May 14, 1923 (75 years ago this week): Willa Cather wins the Pulitzer Prize for her novel, One of Ours.

Who was Willa Cather?

Many Americans know her as the author of big, sweeping novels of the Midwestern prairies, a major figure in 20th-century literature, and winner of the Pulitzer Prize. Many have read My Antonia and O Pioneers! in school. Unfortunately, most people studying Willa Cather (1873-1947) never learn was that she was a lesbian.

In her ground-breaking biography of Cather, Sharon O'Brien brought to light for the first time the influence that Cather's gender expression and sexuality had on her life and writing. Born in Virginia and raised on the Nebraska plains, Cather early on rejected Victorian femininity and adopted a male persona. As a 14-year-old tomboy, she recreated herself as "William Cather, Jr.," cropping her hair to a crewcut and wearing male clothing. Her unorthodox appearance and low voice made her the talk of Red Cloud, Nebraska, where years later townspeople incorrectly remembered her as a hermaphrodite. Cather cross-dressed for four years, even entering the University of Nebraska as William. But, perhaps because of ostracism from her peers, she soon abandoned male clothing and at the same time began to find her identity as a writer.

Years later, though, William Cather, Jr. provided the inspiration for the character Paul in Cather's short story, "Paul's Case," written in 1905 while she was living in Pittsburgh and working as the editor of a women's magazine. Like her old William persona, Paul is a sensitive, imaginative boy who doesn't fit into the bourgeois society around him. Cather describes him as "theatrical," in a way "peculiarly offensive in boys." Paul whistles tunes from operas and dresses like Oscar Wilde, in a jacket with a velvet collar and a red carnation in the lapel. A rebel, he runs away to New York City, where he spends a day and night in unnamed activities with "a wild San Francisco boy." Though it seems obvious to gay audiences, most readers missed the subtle homosexual subtext of Cather's story.

By the time she wrote "Paul's Case," Cather was very much in tune with her lesbian desires. Cather had had a crush on a woman in college, but it was Pittsburgh socialite Isabelle McClung who was her first and lifelong love. They met in 1899, and McClung soon invited Cather to live with her in her family's mansion. The two young women shared a bedroom in a far corner of the house, where they quickly retreated together after dinner every evening.

In 1906, Cather made a career move to McClure's magazine in New York City, and within a few years she became managing editor. Though she soon met and began living with Edith Lewis, the woman with whom she shared the next 40 years of her life, Cather still returned frequently to Pittsburgh and took all of her vacations with McClung. On one long trip with McClung in 1911, Cather began writing her first novel, Alexander's Bridge. She continued to find inspiration with McClung, writing major portions of O Pioneers! (1913) and The Song of the Lark (1915) while staying with McClung in Pittsburgh. These early works are family dramas set in the Midwest and filled with strong, independent women characters.

When McClung unexpectedly married in 1916, Cather's heart was broken, and she described the loss to friends as overwhelming. She even stopped writing fiction for a while, saying she was indifferent to it. Eventually, Cather returned to writing full-time, leaving her job at McClure's at the urging of her friend and fellow writer, Sarah Orne Jewett. She continued to use McClung as the model for her strong female characters. It seems Cather's jealousy of McClung's husband, who was Jewish, made its way into some of Cather's short stories in the form of anti-Semitic portrayals of Jewish men.

And what about Edith Lewis? Lewis was apparently content to play Alice B. Toklas to Cather's Gertrude Stein. She was younger than Cather and in awe of her talent, and Cather seemed to thrive on her devotion. Lewis also worked in publishing, and the couple had very similar tastes and interests. Together they created a warm and nurturing home in Greenwich Village, where for several years they hosted a literary salon. What Lewis thought of Cather's relationship with McClung is unknown, though after McClung's marriage, the bonds between Cather and Lewis grew stronger.

There is no way to know for sure if Cather's intimate relationships with women were sexual. Possibly fearing that exposure as a lesbian would jeopardize her career, Cather fiercely protected her privacy, destroying most of her personal letters and requesting that her friends do the same. She even stipulated in her will that her surviving letters could never be published or quoted from - a loss to lesbian and gay scholars.

Cather found both critical and financial success with a string of important realist novels set in the Midwest and Southwest: A Lost Lady, The Professor's House, Death Comes for the Archbishop, to name a few. In 1923, she received the prestigious Pulitzer Prize for her World War I epic, One of Ours, beating out Sinclair Lewis's Babbitt. After "Paul's Case," though, Cather's fiction never again approached the topic of homosexuality. Still, she couldn't keep a queer sensibility out of her work. The disaffected individuals of her short stories, the independent women of her early novels, and the later male narrators who stand in for her own lesbian desire all suggest connections between Cather's life and her art.

Psychic Thoughts by Susan Reed

Broken Hearts

During the course of my career, I have dealt with many broken hearts and thought I would share with you a way to fix those broken hearts.

When someone breaks your heart, you can't go out and buy a new one. And you certainly can't trade it in for a more durable model. So, there's only one thing to do, and that's get it fixed as soon as possible. But that's easier said than done. A broken heart is one of the most gut wrenching experiences a person can have. We have all been there and walked the walk. When this occurs, we find ourselves in a state of doubt, denial, anxiety and loneliness. The most devastating part of this is that during our life time, it will happen more than once. So what are we suppose to do when someone we love or care for breaks our hearts? Often we will ask ourselves, "Will be overcome the pain? Will we be able to survive the hurt?" Of course we can, and we have in the past. However, I have developed a method to mend those broken hearts a little faster. Here are the eight ways to mend a broken heart.

1. Take control of situations around you. Realize that the relationship is over, finished, DONE! The worst thing to do is sit around thinking a miracle is going to happen. This is the time to assess the situation and see it as an opportunity to start over. A fresh new beginning. Yes, what you had may have been wonderful, but now is the time to move on. Dwelling on the past will hurt you more. This is also the time to make it clear to yourself that "it wasn't you." Once you start assessing the faults and shortcomings of the person who broke your heart, you will start to feel better about the entire situation and be able to put it behind you.

2. Take account of your strengths. You are only human. Meaning, you have strengths and weaknesses. Now is the time to look at both. Once you are able to pinpoint the strong points about yourself, you will want to improve them even more.

You will find that your strengths are in areas where you will make an impression. After John was dumped by Larry, he was able to realize that he had a lot of love and compassion for other human beings. Through a friend, he was able to get involved with other things on weekend. He did some volunteer work which allowed him to gain confidence and his self-confidence level soared.

3. After you have identified your strengths, now is the time to examine the things that you like about yourself. A close friend may even be of help for this exercise. Things like your hair, manners, sense of humor or that you are usually punctual are the things that set you apart from everyone else. Keep in mind that you are a very unique person, because once you were created the mold was thrown away.

This will help you understand you are unique and worthy of happiness.

4. Fix up your surroundings. Since this is an opportunity to start fresh, don't stop just with the mental or emotional. Get into the material parts of your life. Anything left over from the relationship like a TV set, clothing, furniture or other items should be disposed of. Buy some new clothes. Fix up a room. Rearrange the house. Get rid of all the old reminders, and ready for a new beginning.

5. Talk, talk, talk!! They say talk is cheap, but in this case it's worth its weight in gold. Get in touch with your friends, old and new, and talk. If they are your friends they will listen. This will give you a chance to vent your feelings and frustrations. Think of it as a cleansing process. If you keep things inside, you will eventually burst. So let it out—let it ALL out!

6. Become more sociable. After a breakup or slow death of a relationship, the best thing to do, as hard as it may sound, is to get back out there. Try small get-togethers with close, dear friends or relatives. Maybe a movie, dinner, or just a plain gab session. But what ever you do, don't go to the old haunts and hang out waiting for something to happen. Try some new places. Join new organizations. Or, if you feel adventurous, put an ad in a reputable publication like the Quest. You never know until you try.

7. Visit the library. That's right—the library. You know—where the books are. There are books about self-help, magazine articles about self-esteem and about starting new relationships. By reading, you will see that your situation is not that much different from a lot of other peoples'. Gary discovered that through his reading he was able to identify with a lot of the respondents in various studies. This gave him something to hold on to. And the confidence to go on.

8. Give yourself some goals. Since this is a new beginning and a chance for a fresh start, now is the time to ask yourself some hard questions. Like, "What do you want to accomplish in the next five years?" Or, "Is it time to take up a new hobby, sports, or just travel?" Steve took a course in woodworking and now he's transforming his basement into a beautiful clubroom.

Although any one, or all, of these particular pieces of advice will help, the truth is that getting over a broken heart is an ongoing process. Yes, it is a learning experience. But it is also a growing experience. Some people learn more than others. Some grow more than others. To best understand what went wrong and how to start things going right will take a superhuman effort. This something that is difficult to do alone, so turn to those closest to you for understanding and compassion, after all, you have been there for them in the past.

Many of my clients have had a difficult time forgiving the person who has hurt them. This only prolonged the process, because healing begins with forgiving. Don't make someone else pay for what someone else has done to you. They don't have it coming and you wouldn't want the same to come to you. Have a great two weeks.

Mr. Gay Wisconsin-USofA 1998

Pictured is the winner, David with first alternate, Dan E. Dance. Quest has been plagued by recent cases of camera failure. Unfortunately, most of our photos were unusable. (Guess we should have hired (In Step's) Jamie, huh?)

A Few other problems cropped up as well, such as

Christian's luggage and music getting lost by the airline, but the event still came off with the fun and panache we have come to expect from Wisconsin pageants.

Za's, the main sponsor for Mr. Gay Wisconsin-USA was host once again to the pageant which had a packed house.

A special apology goes out to the owners of OZ in Wausau who were attending the pageant. The MC's failed to mention them when introducing other bar owners also in the house. We'll just have to slap Greg a few more times!

(Please sir, may I have another!)

ning in early June, and will meet at The United.

The United's coming out support groups are peer-based groups led by trained facilitators. A full ten-week commitment is asked of all participants. FMI (608) 255-8582.

The United is also looking for volunteers for all of its services and activities. FMI, same number as above, ask for Callen. 'Occasional' volunteers should ask for Joe.

Lesbian Comic Kate Clinton Comes to Milwaukee

Forget Ellen, Kate Clinton is America's premiere "flimerist" - her own term which combines feminist with humorist and her comic agenda features political material as fresh as the daily news, savvy send-ups of modern family relationships and illuminating perspectives on life as a Gay American.

On May 27, Kate Clinton will return to Milwaukee, not just as a brilliant stand-up comic, but as a talented writer to boot! Afterwords Bookstore is throwing a publication party for Ms. Clinton to celebrate the release of her first book, Don't Get Me Started (Ballantine HC $22).

Fans of Kate Clinton will be pleased to learn that Don't Get Me Started is based upon her hilarious past and present monologues, often riotous, but always filled with wit and insight. Now I've written a book. It's not as easy as it looks. One night, I was working on my computer when a little message came up on the screen,

"You are almost out of memory." --from Don't Get Me Started

When not taking her wonderful one-woman show across the country, Kate Clinton writes a monthly column for The Progressive, in which she waxes both comical and philosophical about the state of the nation -- and her favorite bother", Bill Clinton. She has recently started writing a quarterly column for the popular lesbianig newsmagazine, The Advocate. Also, Kate worked as a writer on The Rosie O'Donnell Show during its roll-out period in 1996.

In 1993, Kate's one-woman show "Out Is In" debuted in Los Angeles to rave reviews and then moved to New York where it enjoyed a 3-month, held-over run off-Broadway. Throughout 1996, Kate's one-woman show, "All Het Up", toured cities across the country.

Among Kate Clinton's other career highlights are a variety of television appearances including Good Morning America, Nightline, CNN, C-Span, Entertainment Tonight. Kate has also hosted In The Life and The World According to Us.

In addition to Don't Get Me Started, Kate has four comedy albums to her credit, including the perennial favorites Live at Great American Music Hall and Babes in Joyland.

Kate Clinton's sole Milwaukee appearance will be at Afterwords Bookstore & Espresso Bar on Wednesday, May 27, at 7:00pm. For further information, please contact Afterwords at (414) 963-9089.

by accident ten yersa ago," according to Bofil, "when I sought a way to promote my theatre comedy by creating collages of my stage characters." From there to doing composites of vacation pictures to a collage of his family who had shunned him, finding this a way of feeling closer to them, he has perfected his talent to the current works.

Visual art in another form covers two walls of the second floor North Meeting Room at BESTD. The hand painted walls are the work and gift of Sheila Alex of Milwaukee. The walls are swirls of earth tones and gold, and accent the neutral decor of the room.

Green Bay/Argonauts The Argonauts want to thank the Green Bay area community for their support of our Easter fundraiser. The effort raised over $1,900, proceeds going to The Argonauts Charities, Inc. The owners and bartenders at both bars have really gone all out in their support for our benefits. Much thanks goes to our members Thom and John, who, because of our work schedules, ended up doing most of the work.

We've been busy with The Castaways MC, planning for our second joint run for August 14 to 16. Last year's run ended up being one of the best in the country and was attended by close to 100 leather and levi brothers from all around the country. This year's promises to be better!

Applications will be in the mail and available at most bars in the Milwaukee and Fox Valley.

The Friday night show will again be hosted by the C.M.C., and the Mr. Northwoods Contest will be by The A.O.W. on Saturday.

Milwaukee friends report seeing Ma Barker shopping at thrift stores for just the right touches to add to her wardrobe.

Thanks Russ, thanks for sharing that - Value Village had a sale and Ma was seen elbowing her way to the front of the line in her sensible pumps (on her elbows, of course).

The 9th annual Mr. Wisconsin Daddy/Daddy's Boy contest on Saturday, June 6, 1998. Hosted by the A.O.W. and the C.M.C., the evening will start off at 5:30 with a cocktail party and spaghetti dinner at The South Water Street Docks. From there the activities will move to the Milwaukee Eagle. Starting at 9:30, the contest for both the Daddy and Boy will be held. The Firebirds and Oberons will be sponsoring after bar activities. Tickets for all events will be available that evening from hosting club members.

The Charity auction will be at the 1100 Club Sunday.

Steve/Oberons

Over the years, I have had the good fortune to meet a lot of really neat people. The most interesting are those who can expose me to new ideas, thinking or impart something that makes me a better person for having met them.

Not long ago, I happened on a Harley riding married couple (Man and Woman type), who are bi. The conversation that evening caused me to remember the feeling of being a minority. To remembered the "sub culture" comments about my proclivities, to be an oddity when I wore a leather jacket to a drag bar, walked in a lesbian bar with my lesbian sister and her lover. Oh yes, this goes back a few years, but we know it still happens. I still hear edged remarks and maybe even say things that can be taken as a "put down".

Little did I realize how good I had it compared to them and asked them to share their feelings and thoughts with us. It's eye-opening and a reminder to all of us of how it still is for some of us.

This caused me to think.

Guest Editorial

Far be it for me to tell the Gay and Lesbian community that prejudice and discrimination still exists. What does amaze me is that often times those that have been victims of such idiotic behavior are themselves perpetrators when an opportunity presents itself. As a married white male, nice house in the burbs, successful business, great kids and a good wife of nearly 20 years (we are both "bi"), never did I expect to experience this feeling of being in the minority.

My wife and I are both out in the gay/lesbian community. We've been to most, if not all, the "alternative life style" clubs in Milwaukee. When we're at clubs we will be asked "when are you really going to come to grips with your sexuality" or "stop sitting on the fence". When you think about social minority, where do we fit in? We cannot be expressive in the straight social environment, many, not all gay bars or their patrons appreciate me showing up in the company of my wife for an evening out and the lesbian bars appear worse as they often feel we are there to pick up their women to fulfil "every man's fantasy" or that I'm there with the intent of changing them if only I could get them in the sack for a couple of hours. Being married, open and out, only compounds the "misunderstanding". Combining the three for some unknown reason is confusing to all and not accepted by most cultures. Are we alone in this situation? I don't believe so. Look at the number of personal ads under alternative life style for bi male, bi female, married bi couples, etc. Our expe-

BESTD Clinic Honors Dr. Gremminger & Warzyn

Recognizing a combined 35 years of volunteer service, BESTD Clinic recently thanked Roger Gremminger, MD, and Jerry Warzyn at a special dinner given in their honor.

Dr. Gremminger came to BESTD Clinic in 1978 as a medical resident and has been continuously involved as physician/clinician, medical director and board member. In 1983, Dr. Gremminger was appointed Medical Director of the Herpes Clinic at St. Anthony Hospital, the precursor of STD Specialties Clinic, where he continues to serve as Board Chair and Medical Director. He was instrumental in working with a small group of BESTD volunteers in initiating the first response to HIV/AIDS as part of the Milwaukee AIDS Project Committee, which was transferred to ARCW in 1986. He also gifted his equity in the building at 1240 E. Brady St. to BESTD, which has owned it since 1990.

Jerry Warzyn came to BESTD as a volunteer in 1983 and has served in a variety of capacities including manager of the STD Clinic and Board Secretary. An attorney, Warzyn has offered his help informally in legal and real estate matters affecting the Clinic.

Dr. Gremminger and Warzyn were each given watches commemorating their years of service to BESTD Clinic, an all volunteer health care provider serving Milwaukee since 12974.

Ann & Nancy's 2nd Anniversary at Napalese Lounge!

WOW! 2 Years already.

Celebrating Saturday & Sunday, June 6 & 7

Further Details in Next Issue

Due to Broadway Redevelopment forcing us to move, this will be our last anniversary at this address - however, Napalese Lounge will continue at a new, (unknown at this time), address. It's been around too long to be gone, and besides, we (Nancy & Ann) would not let that happen!

riences in these areas have one glaring difference. Most ask "be discreet", in other words I want to do this but we can't let anybody find out. Do you remember how liberated you felt when you came "out of the closet". We felt the same liberation. The gays had other gays for support. The lesbian had other lesbians for support. Do we have other bi couples for support? Not that I recall. This publication list Clubs & Restaurants, the type of clientele, and what they offer. Not one list "bi couples". Club owners, you might be missing the boat.

In closing, our sexuality as well as yours was God given. Just like you we didn't choose to be "this way". Fortunately for us we had the openness with each other to be able to discuss this and support each other. I never questioned my ability to enjoy both sexes.

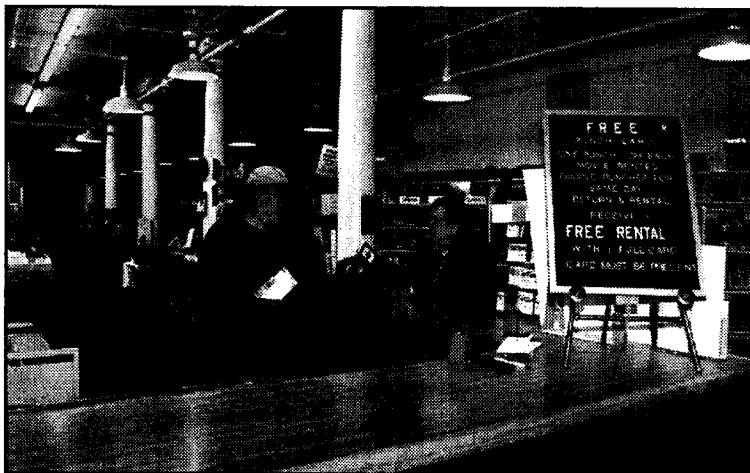

If there is anyone out there (kid or adult) reading this and is confused or feeling pressure to "make a choice", I'm here to tell you, you don't have to choose. Just like it's OK to be gay or straight, it is OK to be bi. You don't have to choose to be happy, we didn't.

Thank you, W and D - -

Paradise Video - The Oldest Video Store in Milwaukee

Paradise Video and Popular News are both "Gay Friendly" businesses that are supportive of the community and advertise in the gay press.

Years ago, when the VCR was a new must-have item an idea was born that would later change the face of the home video revolution forever. In fact, it would ultimately decide the fate of the Beta tape format and make VHS the home standard. I am talking about tape rental outlets. The idea was simple; since pre-recorded video tapes of movies were expensive to own, a rental store would purchase a few copies of many titles and make them available to rent.

Without a doubt, the more than 20-year-old Paradise Video Store, at 229 North Water Street, in downtown Milwaukee, is the city's oldest, and is one of the oldest in all of Wisconsin. It stands out from, and survives, the chain wars when Blockbuster and other chains forced most of the smaller one or two store operations out of business. There are very specific reasons why Paradise is still a strong player in today's market.

Jim Marquardt, a key team member at Paradise Video and a movie buff extraordinaire beams with pride as he relates some facts about Paradise Video:

• A huge selection of classic videos, perhaps the most extensive in Wisconsin!

• A foreign film section without match!

• A family video selection to satisfy folks of all ages!

• Musical comedies, drama, adventure, and alternative lifestyle videos that "just won't quit!"

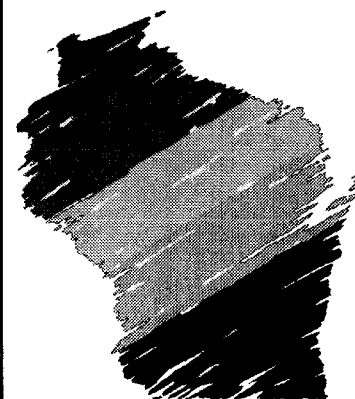

"Of course," Jim notes, "we get a brand new selection of videos in every week, and we get them out on the display for everyone to enjoy virtually instantly!"

Paradise Video turned the corner on the way videos were distributed when it first began in the late 70s. "Before that time, we had to rent videos from gas stations!" Some may remember many early chains also had expensive membership fees.

Paradise Video is open every day of the year and doesn't close until midnight. The store is located just two blocks south of the ever-popular Brett Favre's Steakhouse.

"If you want to just chat about movies in general or have a special title you want to see (we probably have it), come visit me," Jim beams, "and if you have some old flicks you're tired of, there's a good chance we will buy them from you!"
