Logic Records sent us these two new CD's pictured above and below. Catch The Light, is the newest single released by Martha Wash. This is classic Martha at it's best, but right in style with the lastest sounds on the dancefloor. There are several hot mixes to choose from. The song can also be purchased on her new album, The Collection, coming to your favorite store in July. Also on that album are other favorites such as It's Raining Men - The Sequel done with RuPaul, and earlier stuff like Strike It Up and Sweat.

Logic Pride Vol. 1 is the second CD sent for review. The Pride name obviously plays on the fact that it is currently Pride month around the country; and there is no mistake who they are marketing this CD to, now is there! Here is another of those compilation CD's that can't go wrong. Vocalists include Sandy B. Byron Stingily. La Bouche, Hanna Jones and Martha Wash. You'll find a bunch of hot hits you've been grooving to on the dance floor or a the circuit parties around the nation but now they are all together on one CD. What I especially like about collections like these is the chance to pick up some of the hard to find hits that unless you are a pro DJ are not always available to you. Enjoy in the car on the way to a pride picnic this summer!

The BLUE LITE

1029 N. 8th St. Sheboygan 920-457-1636

June 23, 1886 (112 years ago this week): We'wha, a Zuni "berdache," calls on President Grover Cleveland in Washington.

Who were the "berdaches"?

Beginning in the early 16th century, the Spanish and French explorers who arrived in North America in search of land and wealth came into contact with many Native American societies that had existed for thousands of years. Among those whom the explorers encountered were transgendered "men-women" they called "berdaches," a French term meaning "kept boys" or male prostitutes.

Approximately 130 Native American tribes included some form of berdache, and each tribal language had a specific word for biological men who cross-dressed, lived as women, and often partnered with men. The Sioux, for example, called such individuals wintkes, while the Chippewa knew them as agokwas. Among the Zunis, the term used was lhamanas. Most berdaches were found among tribes living west of the Mississippi River, though they were also present among Northeastern and Southern tribes

Epitomizing the European view of berdaches, one Spanish explorer described them as "impotent, effeminate men ... [who] go about dressed as women, and do women's tasks." But within Native cultures, berdaches played a much more important role, often performing sacred, shamanic functions and occupying places of honor within the various tribes. Among the Navaho, for example, berdaches had special ceremonial duties, such as preparing the food for sacred gatherings. The Sioux wintkes chose sacred names for the tribe's male children. "If a wintke [was] in a family," one Sioux told ethnographer Walter Williams, "that family would feel fortunate." Some tribes revered the berdaches as healers, while others sought their advice as matchmakers. Berdaches might also be story-tellers, the keepers of tribal lore.

Individuals tended to become berdaches, instead of being born into the role. They were not necessarily slight or "feminine" in appearance, but were often strong and powerfully built, capable of assuming the most rigorous of women's chores. Usually, boys of about 10 were allowed to choose berdache status if they found themselves inclined toward women's tasks, like weaving and cooking. Their childhood choice, it seems, was made for life. "On reaching puberty, their decision is final," wrote anthropologist Mathilda Coxe Stevenson in her 1896 study of the Zunis.

Tribal members referred to berdaches as "she," which led many of the white Americans who met them to believe they were either biological women or hermaphrodites. Stevenson hosted the visit of We'wha, a Zuni Ihamana, to Washington during a six-month period in 1886, and We'wha was universally treated as a woman. One reporter, however, cast some doubt on the Zuni's gender. We'wha, the Evening Star said, was no Pocahontas or Minnehaha, but an individual whose "features, ... especially her mouth, are rather large; her figure and carriage rather masculine." Despite the disappointment some felt that the Ihamana wasn't a dainty Indian princess, We'wha was the hit of the capital. The Zuni man-woman gave demonstrations of tribal weaving at the Smithsonian and charmed both President Grover Cleveland and

Speaker of the House John G. Carlisle when introduced to them.

But were the berdaches gay? At least in sexual behavior, they seemed to be. Early European explorers wrote with horror of the "lewdness and unnatural acts" of the berdaches. As Mathilda Coxe Stevenson somewhat cryptically wrote, "There is a side to the lives of these men which must remain untold." She further noted that "they never marry women, and it is understood that they seldom have any relations with them." In fact, berdaches were almost always the sexual partners of non-berdache men. In this way, they seem like the forerunners of the "fairies" of early 20th-century American cultures, who coupled with traditionally masculine, "non-fairy" men.

In about 30 tribes, there were also female berdaches, who dressed as men and acted as hunters and warriors. They, too, exhibited same-gender sexual behavior and were expected as adults to pair off with other women. The female berdache most often written about was Qanqon, a member of the Kutenai tribe, who lived in the very early 1800s. Accompanied by her wife, Qanqon worked as a guide and interpreter in the Pacific Northwest until falling victim to a Blackfoot attack in 1837. In the mid-19th century, Sahaykwisa, another female berdache (hwame) from the Mohave tribe, likewise had several female partners, whom she supported by hunting, farming, and occasionally prostituting herself to white men. Mohave legend has it that after being brutally raped by one woman's jealous husband, Sahaykwisa stopped courting women.

Just as Europeans brought disease and alcoholism to Native American tribes, they also disseminated their negative ideas about the berdaches. In the late 1800s, sequestered on reservations and influenced by Christian missionaries, many Native Americans began to view the berdaches as deviants and no longer as sacred people. By the mid-20th century, there were almost no berdaches left among Native tribes, and homosexuality was considered a white European phenomenon. In the 1970s and 1980s, though, the gay Indian movement sought to restore the berdaches (now commonly called "two-spirits") to their former place of distinction in Native American cultures.

Pilsner continues. "We need to show the City of Marshfield and the State of Wisconsin that we don't take hatred, we fight hatred, and put the criminals where they belong, behind bars."

According to Pilsner's statement, the district attorney has decided to not use the hate crime law "unless the defendant's tension was a hate crime itself coming from his own mouth."

Quest Editorial Comment:

Wisconsin's hate crime law has not met with much success around the state since its passage several years ago. It appears to us the law needs to be reviewed very carefully and written so that its enforcement is less difficult

As the fall elections unfold, we have an obligation to speak with candidates about this matter, and to try to get commitments that the law is in need of review so enforcement is not so unrealistic, and that they, if elected, will do something about it! Perhaps we should throw the ball to Governor Thompson and Attorney General Doyle now! Both men are up for re-election.

If Pilsner's report is accurate, it should not be necessary for a defendant to virtually admit his crime (yes, he has a right to remain silent under our Constitution) before the prosecutor can charge one with a hate crime; the word of victims and witnesses should suffice to meet a burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt for a jury to consider.

There is another angle which needs close attention. While there is certainly apparent legitimacy to the concern of the gay and lesbian community in central Wisconsin, we must be careful to not create such a stir that the defendant can not get a fair trial, another Constitutional right we all enjoy.

Attorney Krimmer Visits 9 ARCW Offices Meet with 20 Clients

During the first of many visits to ARCW's nine statewide offices, ARCW Legal Services Program Attorney Christopher Krimmer met with staff and clients in Appleton, Eau Claire, Green Bay, Kenosha, LaCrosse, Milwaukee, Rhinelander, Superior and Wausau.

"Case managers, especially those in rural offices, are enthusiastic about the program's expansion. There is a great opportunity to provide free legal advice on issues such as discrimination, access to benerfits, and estate planning throughout Wisconsin," Krimmer said.

He continues, "The success of the trip revealed the need for frequent one-on-one personal legal access for clients at all ARCW offices. We will also hold legal seminars to discuss legal issues affecting people with HIV/AIDS."

Hate Crime (Yes? No?) Big Issue in Marshfield (Quest editorial comment follows)

Kris A. Schulte, of Stratford, WI, will make an initial appearance in Circuit Court in Marshfield on June 29, 10:30 a.m., to answer an assault and battery charge stemming from a recent incident in which Victor Pilsner, coleader of the area's gay and lesbian organization, is the alleged victim.

The courthouse is located at 604 E. 4th St.; a 10 a.m. meeting prior to the court appearance will be staged at 130 So. Central Ave. (Apt. 3).

According to Pilsner, there is great controversy in the area because the district attorney has not filed a felony hate crime charge against Schulte, and Pilsner and his group are seeking statewide public support on the morning of the court appearance. "Protestors, demonstrators, marchers in support are needed to help wake up Central Wisconsin and the entire state." Pilsner advocates

HD's 95 Reunion. What can I say that hasn't been said again and again. Milwaukee thunder, beautiful bikes, hot men, great parties and great vibes.

Especially rewarding were the few men who came to town thinking they were the only Gay Harley Men in the world. When they stepped into one of our local Gay bars and the bartender would not only greet them, but make sure they were of the Great Lake Harley Riders and the planned activities.

I met for the first time over 20, maybe even 40 Gay Harley men from places like New York, Boston, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, St. Louis, Wyoming, Texas, Florida. Washington, Winnipeg, Minnesota. California, Ohio, Colorado and I am sure elsewhere. Paul from Munich, Germany took the long distant award. All were fine men, kind, caring and full of fun who loved The Ride.

Our community (you) made them feel very welcome. Many were in awe of your generosity and friendliness. You done good and have every right to be proud of your role in the 95th Reunion and Homecoming.

Quite a few of the bikers, after learning I do write this column, asked me to express their deep appreciation for the kindness and generously of you folks. The businesses, their staffs and clientele who made each feel so welcome. They will be back and will tell their friends.

I have also been asked to publicly acknowledge and thank the men who offered the use of their homes to house guests of the Great Lakes Harley Riders. There were many more offers then guests. Your generosity is greatly appre-

Regrettably, one sour incident happened late Friday evening which might have left some wondering if the biker image of the 70's is alive and well.

To those of you who got knocked around when he blind sided me, I hope you don't believe for one minute, he is typical of any Biker, let alone a Gay Biker. The incident made a lot of local and out of town bikers very uncomfortable as I am sure it did you.

The man is a local, but not a Great Lake Harley Rider. He can't be, for he claims (for 10 + years in every Gay bar he's ever seen in) that he is straight

It is important for us to remember, even in this day and age, not all have learned to cope with their "Horrible Secret". That's his term for your (not his) homosexuality.

There but for the grace of God, go I. Thank you, God. I will get into the nitty gritty some other time.

For four days in early June, The Boot Camp Saloon had on display and for sale. two paintings by the artist Robert Uyvari. These 3 X 4 foot renderings feature a muscular fantasy leatherman and a bound (hips up nude) as only Uyvari could do.

The works from the late 70's were new to me, it was good to see then. They were for sale to the highest bidder. Bidding was scheduled to end June 10.
