascinated with death) developed a certain intellectual symbiosis, and they began to explore in their conversations, letters, essays, and poetry the ideas of exactly what lesbianism was or should be.

Much of this exploration centered on Sappho, the Greek lesbian poet, who despite the clear erotic meaning of much of her writing about women, was generally interpreted by male Sappho scholars at the time (many of them gay) as a sexual predator or even as a non-lesbian. Determined to reclaim Sappho as a model of unabashed lesbian friendship and love, the pair traveled to the isle of Lesbos in 1904 and bought homes there, although the relationship soon ended and Barney retreated to Paris, determined to create a Sapphic society in her adopted home town.

In the early 20th century, the dominant scientific model of homosexuality either considered lesbians and gays to be sick, or classified them as members of a "third sex." Many homosexuals internalized these categories, which were reflected in their dress, mannerisms, and patterns of living. Barney, however, objected to the notion that lesbians should dress or act in any way like men, saying, "Why try to resemble our enemies?"

Indeed, in her sexual appetite she more resembled the stereotype of a gay man than that of a lesbian. She was rarely able to maintain a monogamous relationship with any of her lovers, often living with more than one in her famous home at 20 Rue Jacob. She was known to enjoy sex in all its combinations - outdoors, semi-publicly, and on occasion with more than one woman. Her unabashed approach to sexuality, combined with her bewitching good looks and her long flowing white gowns earned her the nickname "the Amazon."

Barney completely rejected the notion that as a lesbian she was some kind of sick creature deserving of punishment. She wrote, "albinos aren't reproached for having pink eyes and whitish hair, why should they hold it against me for being a lesbian? It's a question of nature: my queerness isn't a vice, isn't 'deliberate,' and harms no one. What do I care, after all, if they vilify or judge me according to their prejudices?"

But Barney was perhaps most famous for her salon, held every Friday in her home for more than sixty years. French and American artists, poets, philosophers, and other intellectuals (male and female) gathered in her home to listen to poetry, eat cucumber sandwiches, and discuss the issues of the day. At various times, Ezra Pound, Ernest Hemingway, Gertrude Stein, Djuna Barnes, F. Scott Fitzgerald, and James Joyce could be found sipping tea and conversing in Barney's salon.

Barney continued her many affairs - including one with Oscar Wilde's niece Dolly - but entered her most important long-term relationship, with the American painter Romaine Brooks, in 1915. Barney and Brooks remained lovers for more than 55 years, although in 1968, the pair of octogenarians separated because Brooks could no longer tolerate Barney's repeated indiscretions, especially an affair with a younger (69-year-old) woman.

Natalie Barney was not, however, known for her literary ability. Her poetry, both in her day and in ours, was considered mediocre, and much of her writing remains unpublished. But Barney never seemed to care - she once quoted Oscar Wilde, saying "I've put my genius into my life; I've put only my talent into my works."

Center Project Looks to Maintain, Improve Local Services

"Center Project's primary focus continues to be on maintaining quality services, as well as examining ways to improve on how we may further meet the needs of persons infected and affected by HIV and AIDS throughout northeast Wisconsin," according to Harry Spiegelberg, President of Center Project's Board of Directors.

"It's a fact of life that not-for-profit HIV/AIDS service organizations throughout the U.S., as well as in Wisconsin, are examining potential collaborations and mergers as a way to more effectively utilize limited funding and other resources," says Stan Kocos, Executive Director of CPI. Kocos cites as an example the recent announcement that St. Camillus Institute, Inc., a Milwaukee-based AIDS service provider and Covenant Health Care System, Inc. are planning to collaborate on health care services.

"Local and statewide collaborations are not new for us," Kocos adds, noting that the CPI region has benefited from strong local inter-agency and community-based relationships in the past and will continue to in the future. He also notes the financial and program benefits of statewide collaborations with agencies such as the AIDS Resource Center of Wisconsin, which produces AIDS Walk Wisconsin, bringing thousands of dollars to CPI annually. CPI and ARCW are currently partners in a Popular Opinion Leader Project, intended to facilitate peer prevention education within various gay communities that the agencies both serve, as well as throughout the state. The State of Wisconsin recently announced that the AIDS/HIV Program of the Division of Health will be accepting funding proposals this June, for contracting the delivery of HIV/AIDS services within the five public health regions commencing in 1998. "What this effectively means," says Spiegelberg, "is that the region now serviced by CPI will at least double in size."

According to Kocos, the geographic area now served by CPI and East Central HIV/AIDS Organization (ECHO) will be merged by the state into one region. "We have had discussions with ECHO and another not-for-profit agency in that area, regarding how we might work together to insure a continuum in the quality of care for clients."

CPI will bid for these regional funds, previously awarded directly to the agency, with the knowledge that other managed care providers may choose to compete for this funding. "We welcome the opportunity to stand on our merits, either on our own or via some as yet undetermined collaboration," notes Kocos, stating that he believes that competition can be good, because it can affirm who has been doing a good job. In addition, states

Spiegelberg, "as a governing body, we have a responsibility to examine and explore partnerships or possible mergers with other AIDS service providers or even managed care providers when it is in the best interest of the clients we serve."

"We have had many interesting discussions in recent months," says Kocos, "with several other entities that have the same priority, of doing what is best for those we serve." These interests translate into maintaining services that meet the particular regional needs of the community, by insuring local involvement and input. "As we continue to examine all of our options, these priorities will determine whatever course of action we ultimately pursue," says Spiegelberg.

Oshkosh - Casting for 'Quilt'

Oshkosh Community Players (OCP) will hold auditions for "Quilt, a Musical Celebration" on March 3 & 4, 6:30 pm, at St. John's School, 12th & Michigan, in Oshkosh.

Roles are available for characters from 12 to 70, and many of these are non-singing roles. Auditioning actors should bring a prepared song and a monologue. An accompanist will be on hand to play. Actors will be asked to do a cold reading from the script of the musical.

Director Dan Berns emphasizes the musical is a celebration of diversity and he is actively seeking persons of diversity. OCP encourages all persons of color to audition and does not allow discrimination in its casting policies.

"Quilt, a Musical Celebration" was written in 1994 and has played in all the major cities of the U.S., and last summer in Milwaukee. It is a moving play about Love, Loss, Life and coping with Death in the last two decades of this century. Due to frank language and contemporary themes, the play would correspond to a PG-13 movie rating.

'Quilt' is being promoted in association with East Central Wellness Project, Inc. whose leaders are coordinating the creation of the quilt panels for the show.

The production will run Fri. & Sat., May 16 & 17, 8 pm, and Sun., May 18, 2 pm, at the Grand Opera House in Oshkosh.

FMI - questions regarding the show, call (414) 426-0131; tickets (414) 424-2350 or TicketMaster, and will be available at the door.

SAGE/Milwaukee Has a New Home!

St. Camillus Spring Education Series Begins

Milwaukee---St. Camillus HIV/AIDS Ministry is beginning their 1997 Spring Education Series with a new look. The series will offer monthly discussions on specific topics related to the Changes in HIV/AIDS Care as HIV Disease evolves from a terminal to a chronic illness. The topics will include spiritual care, physical care and psycho-social issues.

The first session on Wed., Feb. 19, will address spiritual care and will feature Rev. Jesus Rodriguez, D. Min.

On March 19, a panel of persons will address the changes in the treatment of persons with HIV, including medical management, pharmacological issues, nursing care and adjunctive therapies.

On April 16, a panel of speakers will address psycho-social issues of persons infected and affected by HIV, including adolescents and persons with additions.

All sessions are free and open to the public. Each will be held on the St. Camillus Campus in the San Camillo Building, 10200 W. Blue Mound Rd. (across from the Milwaukee County Zoo) 7-9 p.m. in the O'Donnell Room.

Entertainers Invited to Send in Demos for PrideFest '97

Milwaukee---Wisconsin's PrideFest is interested in previewing the up-and-coming acts that can be found throughout the Midwest. Entertainers are invited to submit demo tapes, both audio and video, for consideration for this year's festival. Acts can include song, dance and comedy.

Entertainment Coordinator Jill Clark commented, "We welcome music from all venues, including high energy, hip-hop, salsa, blues, jazz, folk, classical, bluegrass, cajun and rock. And, since this is Milwaukee, we would even consider throwing in some good old fashioned polka. If the group thinks it has a good sound, they should send in a demo."

Entertainers selected will be invited to perform at this year's festival to be held June 6, 7 and 8 at Festival Park (Summerfest grounds). Over 12,000 people are anticipated to attend this year's event.

FMI (demo tapes) to: PrideFest Entertainment, PO Box 93852, Milwaukee, WI 53203, or Jill Clark (414) 954-9214.
